

READY FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE CONGREGATIONALISTS

Vast Amount of Work Had to Be Accomplished in Preparation for the Meeting of Societies.

TO OCCUPY PULPITS

One Hundred Churches Will Be Turned Over to Visiting Ministers for the Two Sundays.

How many people who attend the great conventions, such as that of the National Council of Congregational Societies in Boston, next week, know anything of the great care, the hard labor, necessary for weeks in advance in order that the meetings shall go smoothly and the delegates depart satisfied?

The average person knows scarcely anything of the numerous executive strings, that, long before, must be properly attached and arranged, that every figure and piece of property in the performance shall fall at the right time into its right place, and the whole proceedings, though of mammoth proportions, shall move with order and harmony.

A separate body of men, appointed for the special purpose, has been made use of for these national Congregational meetings of Oct. 10 to 20. There will probably be about 7000 delegates and visitors, representing not only the National Council of the Congregational Churches, but the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Congregational Home Missionary Society, the American Missionary Association, the Congregational Church Building Society, the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society, the Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief and the Congregational Brotherhood.

Success is largely a matter of subordination. The committee of thirty, with the executive conduct of the big convention in charge, has worked through its sub-committees, each over a particular department, thus adjusting and controlling the business of the convention down to the smallest detail. Frank Gaylord Cook, president of the Boston Congregational Club, is chairman of the main committee, and on him converge all the details which must be systematized to make the great gathering a success.

The idea that opportunity might well be given to the people of Greater Boston to view the many distinguished visiting ministers in local Congregational pulpits involved minute planning that can hardly be appreciated by the audiences who profit by it. The Rev. Jay T. Stocking, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Newtonville, was appointed to take charge of the multifarious arrangements for this local supply. He began by getting into communication with the Congregational ministers of the metropolitan district, and arranged that 100 pulpits should be occupied at the morning service on Oct. 9 and 16, by visiting clergymen, educators and missionaries. From every pastor whose pulpit is to be thus occupied, the Rev. Mr. Stocking had to obtain a distinct statement of the location of his church, the routes by which it is reached, the time of service and so far as possible a copy of the order of service.

To obtain the funds to meet the expenses of the convention letters were sent to the pastors of the churches, who brought the matter before their congregations, each church voting such sum as it was prepared to give. In addition there is a guarantee fund provided by wealthy Congregationalists of Greater Boston to secure the certain meeting in all liabilities. The task of disbursing the expense fund, which includes the hiring of Tremont Temple, Park Street church and Symphony hall, the issue of announcements, hiring of clerks, etc., has been assigned, as chairman of the finance committee, to the Rev. D. W. Waldron, superintendent of the Boston City Missionary Society.

Publicity was necessary. The delegates and friends wished to be informed of every detail in connection with the convention. The general public was also interested and needed assistance in understanding the purposes of the gathering, also the public opportunities for profiting by the addresses. The Rev. George A. Hall is chairman and secretary of the committee on publicity and transportation, under which come excursions, railroad rates, information bureau and press bureau—items quickly named but slowly handled.

The press bureau is a distinct department under the publicity committee, and is in charge of the Rev. Henry J. Kilbourn, pastor of the Mystic Side Congregational church, Everett, and Raymond L. Bridgman, a State House correspondent for several inland papers and special correspondent of the Springfield Republican. Their duty is to obtain in advance, so far as possible, the addresses to be given at the convention from the speakers who number more than 100. These addresses they furnish to the press, with advance statements of vital questions to be considered by the convention. In the convention they will furnish re-

DEDICATION AT EVERETT OF NEW MASONIC TEMPLE

NEWSPAPERS IN BOX

DANA J. FLANDERS, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Massachusetts conducted simple exercises of placing a dedicatory box in the corner-stone of the new Masonic temple of Palestine lodge on Broadway, Everett, at 3 p. m. today. Many prominent members of the order were present.

The box contained Masonic and city documents, coins, newspapers of current date and other articles of interest typical of the period and locality. The ceremony was not strictly in the nature of laying the corner-stone, as the building is well advanced, and it is hoped will be ready for dedication next January.

The new structure will cost, with its furnishings, $30,000, and will be used exclusively for Masonic purposes. It is of red water-struck brick, two stories in height, with concrete foundations. Red birch will form the material for interior decoration. The building is set on a lot fronting 117 feet on Broadway and running back 65 feet. Loring & Phipps of Boston are the architects.

WELLESLEY GIRLS NAME MISS TERRY HEAD OF SENIORS

Class of 1911 of Wellesley college held senior elections today. Miss Katherine Terry of Lynchburg, Virginia, was elected president by an almost unanimous vote. Miss Terry was vice-president of the class in the freshman year and has served in various offices since. At present she is house president of Pomeroy Hall, a position which it will be necessary for her to resign.

The new president is popular and has shown marked ability. Her dramatic talent is well recognized, particularly as the result of her interpretation of the character of Leontes in "The Winter's Tale," given last spring. In field sports, she is active, having won a "W" at hockey. Moreover, she is a good student. The custom is to elect the senior president in the spring of junior year. Miss Mabel Lee was elected for the office at that time, but owing to her inability to return to college this fall it was necessary to hold a second election. Miss Hazel Hunnewell of Chelsea, Mass., the vice-president of the class, has been acting as president.

The other class officers are: Recording secretary, Anna Sener, Lancaster, Pa.; corresponding secretary, Helen Besse Springfield, Mass.; treasurer, Alice Ake, Philadelphia, Pa.; executive committee, Eleanor Vliet, Newark, N. J.; Helen Beagle, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Alice Campson, Buffalo, N. Y.; advisory committee, Mary Welles, Genesee, N. Y.; Helen Goodwin, Exeter, N. H.; factotums, Harriet Stryker, Duluth, Minn.; Catherine Hunter, Duluth, Minn.

The two factotums are very popular with the class, having acted in the above capacity during the four years of college.

MR. WEEKS NAMED FOR OFFICE AGAIN

Congressman John W. Weeks was unanimously re-nominated for a fourth term at the twelfth Congress district Republican convention in Wesleyan hall at noon today. Congressman Weeks' name was presented to the convention by former Mayor George Hutchinson of Newton.

Evan F. Richardson of Millis presided. One hundred and ten delegates were present. Following the convention Congressman Weeks gave a luncheon at Youngs hotel to the 110 delegates who attended the convention.

Mr. Weeks spoke of the work of the monetary commission of which he is a member. He said that although the commission is allowed six years to make its report to Congress, the report will undoubtedly be made in December, 1911. He defined the present-day terms, "reactionary," "progressive," "stand-pat" and "insurgent" as applied to Republican congressmen. He declared that all these adjectives may be applied at times with justice to the true Republican congressmen.

SEPTEMBER FIRE LOSS.
The fire loss of the United States and Canada for September, as compiled by the Journal of Commerce, shows a total of $11,700,000 as compared with $15,043,000 for September, 1909, and $21,431,400 for September, 1908.

DISCREDITED MOUNTAIN CLIMB.
NEW YORK—Prof. Herschel C. Parker, formerly of Columbia University, denounced to the Explorers Club the pretensions of the Lloyd party, which claimed to have climbed Mt. McKinley in April last.

AMERICANS FLEEING TO AVOID HONDURAN ARREST AT AMAPALA

British Among Foreign Residents Requiring Protection, and Both Countries Send Warships to Town.

CRUISER SUMMONED

Washington Authorities Despatch Vessel to Insure United States Subjects Their Freedom.

(By the United Press.)
GUATEMALA CITY. Foreign residents of Amapala, Honduras, are fleeing from the city today to escape persecution at the hands of the commandante, who last night gave orders that the Americans and English be jailed and their property confiscated.

Owing to the anti-foreign feeling, an order of imprisonment is regarded as equivalent to execution.

It is reported that American interests are menaced by the outbreak and that much property of the American colony has already been seized by the commandante.

The British consul at Amapala has escaped to San Salvador, where he cabled his government to despatch a cruiser to protect British interests. The Amapala commandante announced he would burn the city immediately upon the appearance of a British vessel. The commandante had ordered the arrest of the British representative on a charge of fomenting a revolution.

The cruiser Scylla is on its way. A state of anarchy prevails today among the natives and no attempt is made by the authorities to prevent the pillaging of homes of foreigners.

NEW ORLEANS.—A New Orleans trading house today received private advice that Americans in Honduras have appealed to Washington to send a warship to Amapala, which town is under martial law. Honduran hostility is a result of American interference in Central American affairs.

WASHINGTON.—At the request of the state department acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop sent today cable instructions to the commander of the United States gunboat Princeton at Acapulco, Mexico, to leave at once for Amapala, Honduras, to protect American interests. The action was taken at the request of the Honduran government.

According to information obtained here the Governor of the western province of Honduras has threatened to overthrow the government and has further threatened the lives and property of foreign residents in Amapala, in case the government resists.

Requests for aid are said to have been sent to other governments besides the United States and the warships of several nations now at Amapala. The Princeton sails from Acapulco at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT GREETED IN GEORGIA BY GIFFORD PINCHOT

ROME, Ga.—Gifford Pinchot met Colonel Roosevelt here today. Mr. Pinchot was waiting when the colonel left his train at the Berry School grounds. He and the colonel behind a pair of Georgia mules were driven to the school, where the colonel inspected the work of the students and bestowed hearty commendations in a brief speech to the teachers and students. After luncheon at the school, the colonel and his party started in automobiles for Rome.

In Georgia, as in Tennessee and Virginia, the former President has everywhere been welcomed on this trip with the Southern hospitality.

From Rome the colonel planned to go this afternoon to Atlanta, where a truly Roosevelt program has been arranged. On his arrival he will be taken to his hotel by a committee of citizens, who will turn him over to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

A reception and conversation speech at the Auditorium and a reception to the ladies of the "Uncle Remus" Memorial Association at the home of Mrs. Wilson, president of the organization, are to follow in the afternoon.

At 6 o'clock he will have dinner with Mayor Maddox, leaving for the "Uncle Remus" memorial meeting at the Auditorium immediately afterwards. A short speech at the negro church of the Rev. Dr. Proctor and an informal supper at the Capital City Club will round out the evening.

It was at Bristol, just on the Virginia

Earlier Gibraltar Despatch, However, Places the Portuguese Royal Family in Seclusion on Yacht in Harbor There—Proclaimed Exiles by Republicans.

(By the United Press.)
LONDON.—A despatch just received here from Gibraltar says that Dom Manuel sailed from there today for Oporto with the intention of attempting to rally an army to regain his throne. The report lacks confirmation.

GIBRALTAR.—King Manuel and the other members of the Portuguese royal family are aboard the yacht Amelie in the local harbor.

Governor Sir Archibald Hunter has extended an invitation to the exiles to make his home at Europa Point their stopping place as long as they are in Gibraltar.

The royalties have so far remained in almost complete seclusion. Dom Manuel is reported to have said to Governor Hunter, in their interview of Thursday, that he was confident of his eventual return to power. He expressed his belief that the bulk of the army and people were still loyal and intimated that it would be but a short time until he would be able to lead a victorious army against the Republicans.

LISBON.—"The republic of Portugal" formally proclaimed the exile today of King Manuel, Queen Mother Amelie, the Duke of Oporto and Dowager Queen Maria Pia.

The new government continues its active preparations against a resumption of hostilities by the royalists. President Braga declared today that the reports from the provinces, where the monarchial spirit is supposed to be the strongest, gave the utmost encouragement to the new ministry and that there is little

STARTS ST. LOUIS AIR FLIGHT FROM SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Aviator Archie Hoxsey in his Wright biplane started from the fair grounds here for St. Louis, 90 miles away, at 11:59 a. m.

He passed over Chatham at 12:14 p. m. and Auburn at 12:25 o'clock, going 40 miles an hour at a height of 600 feet. He passed Carlinville, 38 miles from Springfield, at 1:02 p. m.

Mr. Hoxsey at the Illinois state fair grounds today won the aeroplane automobile race, the big card of the week. Barney Oldfield, driving a Knox car, failed to cover six miles on the race track in less time than it took Mr. Hoxsey to go five miles. The latter's time for the five miles was 7m. 6½s. Mr. Oldfield's time for the six miles was 7m. 46s.

By winning the race Mr. Hoxsey captured the $150 silver cup offered by a local company. Mr. Oldfield received a smaller cup.

PRESIDENT TO SEE LEADERS OF LABOR

BEVERLY, Mass.—President Taft today went golfing with William K. Boardman of Manchester and John Hays Hammond of Gloucester on the Myopia links at Hamilton. This afternoon the President is to see John Mitchell, former president of the National Federation of Miners, and a number of other labor leaders.

On Sunday the President will meet the Irish envoys, John E. Redmond, Joseph Devlin and Daniel Boyle, all members of Parliament.

Otto Bismarck of New York, who was Republican candidate for mayor of New York in opposition to Mr. Gaynor, also will see the President this afternoon. President Taft found business so pressing that he was obliged to cut short his visit to Myopia. Secretary Norton has gone to New York, where he will attend a political conference with some of the leaders of the party.

DIETZ STILL UNCAPTURED.
WINTER, Wis.—John Dietz and son are still in their cabin, surrounded by deputies. Both are believed to have been wounded as the result of a conflict today.

Congressman McKinlay Says Americans Who Have Manufacturing Plants Abroad Raise Issue Now.

CONDITIONS CHANGE

Californian Is to Explain Move at Length at the Big Ratification Meeting in Tremont Temple.

Congressman Duncan R. McKinlay of California, who is touring the country in the interests of the Republican party and who is to speak this evening at the first Boston Republican ratification meeting, in an interview with a Monitor reporter today said that American importers who have extensive manufacturing plants abroad, employing some of the cheapest labor of the world, are largely responsible for the present hue and cry against the changed tariff and the Republican administration at Washington.

Mr. McKinlay declared that these importers have $500,000,000 invested abroad

DECISION IS LACKING ON NOMINEE TO HEAD DEMOCRATIC TICKET

The committee of four appointed by the Democratic state convention to decide on nominees for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor spent much of its session today in trying to decide on a fifth member of the committee, which is deemed by the members desirable.

Up to a late hour this afternoon no decision had been made. The Bellevue, where the committee first met today, is so near the State House as to be in no slight degree a political center, and soon became too popular a place for the committee to continue its deliberations there with satisfaction to itself, so the members adjourned to the Boston Tavern, where the session was resumed.

The name of Josiah Quincy, proposed on recommendation of Mayor Fitzgerald for fifth member is said to have been rejected on the first vote. The following names were then considered: Daniel T. O'Connell of Boston, brother of Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell; Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River, who was a candidate against James H. Vahey last year for the nomination for Governor, and Prof. Frederick W. Stimson of Dedham, who was chairman of the committee on resolutions at the convention Thursday.

A strong effort is now being made to induce the four present members of the committee to agree on the Hon. John R. Flayer of Worcester as the candidate for Governor, but Mayor Fitzgerald is

TOWN PLANNING EXHIBITION WILL OPEN ON MONDAY

MEDIEVAL MODELS

(Special to The Monitor.) LONDON—With a view to increasing the general interest in the town planning conference arranged by the Royal Institute of British Architects, an exhibition will be held at the Royal Academy, Burlington House, from the 10th to the 22d of October. The honorary secretary, Raymond Unwin, has lately visited the town planning exhibitions at Berlin and Düsseldorf, and has managed to secure over 1000 plans and models of various sorts, as well as many beautiful drawings and sketches. The prefect of the Seine has lent a valuable collection of plans showing the development of Paris since the revolution. The plans of Letchworth, Hampstead, and other garden cities in England will also be shown. The exhibits will therefore include examples of the best town planning work that has been done throughout the world. The conference will deal with the subject from a historical as well as a practical point of view, and the development of town planning will be illustrated by Roman, Greek and medieval examples.

British Military Maneuvers at Aldershot

(Special Correspondence of The Monitor.) ALDERSHOT—The army maneuvers have begun. The red and blue armies are operating against each other over an area of 2500 square miles, the boundary line being where Hampshire and Wiltshire join Dorset and Somerset. Gen. Sir John French, K. C. M. G., G. C. B., G. C. V. O., who has been inspector-general of the forces since 1907, being in control of the operations.

Sir John French commenced his career by joining H. M. S. Britannia in 1866. After four years' service in the royal navy as a naval cadet and midshipman he entered the army, joining the eighth Hussars in 1874. He was subsequently transferred to the nineteenth Hussars, in which regiment he saw considerable service in Egypt. He served in South Africa during the war, being in command of the troops at the battle of Elandsbaagte, and having command of the cavalry in Sir George White's forces at the battle of Rietfontein and at Lombard's Kop. He was also in command of the cavalry division in Lord Roberts' forces throughout the operations which terminated in the capture of Bloemfontein and Pretoria.

Officers from the forces of the overseas dominions have come from Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa to witness the campaign. In addition to the above a number of officers from foreign countries are also present, the following countries being represented: Argentina, Austro-Hungary, Bulgaria, Bolivia, Brazil, Belgium, Chile, China, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Russia, Serbia, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and the United States.

ADOPT PLANS FOR SPILLWAY REGULATING MIRAFLORES LAKE

(Special to The Monitor.) MIRAFLORES, C. Z.—Plans for the spillway which will regulate the water in Miraflores lake between the locks at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores, have been approved. The spillway will consist of a straight concrete dam connecting the east wall of Miraflores locks with the side hill with regulating gates of steel mounted on the crest of the dam. The dam will be 492 feet long on the crest and will contain approximately 75,000 cubic yards of concrete.

Proper control of Miraflores lake involves not only passing the insignificant flow of the tributary streams—Rio Grande, Rio Pedro Miguel, Rio Cocoi and Rio Caimitillo—but the disposal of the large amount of water which would reach the lake from the higher level of Gatun lake through Culebra cut, should an accident permit an unobstructed flow to take place through one of the twin locks at Pedro Miguel.

The spillway consists of approach walls, connecting the dam with the lock on one side and the natural rock hill on the other, the spillway dam and the discharge channel. The spillway dam will be a straight concrete dam with its crest at an elevation of 38.67 feet above mean sea level, 16 feet below the ordinary level of Miraflores lake.

It is proposed to install the machinery for operating the crest gates within a tunnel, running through the dam from end to end, the machines and the tunnel to be like those in Gatun spillway dam, and the water which may seep in, or leak in at the ends, to be drained out on the downstream side. The best location for the controlling device has not been determined but will be left for future study.

It is believed that it will be better to regulate the lake ordinarily by means of the crest gates on the spillway dam, either by opening several gates for only a few inches so as to discharge thin streams, which can do no harm even though they do not adhere to the masonry, or by opening a single gate wide at such intervals and for such lengths of time as may be necessary to hold the lake within the permissible limits. The latter method is perhaps to be preferred as it gives the operators experience in working and caring for their machinery and furnishes an opportunity to examine the upstream faces of the gates.

NAVAL AND MILITARY TOURNAMENT MAY BEGIN NEXT YEAR

(Special to The Monitor.) LONDON—It is proposed to organize a great traveling naval and military tournament on similar lines to that which is held every year in London, but on a much more ambitious scale. The object of the scheme is to make the people of this country and of our overseas dominions familiar with the daily life and actual conditions of service of all ranks in the British army, and to stimulate recruiting. In addition to the usual musical drives, tent-pegging, etc., there will be a representation of life in the sister services for the last half century, with the appropriate equipment. Airship and aeroplane flights under service conditions will form a feature of each day's programme, and the performance will conclude with a spectacle of the "Charge of the Light Brigade."

A permanent camp is to be established at Watford, where the rehearsals will commence early in the new year. All the men engaged will be ex-soldiers or sailors, and they are to receive £2 a week, with free kit, rations, and sleeping accommodation. The tour is to begin on Easter Monday, April 17, 1911, and will extend over three years.

The first public performance will take place at Birmingham, after which the principal provincial towns will be visited. The brigade will then give a display in London prior to embarking for the colonies, when Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and the Indian empire will be visited in turn. When all expenses have been paid, the profits will go to some military charities.

The scheme has been submitted to the war office, and the matter is now under consideration.

WILL BUILD NEW SWISS VILLAGE IN THE ROCKIES

(Special to The Monitor.) VANCOUVER, B. C.—On account of the ever increasing tourist travel to the west, the Canadian Pacific railway is to make extensive alterations and additions to its system of hotels in the mountains, and on the coast, some of which are now under way. It is also proposed to establish a miniature Swiss village near Golden, which will be after the model of the Alpine villages, and will be inhabited by the Swiss guides which the railway company has brought out to pilot tourists in the mountains, or to take charge of climbing parties.

GOVERNMENT PURCHASES LAND

(Special to The Monitor.) WELLINGTON, N. Z.—According to the annual report issued by the land purchase department, 122 properties representing 231,853 acres were offered to the government. Fourteen of these, representing 45,287 acres, were purchased. Since the commencement of the land act £5,407,792 has been paid as purchase money for estates representing 1,238,096 acres.

INCREASE IN EMIGRATION FROM UNITED KINGDOM

(Special to The Monitor.) LONDON—A report has been issued by the Board of Trade showing the number, as well as the nationality of the people who leave or arrive in the United Kingdom for or from places out of Europe in August, and in the eight months ending August, 1910. During August 63,705 persons left the United Kingdom, as compared with 48,724 in the corresponding month of last year. Of these 37,232 were British subjects and 26,473 foreigners, as against 28,535 and 20,189 respectively in August of 1909. Of the 27,601 emigrants to parts of the British empire, 10,532 went to British North America, 4066 to Australia and New Zealand, and 2662 to British South Africa. The United States received 34,389 of the 36,104 emigrants to foreign countries, as compared with 27,888 last August. The total number of emigrants for the eight months is 418,103, a large increase over last year's figures, 304,601. The British empire received 198,324, of whom 146,817 went to British North America, as against 82,286 in the same period in 1909, and 25,154 to Australia and New Zealand, while 219,779 went to foreign countries, 206,379 to the United States, as compared with 164,807.

TO CUT UP LARGE ACREAGE INTO SMALL FARMS

(Special to The Monitor.) VICTORIA, B. C.—A local company has secured from the Esquimalt & Nanaimo railway an option on 35,000 acres of fine timber and agricultural land, which it is intended to develop and open up for settlement of from 20 acres up. This land is made up of almost equal tracts in the Alberni valley, along Englishman's river, and the projected railway branch to Comox. This is said to be a most important land deal in that it will result in systematic development of the agricultural sections of the island.

GOVERNMENT NOT TO APPROVE PLAN

(Special to The Monitor.) VANCOUVER, B. C.—The provincial government has notified the city authorities that it cannot approve the plan, recently ratified by the electorate, to give 61 acres of the False Creek tide flats to the Great Northern railway for terminal purposes. The legal advice obtained by the provisional executive was to the effect that the city must hold this property for municipal use only or must maintain its title to the same, and that it cannot be ceded to the railway company. The course to be taken by the city has not been decided, but it is probable that an appeal will be made to Ottawa to enable the agreement of the city with the railway company to be carried out.

ATLANTIC UNION HOLDS ITS ANNUAL DINNER IN LONDON

(Special to The Monitor.) LONDON—The Atlantic Union has just held its annual dinner at the Criterion restaurant, Piccadilly, with A. W. Mayo Robson, the treasurer of the union, presiding. This society was founded by Sir Walter Besant with the object of enabling visitors to this country from America and the British dominions to become acquainted with English people in their own homes by means of parties, excursions, and various kinds of entertainments, thus bringing all the English-speaking races into closer touch, and allowing the guests to enter into the private lives of their hosts.

The principal toast of the evening, "Our Visitors," was proposed by the secretary, T. D. Hawkin, and, in reply, several members of the company gave their impressions of this country. Mr. Booth (Melbourne) said he was greatly impressed with the homeliness and friendliness of London, an impression which was deepened the more he came in contact with the people in their own houses, owing to the opportunities afforded by the Atlantic Union.

The Rev. A. H. Allen (New Jersey), speaking from 40 years' experience of England, said that he entirely failed to see any signs of decadence in Great Britain.

Mr. Centlores (Cape Town) greatly admired the high standard of political morality in this country, and its parliamentary life.

Professor Fairclough (California) proposed the toast "Success to the Atlantic Union," which was acknowledged by Sir T. Robinson, agent-general for Queensland.

DR. HJORT WILL SPEAK IN LONDON

(Special to The Monitor.) LONDON—The "Michael Sars" expedition, to which reference was made in these columns some time ago, has been engaged in deep sea exploration in the Atlantic. Dr. Hjort, who was associated with Sir John Murray in carrying out the expedition, will, it is rumored, be in London in January next when he will give an account of the doings of the expedition at one of the meetings of the Royal Geographical Society.

(Special to The Monitor.) PARIS—The annual report of the Chamber of Commerce of Lyons gives some interesting information upon the economical and commercial condition of that part of the country and necessarily of the French silk industry. It states that the initiation and versatility of the Lyons business men have enabled them to rise with marked success above the many difficulties which hamper their trade. For instance, last year the silk industry of Lyons was fully successful in meeting the more than usually capricious demands of fashion. To do this the Lyons factories employed an absolutely incredible variety of materials and again exhibited their superiority over all foreign competitors.

Usually her new fabrics are immediately imitated the world over, and so, as is often the case in other inventions, she has hitherto lost much of the profit she was entitled to. Last year her competitors could not keep pace with her versatility, and so she remained mistress of the situation.

Last season's output amounted to 437,000,000 francs in round figures, as against 466,500,000 in 1908; this figure of 437,000,000 is the highest they have ever registered, setting aside the very exceptional year of 1907. Other modern industries, such as the electro-chemical and the electro-metallurgical, for which Lyons has employed so advantageously the natural water powers in the district, have also shown great development.

The general tone of the report implies that Lyons commerce generally has advanced wonderfully in spite of the manner in which it is hampered by restrictive legislation; were it not for this latter the industries of the district would progress by leaps and bounds.

NATIONAL TRACK AND FIELD MEET SHOULD RESULT IN RECORDS

SOME CLOSE RACES

Clubs in every section of the country are sending individual contestants or teams to the national track and field championships, to be held in New Orleans on Oct. 15, and the meet promises to be one of the best in the history of sport. Most of the topnotchers expect to be present and a number of new records are anticipated. According to the best authorities the East is likely to take the lion's share of the titles.

The sprinters are not quite up to the usual average this year. Robert Cloughen of the Irish American A. A., who is picked for the 100-yard race, is a slow 10 second man, and Hamilton of the Chicago A. A., who shares with him the talent's choice, has seldom touched even figures.

At the furlong Cloughen will have to reckon with E. Lukeman of the Montreal A. A., who has signified his intention of starting and who recently defeated the New Yorker in Canada. It is rumored in Gotham though, that R. T. Edwards, New York A. C., the metropolitan quarter mile champion, may also surprise the talent in this event. He has been showing a wonderful burst of speed of late and he is liked best for the 440 yards title.

M. W. Sheppard, I. A. A. A., is the universal selection for the half mile, and only a very few concede a chance to Harry Gissing, N. Y. A. C. Paul, N. Y. A. C., is likewise without serious opposition for the mile run and G. V. Bonhag, I. A. A. A., is so much better at five miles than any other middle distance man in the country that the contention of some Mercury Footers that their representative, Fred Bellars, may lead him home seems totally unwarranted.

J. L. Harfiant, the former Pennsylvania hurdler, is picked by New Yorkers for both the high and the low events. He won them in the metropolitan championships and showed great form. J. Eller, I. A. A. A., Forrest Smithson, Multonmah A. C., and J. Malcomson, Seattle A. C., should be his most dangerous rivals over the low and Smithson and W. Edwards, S. A. C., over the high ones.

L. Scott, Stamford University, is not likely to miss the pole vault title unless something happens. He recently raised the world's record to 12 ft. 10 in., and his nearest opponent, Harry Babcock, N. Y. A. C., can hardly be expected to do better than 12 ft. 3 or 4 in.

There is no picking a winner for the high jump. Half a dozen men, including W. Thomassen, H. J. Grunpfelt and Con Leahy, N. Y. A. C., Harry Porter, I. A. A. A., D. Martin, O. A. C., and E. Erickson, Mott Haven A. C., have been clearing 6 ft. 2 in. pretty consistently, and although the records of one or two are better than this mark they have not equaled them of late.

Platt Adams of the N. Y. A. C. should take the broad jump with ease. Next to him, with equal chances, are F. Irons, C. A. A.; Gish, S. A. C.; D. Ahearn, I. A. A. C., and O. Snedigar, O. A. C. Adams is also favorite, with Ahearn, for the hop-step-and-jump.

In hammer throwing with John Flanagan, I. A. A. A., out of the meet, M. McGrath, N. Y. A. C., should win out.

Ralph Rose, O. A. C., should have things all his own way in shot-putting and the discus-throwing unless M. J. Sheridan changes his decision not to compete. O. Snedigar, O. A. C., looks best for the javelin, throw on past performances, but unless he lives up to his record either Gish or Adams will beat him. Pat McDonald, I. A. A. A., is slightly favorite for the 56-pound weight championship, but both Walsh and McGrath will be very much in the running.

Cross-Country Run Will Be Held at Princeton This Year on Day of Yale-Princeton Game.

NEW YORK—Three new records made last spring were accepted by the executive and advisory committees of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America at a meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Friday night. The performance of Ralph C. Craig of Michigan in winning the final heat of the intercollegiate 220 yard run in 21 1-5s. was put down as a collegiate and intercollegiate mark, where it will be coupled with a like performance by B. J. Wefers of Georgetown in 1896.

The two mile mark of 9m. 26 3-5s. made by T. S. Berna of Cornell was accepted as the collegiate record. It was made in the dual meet with Pennsylvania.

L. J. Talbot of Penn State threw the 16-pound hammer 173 ft. 6 in. in dual games with the Carlisle Indians last May which was accepted as a new collegiate record.

The report of F. B. Ellis, manager of the intercollegiate meet at Philadelphia last spring, was accepted. The profits from the games were $3,587.29, considerably better than the 1908 statement from Philadelphia, but not near as well as the meet did in Cambridge in 1909.

It was decided to start the intercollegiate cross-country run at 11 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 12. The run is to be at Princeton, where on the same day the Yale-Princeton football game will be.

OPPOSES FADS IN WASHINGTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS

WASHINGTON—"Frills are to be cut out. We want to use common sense alone in running the schools of Washington," said W. V. Cox, president of the board of education, today in reply to an announcement, unofficially made, that moving pictures, basketball work and other novelties were to be introduced into the schools.

"We want less nonsense and fancy business," he added. "The schools have been fad-ridden. Every man who has a submarine boat or an aeroplane in our schools."

CORNELL MEETS OBERLIN TODAY

ITHACA, N. Y.—The Cornell football team plays Oberlin College today, and, recalling the stubborn games put up by the visitors in the last three years the coaches ordered secret practise Friday for the purpose of perfecting the men in the new plays. Secret practise and night work at such an early date is something novel for Cornell.

There will be several changes in the Cornell lineup for today's game. Captain Simson, fullback, and Robb, left half-back, will not play. Collins will play fullback, while O'Connor will start at left half back. The Cornell team will consist of Whyte and Pitcher, ends; Munk and Austin, tackles; Champaign and Hale, guards; Seagrave, center; Butler, quarterback; O'Connor and Bates, halfbacks, and Collins, fullback.

HARVARD PLAYS WILLIAMS TODAY

Coaches and Players Expect to Make Much Better Showing This Year Than in 1909 When Score Was 8 to 6

LINEUP FOR TODAY.
HARVARD. WILLIAMS.
Fellows, 10. Smith, 10. Walker, 10. Mason, 10. Perkins, 10. Linder, 10. Fisher, 10. Perry, 10. Wigglesworth, 10. Bohnet, 10. Corbett, 10. Stevens, 10. Frothingham, 10. Prindle, 10. Leslie, 10. Peterson, 10. Referee, J. P. Penderleton, Bowdoin, Umpire, F. W. Burleigh, Exeter, Field Judge, W. R. Okeson, Lehigh, Lineman, S. Tufts, Brown. Time, four 10-minute periods.

Harvard meets Williams this afternoon on Soldier's field in the third game of her 1910 schedule, and while the coaches and players expect that the Williamsstown College eleven will give them a harder contest than did Bowdoin last week, the crimson expects to win by a much larger margin than was the case in 1909, when the final score was 8 to 6 in favor of Harvard.

Williams has a good average team this year, but it can hardly expect to make much of a showing against such a team as the Harvard coaches are now working with. Harvard has made much progress during the past week, especially during the first three days when secret practise was held, and it is expected that several plays will appear today that have been worked up in secret.

The practise work for Friday afternoon was of a little over a half hour's duration, and consisted of the first and second teams lining up against each other. The new plays were tried with the teams walking through their work. No heavy work was attempted, and the whole practise was open to the public in the Stadium. Head Coach Haughton was out on the field for awhile, but soon gave charge of the practise over to John Cutler.

Plans are being made for the erection of a tent shelter for the Harvard players in the field between the wall of the Stadium and the running track. This will form a protection for the men being held for substitution and will do away with running to the locker building between halves.

MISS CAMPBELL BREAKS RECORD

CHICAGO—All the entrants for the women's national golf tournament, scheduled to start Monday at the Homewood Country Club, are practising today on the Homewood course. Miss F. C. Nesbit of Woodstock, Ont., made the best score Friday, turning in a 91, which is within one stroke of the women's record for the course. Among the arrivals were Miss Elkins and Miss Fowles of Pittsburgh, Miss R. H. Barlow, runner-up for the national title last year, and Miss Eleanor Chandler and Mrs. William West of Philadelphia.

Miss Dorothy I. Campbell of Toronto, American and Canadian woman golf champion, showed to those gathered at the Homewood Country Club for next week's national tournament that she is in the running for the national title. Miss Campbell set a new woman's record for the course, making an 89, one stroke under the former mark, held by Mrs. Luther Kennett, formerly Miss Isabella Smith.

MORNINGSTAR GAINS ON HOPPE.

NEW YORK—Tonight's final play between Willie Hoppe, the youthful billiard champion, and Ora Morningstar promises to result in some sensational billiard playing. The score at the end of Friday night's game stood: Hoppe 2000, Morningstar 1895. For the fourth time in succession, Morningstar scored more points than Hoppe, scoring 475 while Hoppe ran 400. On two occasions last night Morningstar was ahead on the week's score. His high runs were 75 and 66, while Hoppe's high runs were 72 and 65. Their score by innings:

Morningstar—4, 57, 2, 75, 66, 0, 18, 1, 3, 10, 0, 0, 41, 0, 11, 15, 17, 55, 37, 1, 17, 3, 457. Average—19-12-24.

Hoppe—5, 5, 11, 22, 3, 5, 17, 0, 1, 10, 0, 0, 10, 28, 72, 14, 45, 0, 2, 37, 22, 6, 55—400. Average—16.

RATIONAL GOLF BY JASON ROGERS

When the ordinary or private golfer goes away for his holiday he is commonly most interested in the clubs that everyone else is using, says Henry Leach in the London Sketch. In these full-of-golf days of his he gives his mind up most completely to the contemplation of clubs and possible improvements in them. He is greatly impressed by some new kind of thing that there is in the bag of a man he meets, and buys one like it; and, what with all this fancying and buying, fashions are established for the season in certain new forms of clubs. I think this is a good thing; because it all helps toward the evolution and improvement of clubs in general; and the just and deserved success of the "Dreadnought" drivers, and of some recent modifications in irons, convinces me that we do not yet know all about clubs and club-making that is worth knowing.

We are hardly ready yet for another big boom in some special kind of driver. Then again the season has been, to some extent, broken up by the queer weather; and the want of sunlight and the excess of moisture has resulted in the state of courses being less abnormal than usual at this time of the year. We have not been getting so much run on the ball as usual, and it is only when we do this, and are driving really much further than we ought to do, that we think of trying to find some new kind of driver that will help us to move the ball on even a few more yards from the tee.

What I have noticed this time is that golfers are certainly using wooden clubs with longer faces than before—this, no doubt, being one of the effects of the "Dreadnought" fashion; and here and there I have encountered men who have become much attached to a new kind of club that Jack White has brought out. It has a stiff shaft and a very long and narrow head, and the face is correspondingly long and rather shallow. The said face is appreciably longer than that of the "Dreadnought"; and whatever may be the driving merits of the club, it is certainly one that inspires much confidence. The men who have become attached to it say that they pull and slice much less now than they did before. At the beginning of the season a vogue seemed to be setting in for a new kind of iron club which is a cross between a mashie and a niblick, and yet is not the ordinary mashie niblick which became popular three or four seasons back, but is rather longer in the face, heavier, and has some other features of its own.

It was not really a new idea, either, for odd specimens of its class have been in use here and there for a long time past; but it was only at the beginning of this season that the variety began to be really popular. Some makers called it the "pitcher"; and J. H. Taylor brought out a modification of the club which he called the "quickstop." It is one of the best things I have tried for making short, high pitches, giving practically no run to the ball; in fact, you can do the same shots with it that you can with the niblick, and at rather longer range.

GRAND JURY FILES REPORT.

YALE EXPECTS HARD CONTEST

Meets Holy Cross on New Haven Gridiron This Afternoon in Fourth Game of 1910 Schedule.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The Yale varsity football team plays its fourth game of the season of 1910 on Yale field this afternoon, having the strong Holy Cross eleven of Worcester as its competitor, and a hard contest is looked for by coaches and players alike. Last year Yale won by a score of 12 to 0, and the coaches will be more than pleased if the blue wins by as good a score today.

Preparatory to the game there was but light work Friday afternoon. The squad had an hour of secret practise with little scrimmaging. As was the case against Tufts, some of the best men will not be used, but will be saved until later games. Captain Daly will not play at halfback. Denning will play in place of Captain Daly and will do the punting. Francis, who did the kicking in the Tufts game, will not be in the game, his place at right tackle, to which he was shifted from halfback, being taken by Paul. Coates will play in place of Kilpatrick and Reilly in place of Bomeister. Field will be replaced by Kistler. Child, who played his first varsity game against Tufts, will start the game today.

William T. Bull, the drop kicker, with J. C. Owsley, Head Coach Coy and his assistant, Harry G. Holt, had charge of the candidates Friday. The practise started with a long signal drill for the varsity, after which Dr. Bull gave some of the likely men points about drop kicking. With the varsity new formations were tried and there was a scrimmage to test them, but there was no scoring, and the second team proved of sufficient strength to satisfy the coaches.

NEWS IN AND AROUND ABOUT THE STATE

FITCHBURG.

The Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association resumed its monthly meetings this week. By invitation many members of the city government were present and some of them took part in the discussion of public improvements. It was announced by the president that the fund of $4000 per annum for three years was practically assured for a permanent secretary. Hereafter the annual "ladies' night" will be independent of any of the regular meetings and will take the form of a banquet and entertainment. It was voted that places of business in town be closed Columbus day, Oct. 12. The subject of a commission from government was discussed by former Mayor James H. McMahon, who gave a thoughtful talk upon the subject.

School Superintendent Joseph G. Edgerly will address the meeting of Worcester county school superintendents at Worcester this afternoon on "School Legislation."

The Y. M. C. A. canvass for funds ends today, the necessary amount of $3140 having been nearly all subscribed by Thursday evening.

HANOVER.

The Woman's Circle of the First Congregational church at Center Hanover will hold its harvest festival in the vestry, Oct. 21.

The field day of the Center Hanover fire department will be held Wednesday. In the afternoon the other fire companies in town will take part and there will be a parade and play-out by the various companies. Athletic sports will follow and in the evening there will be a farmer's supper.

The Rev. W. H. Nobbs of Rhode Island will preach in the Baptist church at North Hanover, Sunday, as a candidate for the pastorate.

DEDHAM.

The Somerset A. C. has chosen: President, Henry Peters; vice-president, Edward Johnstone; treasurer, Harold Weber; secretary, Alfred Baldwin; auditors, William Saunders, Frederick Raush and James O'Neil; board of directors, Hugo Boettcher, James Johnson, James Johnstone, James O'Neil and Edward Johnstone.

The Rev. Frederic Palmer, D.D., rector of Christ church, Andover, will preach in St. Paul's Episcopal church Sunday.

The Democratic town committee has opened headquarters in Daly's block, High street.

A public observation of Columbus day will be held in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening.

SECOND CORPS CADETS OF SALEM TO CELEBRATE

CADET ARMY AT SALEM, MASS.

COL. J. E. SPENCER.

SALEM, Mass.—The observance of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Second Corps Cadets will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 19, and already much interest is shown in the event. There will be a parade and a banquet and the second corps will entertain many military officers of high rank.

Invitations have been sent out and acceptances have come which indicate that 100 or more of the officers of the active militia of the state will take part in the parade, marching in full dress uniforms.

The committee in charge is actively at work and merchants are considering closing their stores in the afternoon of that day. It is more than probable that Governor Draper will be present at the banquet and that he will make a brief speech, and then go to Newburyport to keep a campaign date. President Taft will be invited also.

A feature of the parade will be a platoon of past members of the corps wearing the various uniforms of the body since its organization. The corps has one uniform of each style worn since 1785. These are kept in the Essex Institute on exhibition. They will be donned by the members whom they will fit.

There will be no formality at the banquet, all mingling together with no attempt to keep the organizations separate. The arrangement of the tables will provide for a long one seating 100 persons running north and south on the west side of the drill shed, and some 10 others, seating 60 each, extending at right angles to the head table.

The Cadet band will furnish music in the parade and at the banquet. The Eighth Regiment band will also provide music for the parade. In the parade an honorary guard will be furnished for Governor Draper, consisting of two members each from the active and veteran cadets and the active and veteran infantry. They will march four on either side of the carriage.

Another feature of the celebration will be a souvenir badge which Lieutenant Colonel Spencer is having made and which will be given to each person attending the banquet. They are made of white metal with a silver facing. They consist of the corps' seal in the center of a Maltese cross suspended from a bar which bears the inscription, "One hundred twenty-fifth anniversary, 1910." On the point of the cross in embossed letters are the words "Second Corps Cadets, 1785." While in the center is the corps' seal with knight embossed and the motto of the corps.

Mandarin and Picture Hats

Exquisite hats framing the entire face—they emphasize strongly the newest note in fashions, depending largely on their grace of outline and drooping, gentle curves.

With increasing simplicity comes increasing richness in sumptuous velvet and beaver—the prevailing tones are black, black and white, King's blue, purples, wistarias, etc., in softer effects than in former seasons.

Nothing can be more elegant than these beautiful hats, with their magnificent plumes of ostrich and paradise and their exquisite effects of soft toned roses.

Prices are from

Turbans and Close Fitting Hats

Extremely chic and effective are these new mushroom hats—the quaint Egyptian Fez hats and the Cloche effects as they carry out the lines and effect of the new fall gowns.

Fur beaver, hatter's plush and velvet are the favorite materials, some with touches of Oriental color, others with dull gold or silver. The effect in contour and trimming, with their smart cockades, feather aigrettes or large velvet bows, is particularly stylish.

Prices are 15.00, 20.00 and 25.00

Suits Dresses Coats

Chandler & Co. cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that in all these departments the preparations this season have been on the most lavish scale and the stocks are now at the height of their completeness, quantity and variety.

The assortment of Ladies' Suits includes not only the select models from every high class New York tailor, but also Imported Suits and Coats from Berlin at remarkably reasonable prices.

Plain Tailored Suits

In a wide range of materials, including diagonal and fancy cloths, wide wale worsteds, English mixtures and finest imported broadcloths, in blue and black. Coats in semi-fitted styles—long graceful revers—Skirts in plain gored, also "banded in" effects. Prices 25.00, 35.00, 48.00 to 58.00.

Fancy Tailored Suits

Of broadcloth, heavy serges, worsteds and imported novelty materials. Coats in many instances have collars and cuffs of inlaid velvet or touches of embroidery—many have simple but effective designs of braiding. Prices 35.00, 48.00 to 78.00.

Dress Suits

Of finest quality imported broadcloths, wide wale materials and worsteds. Coats with exceedingly graceful revers braided and embroidered in elaborate designs. Prices 48.00, 55.00, 65.00 to 115.00.

Velour and Corduroy Suits

In Paris and other European cities Corduroy and Velour suits are in demand. Chandler & Co. are showing these suits in attractive styles elaborated with handsome designs in braid trimmings and satin bandings. Prices range from 55.00 to 110.00.

Navy Blue and Black Suits

Of fine imported broadcloths, chevots, English worsteds, wide wale and diagonal cloths. In various styles, including the severely plain tailored effects and the dressier models. Prices 35.00, 45.00 to 78.00.

Broadcloth Suits

In blue, brown, tan and other new street shades, also black—Very effective plain tailored and semi-dress styles. All are made from the finest imported broadcloths. Skirts in the newest plain straight gored and "banded in" effects. Prices 45.00, 55.00 to 78.00.

Theatre and Reception Dresses

Beaded and embroidered chiffon, chiffons and marquises over Persian, cashmere de soie, crepe de chine, beaded laces and nets. Many with exceedingly beautiful garnitures of steel, iridescent porcelain beads and hand embroideries. Prices 40.00, 58.00 to 225.00.

Afternoon Dresses

Cachemere de soie, satin meteor, crepe de chine, chiffons and marquises over plain and colored silks, messalines and peau de cygnes in plain colors. All elaborated with effective use of embroideries and Persian trimmings. Prices 25.00, 38.00 to 75.00.

Street Dresses

French serges, wool crepes, wool etamines, eolienne silks, messalines and crepe de chine—many with beautiful designs in hand embroideries and fine laces at yokes and sleeves. Prices 20.00, 25.00 to 58.00.

Beaded and Chiffon Dresses

From Paris—in pink, ciel, lavender, flame, black and white. Chandler & Co. are showing these very stylish and effective dresses in a large range of models. Some have embroideries and beading to match. Others in contrasting colors. Prices 45.00, 65.00 to 95.00.

Velvet Dresses

In models for afternoon and street wear. One-piece dresses with plain plaited and banded skirts. All are beautifully embroidered in Persian, gold and self colors, some have trimmings of fur. Prices 37.50, 50.00 to 195.00.

RAILROAD HEARINGS EVERY DAY OF WEEK EXCEPT ON HOLIDAY

Many important matters are scheduled for hearing before the state board of railroad commissioners during the coming week, occupying the attention of the board every day of the week except the holiday.

On Monday at 11 a. m. the board will consider the plans of the Boston Elevated Railway Company for its new station at Green street in Jamaica Plain, and at noon the complaint of residents of Concord against excessive whistling on the Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads will be taken up.

Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. the board will hear the petition of the Boston & Worcester street railway company for approval of locations in Natick, and immediately thereafter will go to the rooms of the Boston transit commission to sit with that board in a hearing on the general subject of improved subway and tunnel facilities in Boston, with particular reference to the West End loop proposed for the Cambridge subway and the proposed subway up Boylston street to Copley square.

The question of abolishing grade crossings in Charlestown will come before the board on Thursday at 10:30 a. m., the last Legislature, in chapter 123 of its resolves, having directed the board to "take such measures as may be proper and expedient, by action in the courts or otherwise, to procure the speedy abolition of the grade crossing" in Charlestown, at Main street near Sullivan square.

On Friday at 10:30 a. m. the board will consider a petition of residents of Wilmington and Tewksbury for a change in the location of the Silver Lake station of the Boston & Maine railroad, and will take up chapter 116 of the Resolves of the Legislature of the present year, requesting the board to consider the advisability of requiring railroad corporations to issue monthly tickets at the same rate as quarterly tickets.

Hold Religious Meeting Tomorrow Afternoon at Tremont Temple for Men

J. CAMPBELL WHITE.

Speaker at Sunday's gathering under auspices of united movement by religious societies in Boston.

A meeting for men will be held in Tremont Temple Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock under the auspices of a number of men's religious organizations of Boston and vicinity, which constitute the united men's movement.

Another meeting will be held at the same time and place on Oct. 16. Admission is by ticket.

Tomorrow's meeting will be addressed by J. Campbell White of New York, general secretary of the Layman's Missionary Movement, upon "The Challenge of Christ to Modern Men." There will be music by the Fisk jubilee male quartette. The second meeting will be addressed by Fred B. Smith of New York city, religious work secretary of the international committee of young men's Christian associations.

GREATLY ENLARGED CLASSES BEGIN WORK AT PROSPECT UNION

Prospect Union for men near Central square, Cambridge, threw open its doors for the first classes for the season today.

An unusually large number of men have already applied for membership for this early in the year, making it quite certain that last year's enrolment of 475 will be passed. An informal house warming was held last evening and a large number of people from Cambridge and surrounding towns took advantage of it.

F. W. Mansfield, chief counsel of the American Federation of Labor; Professor Coolidge, president of the corporation, and acting Mayor James were the speakers of the evening and were enthusiastically applauded by prospective members and their families. The history and purpose of the union were briefly told.

HOFFSTOT SEEKS TO AVOID TRIAL

PITTSBURG, Pa.—Frank N. Hoffstot, the steel man indicted on charges of bribery and conspiracy, and Max G. Leslie, delinquent tax collector of Allegheny county, indicted on a charge of conspiracy, presented petitions in quarter sessions court today asking that the indictment against them, returned in the crusade of District Attorney Blakeley against municipal corruption, be quashed on the same grounds given in the petitions of John Bergman and T. F. Wallace, filed yesterday.

CAPTAIN HENRY IS GOING SOUTH.

Capt. David P. Henry, manager of Browning, King & Co.'s store in this city, has handed in his resignation, to take effect Nov. 1, or as soon after as his successor is secured. Captain Henry will then leave for his boyhood home in New Berne, N. C., to look after the affairs of his father. He is well known in Masonic and military circles and was a captain of infantry in the Spanish-American war.

SURVEY OF POLITICS THROUGHOUT NATION TOLD BY TELEGRAPH

NEW YORK—The state convention of the Independence League, which adjourned after nominating John J. Hopper for Governor and William R. Hearst for Lieutenant-Governor at Cooper Union on Wednesday, reconvened last night in Webster hall, at 25 East Eleventh street, and completed a straight ticket without any discussion of fusion.

The complete ticket is as follows: Governor—John J. Hopper.

Lieutenant-Governor—William R. Hearst.

Secretary of state—Dr. Thomas B. Scully.

State engineer—James A. Lee.

Attorney-general—Robert Stewart.

Judges of court of appeals—Reuben R. Lyons and James A. Allen.

The Democratic state campaign will be in full blast on Monday, when the newly elected chairman of the state committee, Winfield A. Huppuch, is to take Mr. Dix's desk at state headquarters, 1 West Thirty-fourth street. Meantime John A. Mason, secretary of the committee, is in charge. Candidate Dix is now at work on his speech of acceptance, which will be delivered at his home next Wednesday.

Michigan Democrats

KALAMAZOO, Mich.—Democrats in the state convention today contested with vigor over platform planks and other details of the gathering made the session a lively one.

When the resolutions committee introduced an uncompleted platform, over which they had struggled for five hours, the delegates still were unwilling to accept it hastily, and a contest over the insertion of an initiative and referendum plank attended with a score of speeches followed. Action on the plank finally was deferred until the next convention and the delegates scrambled for late trains.

The platform as adopted denounces the Payne tariff bill and arraigns the Republican congressmen of Michigan for their acceptance of it. It demands bi-partisan state boards and commissions as a protection against scandals such as were recently exposed in the state. The placing of all state employees under civil service was recommended and the candidacy of Lawton T. Hemans for Governor and John T. Winship for United States senator was lauded.

FAIL TO CHOOSE CANDIDATE.

The committee appointed by the recent Massachusetts Democratic state convention to select a candidate for Governor, has thus far failed to make any choice. Names under consideration are those of William A. Gaston, John C. Crosby, James H. Vahey, Eugene N. Foss, Charles S. Hamlin and Joseph H. O'Neil.

BRITISH INDIAN SEES EFFECTS OF CULTURE

The visitor is president of the Sadharan Brahmo Samaj, and principal of Calcutta City College. He has come to Boston to lecture on the theistic church of India.

Mr. Maitra will remain until the end of October and will accept invitations to speak, whenever possible, in the interest of his cause. He is living at 114 West Newton street. Mr. Maitra speaks English perfectly.

"Cooperation between the West and the East, for the intellectual, social and political regeneration of India is what the great body of my people desire," said Mr. Maitra. "The outrages committed have been regarded with abhorrence and denounced by the educated portion of the people, who are in favor of friendly cooperation. We want to make progress by means of constitutional agitation."

Mr. Maitra expressed strong disapproval of the importance given in the west to material comforts and love of luxurious living. These traits are being developed, he says, among those of the east who have received western education. The east excels in temperance, he declared, and in this respect occupies a unique position. The mass of the people are total abstainers and temperance and plain living are two great lessons that the east has had for the west. Mr. Maitra is a great admirer of Emerson.

On political matters Mr. Maitra was loath to speak beyond his utterances in England, which appeared in the Manchester Guardian. "What I have to say of the political situation in India, I must say directly to the English. I do not want the political situation to interfere in my work here in behalf of the Brahmo Samaj." His interview in the Guardian contained the following striking analysis of the situation in India: "The common statement as to a chronic discontent is entirely unfounded. This is proved by the outburst of fervent loyalty to British rule during the days of Lord Ripon."

"I think the present reform scheme does not do any real good. I am sorry to say the people are losing faith in constitutional agitation, and a feeling of despair prevails."

"There is no attempt on the part of the officials to realize the feelings of the people. They do not understand the people. There are plenty of men, even among the illiterate, who would come forward as representatives of the people."

A Superb and Fascinating Display of New Fall Silks and Dress Goods

This is a Gathering of the Choicest Weaves and the Rarest of Colorings—the Like of Which Was Never Seen in New England Before

Goods by the yard were among the first merchandise placed upon our floors when we started in business 59 years ago—you might say the reputation we bear for excellence in our wares was first earned by our yard goods—and we have kept the quality and assortment up ever since, until today it is doubtful if there is a finer or more exclusive showing of dress materials anywhere in this country than that which is now displayed

On the Street Floor—Main Store

This is the only house in Boston which sends two buyers abroad every year for the sole purpose of buying silks and dress goods. Each devotes his whole time to the purchase of his one line, which naturally results in one end—the finest display and the most moderate prices in high quality goods.

MR. SHERMAN AND MR. LORIMER WILL ATTEND BANQUET

CHICAGO—Vice-President Sherman and United States Senator Lorimer have accepted invitations to sit at the same banquet board in Chicago Oct. 12, when local Knights of Columbus will celebrate Columbus day.

The dinner will be in the gold room of the Congress hotel, where the Hamilton Club dinner took place several weeks ago and Theodore Roosevelt declined to attend until the club's invitation to Senator Lorimer had been withdrawn.

"There is a popular demand in India for education. Educated opinion has often asked for free and compulsory primary education, and asked in vain. There are large numbers of poor people who want to be educated, but there is not the opportunity. It is for the government to say why."

To remedy existing evils Mr. Maitra recommends a rearrangement of finances, additional taxation if necessary, laid upon the wealthier classes, who should be given control of the educational systems, and a cutting down of the expenditure on the civil service, public works and military.

Mr. Maitra will speak before the Boston Association of Ministers Monday afternoon; Wednesday at 6 p. m. before the Boston Unitarian Club, at the Vendome; Thursday, in the evening, before the Cosmopolitan Club of Harvard; Oct. 23 he will preach at morning service at the Unitarian church, Jamaica Plain, and Oct. 26 he will speak in the First Congregational church, Quincy, at the annual meeting of the Norfolk conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches.

CONFER HIGH GRADE UPON A CLASS OF 34 IN MASONIC TEMPLE

More than 300 members of Boston Lafayette lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree, A. A. S. R., were on hand Friday night in the temple, where the first convocation of the administration of Curtis Guild, Jr., 33 degrees, T. P., grand master, was held. The fourteenth degree was conferred in full ceremonial under the direction of the master assisted by John J. Van Valkenburg, D. M.; Oscar Storer, S. W.; Melvin M. Johnson, J. W., and David T. Montague, orator, assisted by the complete staff. There were 34 aspirants.

Of the active members of the supreme council, 33d degree, there were present Leon M. Abbott, deputy for Massachusetts, Charles T. Gallagher and Daniel W. Lawrence. The heads of the other Scottish Rite bodies in the temple who attended were: Edward S. Benedict, 32 degrees, commander-in-chief of Massachusetts consistory; Joseph T. Paul, 32 degrees, M. W. master of Mt. Olivet chapter of Rose Croix, and Benjamin Taft, 32 degrees, sovereign prince of Giles F. Yates council, P. of J.

The honorary list of the supreme council was represented by Albert L. Richardson, Eugene A. Holton, Benjamin W. Rowell, Theodore H. Emmons, J. Albert Blake, James S. Blake, Joseph W. Work, Thomas Kellough, Everett C. Benton, George H. Allen, the Rev. Stephen H. Roblin, Moses C. Plummer, Horace W. Stickney, Charles A. Estey, H. Bentley Young, James M. Gleason, George

BOYS CLUB TAKES STEPS IN TAUNTON TO BUILD A HOME

TAUNTON, Mass.—The Taunton Boys Club, which was formed in this city nine years ago, has taken steps to build a home of its own.

A large lot has been purchased and plans have been drawn for the structure which is to be erected. It is the intention of the directors to begin a campaign this fall to endeavor to raise the necessary funds to complete the building. A large sum has already been secured by nine years of soliciting, but as the new quarters will be a great help to the community, the directors expect no trouble in securing funds. Several substantial pledges have already been made towards the fund.

The building now occupied by the club is utterly inadequate and great advantages will be derived from the new structure, which will be specially adapted for the members' use.

The exterior of the proposed building will be plain, but the interior will be highly finished and fully equipped. Those in charge of the work are: President, George W. Barrows; vice-president, Col. Peter F. Coor; secretary, Mayor William S. Woods; treasurer, J. F. Barden, Jr.; directors, William E. Walker, president of the Weir Stove Company; William H. Reed, editor of the Daily Gazette; Edwin A. Tetlow, city clerk; John J. Barker and William E. Dunbar.

OCEAN STEAMERS DUE ON TUESDAY

Two wireless reports today from big ocean liners bound for Boston, show that both will reach port Tuesday.

The Leyland line steamship Devonian, Captain Trant, is expected to berth at 7 o'clock, with 68 saloon passengers, from Liverpool. W. H. Harrison, the assistant manager of the Leyland line at Liverpool, is a passenger.

The Allan liner Numidian, Captain Moar, will probably berth early in the day also. She is bringing 238 cabin and 160 steerage passengers from Glasgow and Moville.

Playgrounds Aim to Make Beneficial Enjoyment a Habit

BAMBERGER PARK RECREATION CENTER, DAYTON, O.

Here are provisions for indoor and outdoor activities, for children and grown persons, and the place is an ornament to the center of the city, in which it is located.

Different Stages of Child Activity, With Their Special Requirements, Met by Recreation Centers.

JUVENILE PROBLEMS

By Everett B. Mero.

Playgrounds and public recreation facilities aim to make a habit of beneficial enjoyment. By planting the idea as a juvenile habit, the boys and girls will carry it on into life. This is a theory back of the playground movement. To adopt it practically there is a general division of children into three sections according to natural requirements and inclinations.

The first age period runs until about the sixth birthday. Simple games, play and first attempts at self-expression are the usual natural activities. Here come the sand piles, mud pies and dirt building creations.

The next period covers the time until the twelfth or fifteenth birthday. Activity is the trade mark of this age. Destructiveness is noticeable; the desire to tear things to pieces to find out what is inside. Boys begin to take interest in adventure stories and start toward a realization that some day they will grow up into men and be able to do the things grown up folks prevent them from doing. It is the function of the playground to provide activities in variety so that the natural instincts may be properly guided. Gymnastics and athletics are important helps, for girls as well as boys. Each form of activity assists in using up the vast amount of energy that a normal boy or girl ought to have during these formative years.

But it is the third age-period that real trouble of the problem grows complex. The average parent describes the boys, and girls too, as mischievous. The average normal boy joins baseball, basketball and football teams, if he can. If he can and does, then the chances of his being mixed up with a "gang" for mischief or law-breaking are much reduced. If he does not have such opportunities presented in ways that look promising to him, then he may be found on the street corners. It is a function of playgrounds and recreation centers to find bait so attractive as to catch the boy of this age and show him glimpses of more useful and equally enjoyable activities. The girl of this age is a problem quite as much as is the boy, but of a different variety. He is now starting to become a man; she is starting to become a woman. A playground offers aid to her as well as to him.

This division of young people according to ages, for playground purposes, finds some dissenters. They prefer to classify according to size—according to growth and development. This is especially useful in districts having children of various foreign stock. An Italian boy of 10 may be the mental and physical equal of a boy of 12 or 14 years from colonial American ancestry. But for the purposes of this article it is sufficient to know that there are certain well defined assortments of activities provided for children to whom they are especially suitable, for educational and recreative purposes.

At this time, from the age of about 16 to 20, the coming citizen begins to realize that he has a relation to the rest of humanity. He begins to cultivate, consciously or unconsciously, the faculty of citizenship, helped or hindered according to his surroundings and according to the help given him. Equally so the girl begins to tend toward those interests that belong to normal womanhood. This is it plain that somebody must be in charge of a playground if it is to provide the strengthening aid needed by these developing future citizens.

As no playground will run itself successfully for any length of time, a supervisor or some trained person of the right caliber is as necessary as the land, and even more important than the equipment. A competent man or woman can make a playground with a piece of land and a lamp post, says one who has had the experience. Children often make playgrounds from a pile of bricks. Nevertheless ample equipment is an essential fundamental.

An unsupervised playground is worse than none at all, by as much as it is given backing by official maintenance. It strengthens the conviction of some that freedom means license to do as they please, regardless of anybody else. An important function of the person directing playground activities is to see that all get a fair show. To interfere with free play or to create an atmosphere of restraint is certainly not a part of a playground teacher's duty.

As we come to realize that playgrounds are—or should be—recreation centers—centers for the recreative needs of the communities in which they are located—then we can more easily understand why such institutions deserve and receive municipal support. As factors in the present day tendencies to provide inducements for people to use more freely the open air and to be active out of doors, such institutions are especially useful.

The true function of a municipal recreation center is to be a stimulus to the activities of its section quite as much as a place inside which such things may be carried on. This means that the administrative policy back of the whole scheme must be fundamentally sound and in harmony with the needs of the people within its territory. It means that supervision or direction is the key to such successful results as will meet the approval of the people and the officials endeavoring to serve.

More than games and exercises are necessary. It is well to devote much thought and careful preparation to carrying out plans that will make each institution a center for various forms of interesting and beneficial occupation aside from play, games, athletics or gymnastics. Where this policy is followed intelligently, results have been satisfactory. Special attention to the social side is one way of attaining this end.

Playgrounds and recreation centers may be used as points of departure, as inspiration headquarters, for features that extend throughout the community. Buffalo playground directors have organized walking trips for boys and camping trips for girls. Swimming parties are popular. In Chicago there is an interesting feature known as the Saturday afternoon walks, fathered by a group of people who volunteered to undertake this method for furthering outdoor life and an appreciation of the natural beauty around the city. This work is not conducted in connection with any recreation center but is closely related to the purposes of those institutions. It is mainly for people employed in offices, engaged in professions or otherwise prevented from enjoying outdoor recreation except outside of working hours.

In the vicinity of practically every town and city there are inviting sections of woodland, hills, mountains or water, as well as fields, that can be easily reached without much expenditure of time or money. Public parks offer possibilities along this line which may afford relief from city life and may add variety to town or country life at all seasons of the year. The Chicago method includes Saturday walks to various outlying points of interest, the excursionists cooperating in the small expense. Holiday trips sometimes cover a full day and occasionally there are week-end trips of two or three days.

The growing belief that public schools can do more for pupils if a definite portion of school time is spent outdoors finds in the playgrounds a ready ally. Children may be effectively educated while playing and indulging in other occupation quite as well as while engaged with books indoors, provided equally competent instruction guides the work. The popularity of the boy scout movement contains a hint of another line of usefulness for playgrounds and other places of public recreation.

Interest in public playgrounds has grown to emphatically world-wide proportions within a few years, and the great benefit of these institutions is universally recognized. The Christian Science Monitor has had prepared a series of five articles dealing with different phases of the playground question, the second of which appears today.

In a modern playground as a rallying point for neighborhood interests, there is room for teaching from actual experience laws of right living. There big brothers and sisters may cultivate desirable social relationship. Fathers and mothers may become better neighbors and more worthy citizens of city, state and country. The same rule applies to all affairs of life.

A playground is, of course, for the benefit of children, and their needs must have primary consideration. But playgrounds as a whole should not be altogether for children. There should be adequate provision for those beyond the age of childhood. One of the defects with such public parks and fields as are open to sports like baseball, football and others is that they are used almost exclusively for the big boys and young men. As a rule the children get no chance, unless special sections are set aside for their sole accommodation. A playground supported by a town or city ought to be made valuable for all the people; at least for all the people in the neighborhood in which it is located. If all classes cannot be provided for in one recreation center, there should be two or more. In some cases this has been accomplished by having a playground for small children attached to a schoolhouse where it does duty both in and out of school hours, and a larger playground for the older boys' ball games and athletics. However, an adequate recreation center with ample grounds and buildings, properly equipped and rightly administered is preferable.

A public playground should be as much for all the people who want to use it as should be a public park, or, according to present day views, a schoolhouse. The arrangement of grounds and buildings to meet this conception of public service is an important point to insure their proper use and to prevent various activities from conflicting. A building of some sort is needed on every playground, mainly for a playing place for children, a shelter and resting place, or to store equipment; but it ought to contain a gymnasium, shower baths and lockers, perhaps a branch library if the neighborhood is not otherwise supplied, a hall for public meetings and social purposes, and other conveniences according to local needs.

Where the playground borders on pond, lake, river or ocean aquatic activities are always enjoyed, swimming under instruction being one form. In some cities periodic public festivals are features. They help arouse local interest, provide social pleasure to those who might never find the playground at other times, and offer a focal point for the season's program.

Putting a playground into a community that does not possess one is a project worthy of careful preparation. If it is to be a worthy recreation center, nothing less than a careful investigation of needs and conditions will serve the purpose. One of the first things necessary is a taking account of stock by people who can recognize and classify what they find. Then should come an adequate, far-sighted plan in outline to cover the needs discovered. The plan need not be carried out at once, but it can be outlined to be worked out as money, needs of the people and other practical considerations make feasible. Chicago acted along this line in part and is still progressing. Philadelphia has a plan, made after a year's careful study, which is calculated to meet the wants of that community for years to come. Furthermore, it has created, as nearly as present laws will permit, a special department in its municipal government, to carry out the primary features of the plan immediately. This marks a point of advance as plainly as did the creation of Chicago's $10,000,000 group of South Parks recreation centers, or the remarkable popular vote in favor of similar provision for 40 towns and cities of Massachusetts.

HUNNEWELL CLUB IN NEWTON PROVIDES MANY ATTRACTIONS

THE HUNNEWELL CLUB AT NEWTON.

Organization Possesses Building and Has 250 Resident Members, While Waiting List Shows Its Popularity.

BOWLING A FEATURE

ONE of the most attractive social organizations in Boston's suburbs is the Hunnewell Club of Newton.

The building, a magnificent structure, both inside and out, is situated at Eldridge and Church streets in Newton proper.

There are to date 250 resident members and 15 non-resident members. The ever-present waiting list shows the popularity of the institution. It is, in the truest sense of the word, a neighborhood club, and one of its most unique features is the "neighborhood night" held once a month, when the families attend and enjoy informal dancing and entertainments.

Two tennis courts are the only form of outdoor recreation facilities connected with the club. These receive daily the best of care, keeping them in the prime of condition all the time. Throughout the summer these are largely patronized, especially by the younger members.

The Newton Bowling League, comprising eight clubs, was conceived and started by the Hunnewell Club, which since the league started has proved one of the most active members, always being represented by a strong team of bowlers.

One of the greatest features of the club is its bowling alleys. There are five which could not be excelled by any alleys in the country. They have recently been equipped with the new pin spotters.

During the club season the bowling alleys receive much attention. Every Saturday night bowling tournaments for the men are held, and the women also have their tournaments weekly.

Other features on the club's calendar are concerts given by professional talent once a month, ladies' matinee bridge, mixed bowling matches, dances and numerous other special forms of enjoyment.

The card room on the second floor is attractive, as is the billiard and pool room which extends the entire length of the building on the ground floor. All rooms have immense open fireplaces which are a great attraction in the winter months.

The Hunnewell Club was formed in 1895 in a dwelling house on Hunnewell hill by a few residents of that locality and its membership restricted entirely to that vicinity. Its principle of temperance has been strictly adhered to. This feature has been the means of bringing into the club many members who heretofore had been unknown to club circles.

In March, each year, the club gives its annual amateur theatricals. They are participated in by club members and given in the ballroom which has a modernly equipped stage.

The present officers of the club are:

PHONE WORKERS HEAR RATE TALKS

Boston Plant Chapter of the Telephone Employees Association held its first meeting of the season Friday evening at the American house with about 250 people present, including guests from Portland, Brockton and Lawrence.

The evening was devoted to a lucid explanation of the new telephone rates by W. B. Northrop and Edward Shattuck, special agents of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Further opposition to the new scale of rates came Friday from Dedham and Medford, a unanimous vote being taken by the Men's Club of the Methodist church in Dedham that the new rates were detrimental to Dedham users' interests.

AEROPLANE READY FOR FLIGHT.

AUBURN, Cal.—Ivan H. Parker, president of the Gilmore Airship Company, has announced that the aeroplane of the company which is now being built at Grass valley will make its initial flight in three or four weeks. The aeroplane weighs about 2400 pounds, and is operated by a 15-horsepower engine, and will carry four passengers.

WORLD PETROLEUM TRADE IS STAKE FOR RIVAL OIL COMBINES

NEW YORK—The Times today prints the following cable from London:

"Keen interest is taken in London in the great war which has begun between the Standard Oil Company and the Shell Trading and Transport Company for the control of the world's petroleum trade."

"While the Standard's capital is given as $300,000,000, the Shell Company, of which Sir Marcus Samuel is chairman, and its allied concerns are said to represent a capital of $200,000,000."

"The Shell Company is quite confident of its ability to beat the American trust and is already attacking the Standard on the latter's own ground by sending large consignments of oil to the United States."

"Since the battle began the price of petrol in this country has gone down seven cents a gallon."

"A Berlin despatch to the London Daily Mail says the Standard Oil Company dominates the German market, and the only effect of rate cutting would be to strengthen the American hold upon it."

UNIVERSITY GETS $200,000.

Again---About ORIENTAL RUGS

CHAPTER 2

We believe truth is more attractive than misrepresentation.

For this reason we have consistently refused to weave tales around our Oriental rugs and then attach fictitious values to them.

If you are an admirer of Oriental rugs you will be interested in the following announcement:

Recently we had an opportunity to purchase a lot of fine rugs at low prices. The sizes ranged from 3 to 5 feet in width by 4 to 10 feet in length. We accepted the offer and marked some of the rugs $25, some $35 and others $50. Many rug houses would charge double what we ask for them.

Now, we haven't told you a romantic tale about this lot of rugs, so you will not have to pay for that part of it. All we charge for is actual rug value.

Rugs sent home on approval. Charge accounts solicited.

Oh, by the way! we happen to have some sample rugs from Japan at $1 and $1.25 each that will please you if you want something with which to make a noise.

SWEDEN AWARDS U. S. SHIP SUBSIDY

WASHINGTON—A Norwegian-American steamship line has been established at Christiania to maintain a tri-weekly service from Christiania and Bergen to New York, beginning next March, according to United States Consul Walter C. Hamm, at Hull, England.

Another line is projected to operate between Swedish ports and New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, the Swedish government having granted a loan of $500,000 toward the necessary capital. It is said an annual subsidy of $30,000 will be added.

EVERETT TO HAVE MORE FACTORIES

Coincident with the announcement of the census figures showing a gain of 36.4 per cent in population in Everett comes the announcement from the Everett Board of Trade that as soon as plans can be prepared and contracts awarded, several mercantile buildings of the latest type for manufacturing purposes are to be erected by it to be leased to persons who may desire them.

There has been a heavy demand for manufacturing property in Everett in the last 18 months and the demand is constantly increasing. Several petitions have been received by the officers of the Board of Trade urging them to erect factory buildings and as a result a considerable sum has been subscribed and a stock corporation formed for the purpose of erecting such buildings, which will be leased under favorable conditions. The Everett city government and board of assessors are to cooperate with the Board of Trade in developing the property.

BILLBOARD CAMPAIGN TAKES STEP FROM EUROPE

SLOWLY but surely the agitation against the billboard is making headway. It is not a local matter; cities all over the United States, wherever there are influences making for good taste and refinement and love of beauty, have taken the question in hand, to good purpose; until it may now fairly be claimed that American municipalities can see for the future that subjugation of the florid, the ugly, the coarse, the ultra-conspicuous types of signs that have been so admirably thrust out by the best-governed cities of Europe.

The movement so far as Massachusetts is concerned may be said to center in the Massachusetts Civic League, although numerous business men's organizations and women's clubs are lending their aid and influence. All help of organized bodies is welcome, for, as Edward T. Hartman, secretary of the league, said in discussing the situation this week, "any effort to preserve the natural beauties of the state and the architectural features of a town from the defacement of the billboard, must be backed by the sentiment of the people before adequate progress can be made; but arouse public opinion and sooner or later it is bound to win."

That is why the league in its work to eliminate the billboard is giving a great deal of its time to what it calls educational campaign. While the public at large is offended by the glaring advertisements that stare at them from buildings and tall fences in city streets and deface the natural beauties of the country and grandeur of the scenery wherever one may go, it is not awake to the extent of the defacement, nor its own responsibility in the matter, or enough so to take adequate measures to prevent it. In Massachusetts a vigorous campaign is being carried on, largely in connection with the work of the league, and many cities elsewhere in New England or in the middle and far West, are also taking measures to save themselves from the encroachments of the bill poster.

Massachusetts' interest is just now centering in a measure to come up before the highway commission this month. Under the title of "Relative to Defacing Natural Scenery," a bill was introduced into the last Legislature to repeal the last sentence of chapter 208, section 115, revised laws of Massachusetts. This, if done, will allow the highway commission, mayors and selectmen, to permit signs of any kind within the public highways and to punish by a fine of $500 or imprisonment, any one who destroys such a sign. The hearing is set for Oct. 26, at 2:30 p. m. Those opposed to the repeal are urged to notify the commission before that date. The bill is the outcome of a dispute between a hotel keeper and garage owner in Stockbridge, who had removed the signs from the official signposts and substituted their own, and citizens of the place who in turn tore down these private announcements.

Action not dissimilar to this has been taken in different parts of the state. Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, whose summer home is at Mattapoisett, wrote to all firms advertising on billboards, asking them to remove their signs. All but one acceded. Advertisements painted on fences and rocks she herself removed by hiring a painter to go about with his pail and brush and paint the legends out with some neutral color.

In Blandford, Mass., a committee of citizens remove all such signs erected or painted in their town or about it. The determination of Congressman Gillette, as contained in a letter to the press, not to use any commodity advertised in this way has been an incentive in many parts of the country. The Mountain Society of Montclair, N. J., has been making it known to merchants that such advertising is objectionable to its members, stating that if the stores wish the society members' trade and that of their families the advertising must be done in a different way.

Women of a small town in the West, stirred to keep it free from such defacements, asked the grocers of that place to remove roadside signs regarding a certain cereal. The grocers laughed at them. Thereupon no more cereal of that particular brand was bought at any store. When next the agent for that line of groceries came for his regular order he found his previous delivery standing practically untouched upon the shelves. The lesson was forceful and effective.

The Hon. John W. Peck, chairman of the legislative committee, Business Men's Club of Cincinnati, O., says there is only one phase of the billboard nuisance that is really open to discussion, and that is the legal. "It is one of the strange anomalies of our modern civilization that we spend annually millions of dollars in the beautification of our cities by the development of our parks, the construction of boulevards, the cultivation of trees, flowers and shrubbery, the erection of statues and fountains and otherwise," he says, "and yet we permit the beautifying effects of all this painstaking expenditure to be to a great extent offset by the cheapest and commonest of disfigurements, the billboard."

The campaign conducted by this club has culminated in the adoption of a code of regulations embraced in the building ordinance of the city.

New York won a recent victory when it succeeded in prohibiting a certain line of buses operating in Fifth avenue from plastering the outside of their vehicles with advertising signs in the manner that is in vogue in London.

The court rendered a decision that they had secured their rights for transportation, not for advertising. Chicago, Buffalo, N. Y., Cleveland, O., Hartford, Conn., St. Louis, Mo., other cities and many states are waging war upon the billboard, devoting their efforts not to its abolition but to its regulation. Size, material, conditions of placement so that no board will afford a hiding place for criminals or fire risk, and the character of the legend all come in for strict supervision.

The great need, so Mr. Hartman thinks, is for the people who are opposed to the billboard to manifest this opposition in a substantial way, taking a positive and active stand against this kind of advertising instead of leaving it for somebody else to do, on the plea that one does not count. It is the ones added together that make the thousands.

The most conspicuous results in the direction of billboard elimination have probably been achieved by Germany. The city of Berlin positively will not allow billboards, as Americans know them. The city recognizes the value of street advertising and does not prohibit it. But the city decrees such regulation as to make the advertising blend with the architecture of the city. At the edge of the sidewalks and at the principal street intersections are neat pillars or columns in iron and wood. The interior is used by the city for storing implements used for the display of any ordinance or act pertaining to the government or welfare of the people. The remainder is rented to advertisers. Every advertisement must comply with certain regulations, which include neatness and beauty of appearance.

Even the signs on business houses are restricted. A building is allowed to advertise its own business only and this must not be done brazenly, but in a neat and dignified way. Other cities of Germany have similar regulations. The pillars vary in style. One has a mechanical arrangement by which one advertisement is shown after another, making possible the display of many more than could be shown on a stationary surface. These signs are frequently consulted by the people and seem to meet all the needs.

APPROVE DESIGN FOR POSTAL BOND

WASHINGTON—The treasury department has finally approved a design for the new $20 postal savings bonds, and the result is the smallest bond ever issued by the government. The design is simple as to type, ornamental features and the border.

The 20-year postal savings bond, including the 40 semi-annual interest coupons, is no larger than the ordinary registered bond of the United States and not much larger than the ordinary greenback or national bank note.

It is shaped to be easily adaptable to fit in the ordinary safe deposit box without folding.

Open Letter States That It Will Follow Only Competent, Fearless and Honest Leadership.

EXPOSE CIVIC EVILS

HAZLETON, Pa.—The Power City Good Government Club, an organization aiming to promote the ends of clean politics and efficient public service, an organization which has been in existence about three months and which is expected soon to have a membership of 500, has challenged the attention of politicians in this vicinity by making public its objects and program in a letter given to the press.

The young men at the head of the movement have jolted the politicians on several occasions, and from the fact that the latter have been unable to get on the inside thus far to learn of the exact objects, the announcement came as a big surprise.

Ira Mann, of this city, financial secretary of the club, is the candidate of the Keystone party for representative from the first Luzerne district.

The open letter, addressed to the citizens of Hazleton, follows:

"The Power City Good Government Club has been organized to put forth such effort as it may for the general good of the community. It hopes to avoid personalities and selfishness in all of its contests; it elects to grow in membership and in value of service strictly upon principle.

"We have not build without a full knowledge of opposition and ridicule at the hands of individuals; of false imputation and unjust criticism from partisans; of bold and deliberate plotting at dissension within our ranks by gangsters; of cunning methods to thwart our aims by sinister politicians. All of this we anticipate, and then some.

"Nevertheless, we are planning our work, and propose to carry it out as best we can, regardless of every disparagement now foreseen or which may develop hereafter.

"We are determined that every citizen shall be well informed upon all important questions in which this club may take issue and upon which you shall have a voice through the medium of the ballot—a ballot which our ideal shall hold to be conscientious, honest, fairly counted and justly recorded.

"Our aims will be made known from time to time through the medium of pamphlets and through the columns of the public press. At present we are perfecting organization in every ward of the city, which have direct representation in the management of the club's affairs. Every member of the club has equal voice in the election of its officers and equal opportunity to labor for the ends to be attained.

"What is everybody's business is apparently nobody's business, but what ever tends to contribute toward the general uplifting and upbuilding of the community will be our business. We will usurp no power except leadership in every movement we may inaugurate, and will concede that right to others who may seek our cooperation.

"We will recognize no boss, neither without nor within our ranks, but we will follow competent, fearless and honest leadership for the city's advancement.

"We will refuse to support for public office any candidate who shall attempt to purchase the club's influence and will publicly expose his efforts at corruption.

"We will commend the actions and uphold the hands of every worthy official. We will endeavor to expose tools and grafters."

PRINCETON MEN GIVE SYRIAN DOOR MODEL TO BERLIN MUSEUM

PRINCETON, N. J.—A replica of the cast of the portal of the great temple of Baal Shamin at Siah, belonging to the collection of casts made by the Princeton archaeological expedition to Syria of 1904-5, has just been completed and is now being boxed for shipment to the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin.

The original of this doorway is in a ruined condition at the site of what is now known as Siah, in the mountains of the Hauran in the ancient Roman province of Arabia. The portal formed the entrance to a colonaded court in front of the temple of Baal Shamin, which was the most important religious building in the upper part of the ancient kingdom of the Nabataeans. It was built in 37 B. C., while this part of the Nabataean kingdom was closely in touch with the kingdom of Herod the Great, just about 100 years before the Nabataean kingdom became part of the Roman empire.

The gateway was in a state of ruin when found by the Princeton expedition. Some of the most important parts

INSTALL F. O. WATTS OF NASHVILLE, TENN., BANKERS' PRESIDENT

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank of Nashville, Tenn., was elected president of the American Bankers Association on Friday.

William Livingstone, president of the Dime Savings Bank of Detroit, was elected first vice-president.

Elections closed the final session of the convention. Invitations for the convention in 1911 were presented from New Orleans, Atlantic City, San Antonio, Richmond, Va., Niagara Falls and St. Louis, but the selection was left to the executive council. A decision will not be reached until the council meets in New York next May.

The convention indorsed a plan to hold an exposition in 1915, in commemoration of the opening of the Panama canal, but no indorsement of a site was made.

A resolution asking Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to defray the cost of transporting silver free of charge in the United States was adopted.

Retiring President Pierson received a handsome pin and a solid silver service from members of the association.

At the meeting of the executive council, Charles L. Huttig of St. Louis was chosen chairman and Fred L. Farnsworth of New York was reelected general secretary of the American Bankers Association.

Senator Theodore F. Burton of Ohio, a member of the monetary commission, gave an address on currency.

It were in place, but all the upper parts with their rich carved decorations were lying in a heap outside the gate, just as they had fallen. Paper impressions like papier mache were made by members of the expedition of each part standing or fallen and these, when cast in plaster, were set up like so many building blocks, making a complete reconstruction of the original.

The Berlin museum already possesses copies of the other casts of Syrian architecture, the original impressions of which are to be seen either in the Art museum or in the south stack of the library, where for several years two men have been engaged in making plaster casts from the paper models brought from Syria and Arabia.

Recently the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut ordered a full collection of these casts of Syrian architecture from the Princeton collection. Although the original buildings from which these casts were made are situated not more than 300 miles from Beirut, they are so difficult to reach on account of being in the desert that the Syrian college found it easier to have the casts sent thousands of miles than to make them on the spot.

RAISE $17,500,000 FOR PANAMA FAIR AT SAN FRANCISCO

A. G. Spalding Tells About Plans People of California Have Made for the Exposition in 1915.

NEW YORK—A. G. Spalding, who is a candidate in California for the United States Senate, arrived in New York on Friday. He said the people of the state already have raised $17,500,000 for the Panama exhibition, which is to be held in San Francisco in 1915 to celebrate the opening of the canal. No financial assistance is to be asked from the federal government, Mr. Spalding said, but it is expected Congress will give its official sanction and extend an invitation to all foreign countries to take part.

The exhibition, he said, would be one of the greatest ever held, and sports will be among the features. With that end in view the suggestion was made when Mr. Spalding was in Chicago on his way East that the national baseball commission schedule some of the games of the world's series of that year at the fair, and thereby give thousands who would otherwise never have such an opportunity again a chance to see major league teams play.

Mr. Spalding also suggested that the Amateur Athletic Union hold its annual championships at the exposition in 1915, as they have been held at previous world's fairs—in Chicago in 1893, at the Pan-American in Buffalo in 1901, in St. Louis in 1904 and in Seattle in 1909.

SOCIETY MAN AS MECHANIC.

GREENWICH, Conn.—O. B. Carrott, secretary of the Greenwich Casino Club, and a leader in social life in Bellehaven, is working in the shops of a motor company as a mechanic. Mr. Carrott is the son-in-law of A. W. Greene, president of the National Biscuit Company. He became interested in the motor company from the fact that 20 per cent dividends had been paid to stockholders the last year, and before he invests in stock, which he has obtained an option, he wants to satisfy himself as to conditions.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Los Angeles county, in the districts outside incorporated cities, is spending about $500,000 annually for the maintenance of roads, according to figures just compiled in the office of the county auditor.

COLORADO STATIONS TO GET DATA ON RIO GRANDE WATERSHED

DENVER—Seven hydrographic stations have been established on the Rio Grande river and its tributaries in Colorado by State Engineer C. W. Comstock for gathering data to oppose the federal government, which is trying to prevent the establishment of additional reservoirs on the watershed of the Rio Grande in Colorado.

The hydrographic stations of the state are: On the Rio Grande river—one at 30-mile bridge; one at Watson, near Creede; one six miles above Del Norte; one near the Colorado-New Mexico boundary line. On Clear creek, 20 miles from Creede. On the Conejos river, near Antonito. On the Saguache river, near Saguache. On the San Luis river, near Villa Grove.

The men in charge of the stations are making seepage measurements and gathering all data which may be of value to the state. The principal object is to determine how much water flows in the Rio Grande and its tributaries. Residents of the San Luis valley claim the right to the use of all water in the streams. The United States has a treaty with Mexico which provides that a certain quantity shall flow into Mexico by way of the Rio Grande.

PLAN TO EXCHANGE GOOD LITERATURE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An official announcement was made by the state department of information received from the Berlin embassy concerning the recent establishment of the Amerika Institut in Berlin.

It is proposed that the institution become the medium of exchange for publications dealing with "educational and academic, literary and esthetic, technical, intellectual and moral" questions in the two countries. The necessary funds for its maintenance come from the Emperor and gifts by Mr. Koppel of Berlin and James S. Speyer of New York.

When providing towels for the guest-room use them until they have been laundered several times and have lost some of that uncomfortable stiffness which many of us remember to have experienced when visiting.

To Have Winter Blooms

To have geraniums in bloom in winter pinch off all the flower buds until the first of December, and water thoroughly once a week, only giving a little water between times if there seems to be need of it.

Directions for Making French Folds

TO MAKE a milliner's or French fold, cut the material three times the width that the fold is to be when it is finished. Then fold a third of this width back on the wrong side, and fold down over this raw edge the remaining part. Turn in the raw edge before doing this. Finally, slipstitch this edge to the thickness underneath, being careful not to let the stitches go all the way through.

To make a double fold of this sort, cut the material again, three times the width of the fold when finished. Make a wide, plain fold, and then fold this through the center, with the stitches all on the upper edge. Place the upper fold so that it forms a cord or ridge through the center, and slipstitch this so as to hold it firmly in place. Be sure that all your stitches are out of sight.

MODES IN BRIEF

VERY wide velvet ribbons have a vogue for hat trimmings, scarfs and sashes.

Facings of bright satin, silk or velvet are popular on the white or black dresses in Paris.

Black and white striped silk is an effective trimming for suits of the fashionable new ochre shade.

Byron and Dutch collars continue in favor. Jabots are especially popular in the lady varieties.

Tosca net, black plaided with threads in Scotch colors and designs will be much used in dressy waists.

Belts of leather, kid, braid, etc., are to be worn with the new waists; patent leather seems the present leader.

Ruffles of the dress gowns, seven or eight inches wide and only just full enough to prevent "hooping," are favored again.

In dressy gowns it is thought that the high or Empire waistline will again be popular since some of the latest modes show that tendency.

The beauty of new black and white costumes lies in the transparency of the black, so that it seems not so much a trimming as a shadow.

Black Note in Fashions

The black note is emphasized even more than ever in Paris this season, and many times black fur is used to produce this distinctive touch. Silky black fur is used as a trimming for cloth tailored costumes. Sometimes it forms merely the deep sailor collar and the buttons of the coat, and then again it is introduced as a deep band at the bottom of the skirt, and also forms a narrow trimming band where the very much double-breasted coat fastens.

Black fox is another very popular fur, and ermine will be used both with and without its black spots.

Demi-Tailored Suits

The tailored suit with the separate waist will be worn very generally in Paris through the autumn and winter. The skirt or silk waist, however, with the chiffon blouse covering, is now only used with the plainer tailored suits. The demi-tailored costumes require something more elaborate in the way of a waist—a waist, for instance, with yoke and cuffs of creamy lace or beaded chiffon. These waists are frequently a combination of satin, chiffon and lace; the girdle being a soft crushed one made high.

Fish-line Picture Cord

Fish-line for picture cords was used with much satisfaction in a college girl's room, where every picture had to be hung from the molding. Fish-line is strong, inconspicuous, and hangs straight than wire when attached to small pictures.

FASHIONS AND

GIRL'S POLITENESS AN ASSET

An aid to her and her employer in business.

POLITENESS is a business asset at the command of every girl who must earn her own living," says the Woman's Home Companion.

"She may not be as expert with the typewriter, the sewing machine or the drafting tools as her fellow-worker, but she can always hold her own when it comes to courtesy. She may not be able to wear as smart tailored suits and blouses as the girl at the next desk, but she can be just as polite, or more so. She may lack the strong personality which is such a factor in scoring business success, but if she will cultivate politeness the much coveted personality will develop.

"You can say 'good morning' to the elevator starter or the elevator operator in a way that will make him say to a chum after you pass, 'There goes a lady, a real lady.'

"You can say 'good morning' to your employer in a way that will make him realize that you are a credit to his establishment, a womanly girl, not a human machine whose sole office is to turn out so many circulars a day.

"You can say 'good morning' and 'thank you' and 'please' as you go through your day's work to the fresh young bookkeeper, to the tired young file clerk, to the irritable caller, to the man in search of a job, in the same simple, unaffected, sincere way, until politeness becomes a habit, and the drudgery of earning your own living is transformed into the joy of independence, and those among whom you work look for your coming with pleasure, which, after all, is one of the rewards of living. We all love appreciation, and politeness wins appreciation as the sun draws flowers from the earth."

College Woman as a Home Maker

THE housekeeper may be pardoned if she considers her obligation as discharged when she succeeds in skillful manipulation of the things of the household; but the home-maker knows that a large part of her responsibility lies not in the realm of inanimate objects, but in that of very animate human beings, says Mary E. Wooley, president of Mt. Holyoke College, in the Ladies Home Journal.

Sometimes in the question, "What is the college doing to prepare for the home?" the questioner not only implies, but also asks directly whether it is offering courses in cooking, marketing, sewing, house decoration, with an inflection which indicates that unless its curriculum does include these courses it is a failure as far as the home is concerned. That the home and the mother may have some responsibility for the training of the daughter before she enters or after she leaves college seems not to occur to these critics.

Many colleges give courses in food values, sanitation, physiology, etc., which have direct bearing upon home problems; few provide opportunities for lessons in cooking, marketing, sewing, nursing, and so forth. The inclusion of these would mean the exclusion of many subjects which seem to me a more important preparation for home-making in the large sense than the direct teaching of household arts. The training in method and system, in the power of thinking and in mental discipline, which means quickness of acquisition and of application, makes the college graduate a ready learner of household as well as of other lessons.

DEFENSE OF WOMAN'S LOVE OF DRESS

THE real defense for women in their growing love of dress seems to us to be this, that dress is a recreation, one of those natural recreations which grow out of necessity and out of everlasting emotions. It is nothing, after a recreation that the frivolous girl suffer from overindulgence in it, or the frivolous poor from that craving for it which has its roots in privation.

The love of dress among women—especially, we think, in its modern manifestation, which emphasizes variety—makes, we believe, for social balance. The disappearance of all remnant of class costume is a great reform. At the same time, by cultivating their instinct for the pretty and the useless, women build unconsciously a great rampart of admiration against the devastating spirits of envy and utilitarianism.

Dress is a recreation shared by a whole sex—a strong bond of sympathy, and at the same time one of the forces which render the little ebullience of unnatural feeling which we have dignified by the name of sex hatred wholly ridiculous. For if we go to the root of the matter, the reason women love to wear a variety of fine clothes is because men love to see them wearing them, and the reason men tend more and more to a uniform is because women in their heart of hearts care less than men do for appearances, are less influenced by them and have a quicker appreciation of those charms over which fashion and finery have no effect.—London Spectator.

CHIC COSTUME

A SMART costume is here illustrated in pastel green R & S silk and wool poplin (reproduced from L'Art de la Mode). The deep hem is of chunly lace, embroidered in green silk and gold thread. An upright extension from the hem clasps the drapery of the upper part of the skirt and is defined by embroidered green satin buttons. The narrow under hem is of green satin. The revers are of chunly lace and disclose a surprise vest of white chiffon; chiffon is also used for the undersleeves. Above the high-draped girdle of poplin is a band of green satin, ending in a large bow in front.

Visiting Cards Are a Bit Smaller

TO possess always visiting cards of correct size and quality requires close observation, for so slight is the difference from season to season, that a woman who is indifferent to such matters, may easily continue to use the same she ordered three or four years ago. This fall, for example, visiting cards have undergone a trifling change and are the merest shade smaller than those of last winter. This difference is noticeable in men's cards, which have shrunk about one half an inch in width. At present they are a fraction under three inches and one and one half inches wide. Anything larger than that for a man should be avoided.

Cards for married women are almost square, being three by two inches. Pastebards bearing the names of both Mr. and Mrs. are half an inch larger each way, the proportion remaining the same. Since cards as thin as a piece of writing paper were carried several years ago, the quality has slowly but steadily grown heavier, until now it is of appreciable thickness, without being actually stiff. It is pasteboard, however, and not bits of paper.

Old-fashioned script has been superseded by old English and block. The two styles now in vogue are more expensive than the script, and English costs a little more than block.

An address of some kind should always be in the lower left hand corner, save when the day also is used. In the latter case the address should be placed in the right corner, the other being used for the day.

Parcel in Cloth Wrapper

A cloth wrapper for parcels is an excellent thing when the package is to go a long distance and stands a chance of having a paper wrapper torn before reaching its destination. Unbleached muslin is a good covering. It should be made in the form of a bag. Write the address in pen and ink, slip in the parcel and sew up the open end with strong thread, in an overcast stitch.

Stylish Combination

Dark blue and green is the most fashionable color combination. There are heavy cloths with blue and green threads woven closely together, and dark blue fabrics with fine hair-line stripes of green.

WIFE AND DO

Housekeeper of to

IT was not so very long ago that economy in household arrangements meant "pinch." I know how to cook and to sew and to keep house clean was about all that was required of a woman to earn for her the designation of "good housekeeper." Thrift was a word applied to but few, and was supposed to bring with it a train of discomfort.

All this is changed today. To say that housewife is skilled in domestic economy is give her praise. It says by implication that household is conducted along intelligent lines; it is not merely the supply of the table and the of the rooms to which she sees, but that every dollar and every penny even is spent—bringing largest returns of comfort and pleasure. It is that this same thought rules all the activities over which she has control—that the work is planned as to require the least time and is possible for thoroughness. It follows, then, a natural sequence that the home which is managed with the most intelligent economy has the maximum of comfort consistent with income expenditure.

It is usually the woman who does the buying for the entire household. She does the market purchases the clothes, and though she may literally pay the rent or taxes it is upon selection that the valuation of these depends. It is upon her, too, as a rule, that rests the word as to the character or every-day expenses which the household shall give forth after strict necessities have been met. All these things

Dainty Menus for Little Afternoon Teas

THE debutante who does not make a for how to society, but receives with her mother during the winter is often at a loss for dainty menus for these little teas. Here are a few for her:

Sandwiches of chopped nuts, olives and cheese are delicious with tea, while for the olate drinkers dainty sandwiches of caviar minced chicken should be prepared.

Stuffed olives and lettuce chopped and mixed with mayonnaise are also a delectable dainty while little cakes, bonbons, salted nuts, and dates and cheese balls in little dishes make lightful tidbits.

If a more substantial repast is to be served creamed oysters with rolled bread and sandwiches and a salad are very nice, while if three girls receive with you a dinner and then party usually follows the tea, to which you men may be asked.

Too elaborate menus are in bad taste for afternoon tea, but everything should be exquisite and a profusion of flowers used about rooms.—Philadelphia Times.

Remodeling Skirts

Gored skirts can be made over with small differently shaped gores; while plaited skirts retain the side plaits from waist to hem, have the front and back plaits pressed out recut into flat gores or sections. As there great deal of flat banding or braiding used season, the seams, which by force of circumstances, lack of material, for instance, come prominence, may be skillfully concealed by bias bandings stitched on to the goods in a tailored fashion. Insets of contrasting material may be set into skirts and the contrasting material used also for the long lapels and cuffs of the coat.

Pockets for Fancy Work

To keep white fancy work clean while in course of its putting together, some young women are making for themselves white and blue aprons furnished with four deep pockets for simply turning up the lower edge to the required depth and edging it with wide braid. Such pockets may be placed the materials for cloths to be bordered with lace or crocheted, of there are many beautiful patterns, including rose design not unlike that seen in genuine crocheted.

Lace Can Be Saved

A good muslin petticoat rarely wears out the top as quickly as does its ruffle. When the edge of the embroidery frays off in an even edge, hem on the narrowst mer of a machine and add a ruffle of torrell lace.

An expert on the machine can hem and lace at the same time. The lace should be ruffled, but held in enough to prevent puckering.

Soft Petticoats

Satin petticoats sometimes cling uncomfortably but a well gored taffeta glaze of narrow pations, and finished with two or three tiny gaffills cut on the bias, is admirable, and does impede the wearer or yet set out the dress up. Even the cotton petticoat is denuded of its its trimming, and if it has a deep flounce it not at all full, and the trimming is quite flat.

Mending Hint

When a glove edge is torn or ripped, but hole it with fine cotton thread of the same using a very small-sized needle. Then whip buttonhole edging together. Even kid gloves be mended in this way so that they will any amount of wear, as the cotton does not the glove.

To Clean Knives

Knife cleaning may be made easier by a piece of raw potato in the scouring man rubbing with that instead of a cloth. The of the potato is not only a good cleaner self, but it keeps the scouring paste moist.

enter into every purchase and the outlay of each dollar.

An effect of the intelligent application of economy to domestic affairs is to raise it from the depth of drudgery to which it may have fallen to the level of any allied business in the world. It broadens both the scope of work and the outlook of the woman who is at the helm, making her former at some points of vital interest to the welfare of humanity. She is not, therefore, bounded by confining walls, but has all the world before her, demanding her attention and study. There is no possibility of monotony. Farming, raising, fisheries, manufacture, politics, national, state and local affairs, society, art—all enter into the immediate concerns of the home and should have the serious attention of the homemaker. Many matters not evident on the surface, such as conditions of production, humanitarian and otherwise, should be considered by every woman in the conduct of her household affairs in order to bring out the best results both for her family and the world at large.

Thus it is seen that the woman who is awake to her privileges and opportunities as a homemaker does not think of her sphere as narrow or limited, but as embracing the whole social realm. As she pursues her way she will find it unfolding before her in ever broadening interest. She will learn to look upon it as a continuous education and opportunity for doing good to her neighbor, her standards growing higher in accord with the advancement of mankind.

Southern Hearth Broom—You Can Make

HAVE you a fireplace that you like to keep nicely brushed up, or any other little corner that needs occasional dusting? A hearth brush is a very easy thing to have and an attractive addition to the furniture of any fireplace, colonial or modern.

Go or send to some broom factory for a handful of the longest broomcorn stalks. You may get them nearly three feet long, but 20 inches two feet will be plenty long enough, and 10 stalks will cover the price. Take as many as you can grasp in one hand, say a bundle as thick as your wrist and soak the stems in water for an hour. Hot water is best. This will make them shrink a little, but will make them far softer and easier to work with.

Now take ordinary brown binder or wrapping twine, the rougher the better, make a slipknot around the bundle below the middle, holding the twine uppermost and the broom end on the ground, and wind tightly, as tightly as you can all the twine, making a collar of twine about an inch long. The ends can be secured by sewing them into the stems with a mattress needle or rusting them through with a hairpin. Make another collar like it about halfway up and a third two or three inches from the butt end of the stems, and your broom is done and ready for use as soon as dry. And you will have a real southern hearth broom, practically indestructible.

Facing Skirts

The facing of a skirt may be pieced a number of times, but should be cut the exact shape of the lower edge of the skirt. It should be fitted to the right side of the skirt to the required depth, edge stitched, turned to the wrong side, and pinned or stitched to position. The braid is sewed on the under side of the hem, hemmed on the edge, and fastened with a sort of running stitch to the lower edge. If the facing is left open one point a stiff card may be slipped between the facing and the skirt; if the sewing is done over a card, which is slipped along as the sewer progresses, there will be no fear of picking the stitches through to the other side.

Theater for Women

Gertrude Kingston has completed in London a theater for women. She has made a study of the needs of women in the theater and has made every provision she believes will be required in such a playhouse. She has given special attention to the cloakrooms, providing extra large lockers, where the biggest hats and the most elaborate wraps may be stored. Another novelty is a receptacle by each seat for gloves, opera glasses, chocolates, handkerchiefs and such things as a woman may wish to take to the theater, but which she has been compelled to hold during the performance.

To Make Hand Tucks

When hand tucks are to be used on children's dresses they should be carefully made, and the tuck kept perfectly straight to use as a guide to the others. The best way to do this is to use one thread, not pull it out, but sufficiently w it to show the straight line, and crease the tuck in this line. After the width of the tuck in the space between each is decided, use a tuck card as a measure for all the other tucks.

Costly Slippers

Street shoes of calfskin and even of patent leather will be severely tailored made with plain-lined seams, and with only the smallest eyelets. The evening slippers and pumps will be elaborate as the individual taste and purse will warrant. They will be made of velvet, satin, kid, suede, and will be decorated with fancy roses of ribbon, tulle or flowers.

Moss for Millinery

A field of industry that was opened in Jamaica about 25 years ago now promises to become of international importance, says the Brooklyn Eagle. At present it is employing several hundreds of men, women and children. It is the raising of a peculiar sea moss and the manufacturing of it into millinery decorations.

TWELVE-ROOM HOUSE FOR A CITY LOT.

Estimated cost, $6500. Hardwood floors throughout. Floor of main piazza laid with cement tile.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

THIS house is designed by Architect Charles S. Sedgwick for a city lot. It is commodious, having all the accommodations and conveniences of a strictly up-to-date house. The size is 34 feet in width by 56 feet in depth, exclusive of piazzas. It is designed to be of frame construction throughout, thoroughly well built and of best materials, using heavy studs for the outside walls and good-sized timbers, and all of the construction first class in every respect.

The first floor is elevated four feet above the grade and the stories nine feet six inches and eight feet six inches in the clear, with the basement eight feet. The entrance is at the left-hand side, with a reception-room and music-room in front, with living-room and dining-room back, the four rooms opening together en-suite, with wide sliding doors. At the rear of dining-room and living-room is a crossway hall, with side entrance, large coat closet and toilet-room. At the rear is the kitchen, with butler's pantry and china closet, also a rear stairs leading from basement to third story. The rooms are large in size and well lighted.

There is one main chimney with large fireplace in the living-room and rear chimney, with kitchen range and laundry directly below with drying-room in connection. The second story has four large front chambers and two small rear chambers, connected with sliding doors for children. All rooms are provided with ample closets, and there is one large bathroom. In the front of the basement is a large amusement-room, connected directly with the main floor by the main stairway. The attic story is finished with rooms for servants, storerooms, storage, etc.

The finish of the first story is hardwood, and the second story is in natural pine and the floors throughout hardwood. The estimated cost of this house is $6500. It is colonial in style, having good detail, with pilasters on the outer angles and the house covered with narrow siding. The floor of the main piazza is laid with cement tile.

THE needleworker will welcome the new and attractive materials which have been brought out this year for the working of such articles as pillowslips, table-covers, centerpieces and boudoir sets.

One of these is an ecru fabric, closely resembling rep, but cross ribbed with a much finer cord. The ground is the color of unbleached linen, but it has irregular lengthwise stripes of a darker ecru shade.

Another material is apparently rather loosely woven, but is kept firm by the arrangement of the cross threads in a honeycomb weave. Still a third has a slightly irregular plain weave.

Soft white canvas cloth in a basket weave is another novelty, and so is brown linen for the purposes of embroidery.

All of these materials may be had plain or stamped in various designs at any notion or fancy work shop, and offer endless possibilities for the larger and freer forms of embroidery.

SECRET OF RIGHT WALL PAPER

Have a roll sent to try its effect.

THE treatment of walls is a subject of never-ending delight, so many things enter into it to make each problem an individual one. I once heard a woman say that she could never select a wall paper because, although she liked it at first, by the time it was hung she could not bear it. And it is not very difficult to see why she failed. She made the mistake which so many people do make, of selecting a paper without taking the time to consider the room in which it was to be used.

When a room needs papering a woman's first impulse is to go to a shop and select something suitable. In nine cases out of ten she will trust, in making her choice, to the variety of patterns shown her there. Probably, no idea of what might be appropriate has entered her mind. By the time five books have been run through she is so bewildered by combinations of color and design that she is quite unable to make a selection. Finally, after having spent two hours in the place, she decides on one.

On the way home she begins to wonder if she has made a good selection; she tries to convince herself that she has, but is secretly preparing herself for a disappointment. When the paper is hung, the room does not look at all as she expected that it would; but as long as it is up she feels that she must endure it. She thinks of Mrs. Brown, whose house from top to bottom is attractive and harmonious; she asks Mrs. Brown how in the world she accomplished so impossible a task. "Why, I always know just what I want before I ever enter a store," is the response; "if I do not find it in one place I go to another. I think any one can form a pretty good idea of what would look well in a certain room if one will stop long enough to think about it. Sometimes I change my mind if I chance to see something especially good, but I never have a room papered without having a roll of paper sent up to try. How can any one tell whether the rug or the hangings will harmonize unless one actually brings them together?"

And herein is Mrs. Brown wise beyond the ordinary, and would earn the approval of the author of "The Woman Who Spends"; for to buy carefully what is beautiful or necessary, and what one really wants, is to stand distinct from the average woman, who all too frequently allows herself to be persuaded to buy what is advised by a clerk, instead of controlling the situation by a mind already made up—Ladies Home Journal.

TRIED RECIPES

VENISON PUFFS.

Shave the desired quantity of cold venison into very thin, small slices. Mix thick gravy with a little currant jelly. Roll puff paste very thin. Cut into square pieces and in each piece put enough of the meat to fill. Make them into light puffs. Place all in a bakepan and brush each puff with the white of an egg. Bake in a quick oven.

RICE AND MUSHROOM CROQUETTES.

Peel and cut one half of a pound of mushrooms into small pieces; add two tablespoonsful of butter and simmer, covered, for half an hour. Add one half of a cupful of well washed rice, one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion, one half of a teaspoonful of salt, one quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper and one pint of water, and simmer until rice is tender. More water may be added if necessary to keep from burning. When done stir in two well beaten eggs, take quickly from the fire, add one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley and put away until cold and firm. Form into small croquettes, dip each into slightly beaten egg, roll in fine bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat.

NEW ENGLAND TEA CAKE.

Scald two cups of milk and add one quarter cup of butter. Beat four eggs and put into the milk when it becomes lukewarm. Add two tablespoons of sugar, one level teaspoon of salt and one half cake of yeast, dissolved in two tablespoons of lukewarm water. Put four cups of sifted flour in a bowl and pour in the liquids. Work smoothly together and beat hard for five minutes; cover and let rise. Stir down and pour into a buttered pan and let rise again until nearly twice the original size. Bake in a moderate oven for three quarters of an hour.

SQUASH SOUFFLE.

Press dry cooked squash through a sieve and to one cupful add one tablespoonful of soft butter, one fourth cupful of milk, the yolks of two eggs and seasoning to taste. When thoroughly mixed, fold in the stiffly beaten whites, turn into a buttered ramequin, set in a pan of hot water and bake in the oven until the center is firm. Serve with a cream sauce made with one tablespoonful of flour mixed smooth in one tablespoonful of hot butter and one cupful of hot milk or cream added gradually, with seasoning of salt, pepper, celery salt and mace; cook for five minutes in a double boiler.

RICE SOUFFLE.

Boil half a cup of rice in one quart of boiling salted water for 15 or 20 minutes and drain it, then cook the rice in a pint of milk in a double boiler for 10 minutes; add the yolks of four eggs beaten with four tablespoonsful of powdered sugar and one tablespoonful of butter, cook for five minutes and let cool; flavor with lemon or vanilla. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and fold in lightly, and bake in a buttered dish for 30 minutes.

Flowing Draperies

Flowing draperies if they can be adjusted at the back and arranged so that a long court train is the effect, are predicted for the early winter. The high line of the belt adds to the regal splendor of the sweeping train. No one can deny the graceful beauty of this style for evening.

Lace Theater Cap

The lace frill for evening is established, says a Paris writer. Sometimes it is a facing for the huge hat, and as an evolution the entire theater cap of lace is worn. This remains on the head during the play; for you must remember that our prefect of police has prohibited the eclipsing of an entire performance by the chapeau of the woman on the front row.

Charming Bridal Gift Is Luncheon Set

A CHARMING gift for the bride consists of an embroidered luncheon set, including the hemstitched cloth and napkins, while another member of the family could add the buffet scarf to match. The cloth should be two yards square, with a two-inch hemstitched hem.

A soft, firm linen will be best to select with a rather simple design of flowers, scrolls and leaves in each corner. The work may be all solid or a combination of solid and eyelet embroidery, with the flower centers filled with French knots.

The napkins to match are made 20 by 20 inches, with an inch wide hem. The embroidery is used only in one corner and the napkins are folded square. The buffet scarf measures 24 by 54 inches, with the embroidery on both ends, and on both edges in the center. The sides and ends are hemstitched to match the luncheon set.

Winter Garden Table

A table for a winter garden will make the house attractive later and be easier to care for than rows of plants on shelves in the windows. A plain table of poplar or pine, about four feet long and two wide, is a good pattern. Have the top drop in about six inches, and have it lined with zinc, with a small waste-pipe in one corner. The table may be stained or painted, and should be on casters, so that it may be readily moved from one window to another. When the pots are placed on it they may be watered easily. A bucket should be set under the waste-pipe to catch the water until all of it has been drained off.—Ladies Home Journal.

Status of Nationality in Light Opera

French and English comedy schools of opera temporary. Certain works of the old buffo school permanent.

INTERESTING operas, every one of them; but gone by; altogether past revival.

People want to read the history of the stage in books, if anywhere.

They do not want to read it on the stage itself. The better the operas of Offenbach and Sullivan were in their time, the worse for them now.

Classics of the library, not of the theater, they may use up a few weeks in a conservatory course in the nineteenth century composers, but they cannot be accorded much of our valuable time in the playhouse.

Musical vitality is an inexplicable thing. The analyst who could tell wherein one composer has it and another has not would solve the most troublesome problem in criticism.

And were this problem solved, opera impresarios would be lightened of the heaviest burden they have to carry, that of deciding what the public will like and what it will reject.

The question is entirely one of the present moment, one with which the past has nothing to do. Is this music vital today? we ask.

Take down from the shelf—and the shelf is wide—any opera of Offenbach or Sullivan; take it with you to the window end of the alcove and set your imagination to work staging the drama, putting the singers through their parts and bidding the flutes, horns and violins to heed their cues, and the trombones and drums not to play too loud.

You are not to let your own liking for the work influence you; your inquiry must be whether the music is in any way an echo of our own times. And you decide that it is not.

Is it necessary then, if we are to have a vital comic opera, to call into existence a new Offenbach or a new Sullivan? Well, how do you think?

First get a society that likes wit; a society that is brilliant, and knows it; that has its weaknesses and knows it; a society willing to laugh at itself a little.

Does not that state of things exist today where Offenbach triumphed? Supposing the Parisians are bored with the characters that made their fathers and mothers laugh, would they not enjoy the mockery of a Helen or the banter of a Duchess if it had a recognizably modern accent? And if Sir Joseph Porter's buffoonery is potent now only to raise a laugh in a lonesome library corner, have the sons and daughters of those whom it first pleased no relish for satire?

They like satire, yes; in extreme forms. They like it when it is almost too good to be true, as Meredith and James write it; and they like it when it is too true to be always good, as Bernard Shaw writes it. But comic opera satire must lie in a middle region between subtlety and outspokenness. Above all things it must be genial. It may deal with types, but it must have an inclusive and not an exceptional quality. It must generalize. The modern satirist tends too much to specialization for the purposes of light opera comedy.

What of America? Our young men who compose operettas for college dramatic clubs have come nearer to the strict comedy idea in opera than our mature musicians who compose for the theater. The college men write for audiences that have a genuine, though unpractised, curiosity for comedy. The men who write for the general theatrical public, for the audience of the grand circuit as it averages itself in their thought, will dodge the comedy issue altogether. They may venture to handle American types, but they will seldom risk them in their native surroundings. They will perhaps give these types a career of European adventure that will satisfy our ideas of the comic to a degree, but will answer to none of our best comedy instincts.

Leave the art of travesty out of the question. The genius for making men laugh at a familiar type that presents itself to them in the guise of a parallel, though unfamiliar type, the genius for satire by sign, is a finer thing than the ordinary exigencies of comedy demand. Let that art slumber its Barbarossa century on the Offenbach shelf of the library.

Hard to command are the conditions that will bring about a new era of comedy opera. But there are not other light opera formulas that depend less on definite social conditions and more on plain musical talent? Are there not formulas that can be put into practice at any time by the gifted composer?

If there are, they must be those of romantic opera and of its near ally, fairy-tale opera, with which a composer has a far greater chance of making a classic reputation than with comedy, because the dramatic material of folk legend is permanent. Weber's "Freischütz" stands on the strength of both legend and music. The story of "Bluebeard" has had a century of operatic treatment; most of the music has gone, like the wives, into dark chambers; little of it has so much as an above light. Perhaps the version of Dukas, which is announced for America this winter, will be the classic one and perhaps the keys will be handed on to another Ariane.

Folk lore opera is perhaps the one field in which uninspired music can survive. The Germans certainly have allowed better work than that of the composer Nessler to fall into neglect; but their affection for the subject matter of his opera, "The Trumpeter of Sakkingen," outweighs all musical considerations, and Nessler is a national name. Wherever Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" is mentioned, there is no serious discussion of the music. Wagner's name is generally brought in to dignify matters, but it might be with Humperdinck as it is with Nessler for all anybody cares; there are the Babes and we like them, sing what they will.

When it comes to nationality in music, what people laugh most heartily? The Austrians and the Italians. Mozart started the laughter in Vienna. Homeric laughter unquenchable. The Viennese composers today are the only ones who can make us laugh without the help of either comic text or buffoonery. They are so systematic and easy in their methods of entertaining us that we have come to regard their waltz operas more as a product of manufacture than of art. But the truth is that they have in this laughter gift of theirs a unique intellectual and artistic possession.

The secret of gaiety does not belong to the Italians as it formerly did. No systematic attempt has been made to adapt modern musical phraseology to the requirements of comic opera, as was made by the old Italian composers to develop a buffo idiom of bel canto. Verdi in his "Falstaff" threw out a hint as to the necessary procedure, but he led the way nowhere. The Italian verists in their lyric drama, like the French in their modern opera comique, make only incidental use of humor. But they do this more from downright artistic necessity than from any spontaneous impulse to be gay. Dramatic justice demands that there be some relief from the grayness of the prologue and with Goro in the marriage scene, you feel that your laughter goes against the grain of Leoncavallo's and Puccini's music.

The Italians with the old masters of the buffo school, Rossini and Donizetti hold very nearly the highest place of any people as mirth makers in music. When their problems in verism are all settled they may go back to a branch of composition which they have too long neglected. Light opera as a modern art form would gain immeasurably if it were thoroughly Italianized.

NOTES.

The second program of the Boston Symphony series, to be given Friday afternoon, Oct. 14, and Saturday evening, Oct. 15, brings to performance the first novelty of the season, Rachmaninoff's symphony in E minor, No. 2, opus 27, which was first played in this country by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra in November, 1909. Goldmark's violin concerto in A minor will be the solo number of the program, with Francis Macmillan for soloist. The third number will be Weber's overture to "Oberon."

Former subscribers to the symphony concerts in Sanders theater, Harvard University, have until Wednesday, Oct. 12, to secure the seats they held last year. Such seats are unclaimed will be placed on sale at George H. Kent's University book store, Harvard square, Cambridge, on Saturday morning, Oct. 15.

The dates of these concerts are: Oct. 20, Nov. 17, Dec. 15, Jan. 19, Feb. 9, March 2, March 30 and April 27. At the first concert the soloist will be Charles Gilbert, the French baritone. Miss Bessie Belle Collier, the talented Boston violinist, will appear at the second concert; Josef Hofmann, the pianist, at the third; Anton Witke, the new concert-master of the orchestra at the fourth; Edmund Clement, the French lyric tenor, at the fifth; Mme. Louise Kirby-Lunn, contralto, at the sixth; Miss Cornelle Overstreet, pianist, at the seventh, and Alvin Schroeder at the eighth.

Frederick W. Wodell, who for two seasons has conducted the People's Choral Union, in the absence of Samuel W. Cole, has been appointed director. Mr. Cole having resigned. Mr. Wodell's program for this season includes two concerts in Symphony hall, the first in January and the second in April. At the winter concert, Gounod's "Gallia" and either Chabrier's "Noël" or Rheinberger's "St. Christopher" will be sung. At the spring concert, "The Creation" will be given with eminent soloists and an orchestra of Symphony men.

The people's singing classes offer to the public an opportunity to learn how to sing by note, and the Choral Union provides training in the singing of the best choral music. The Sunday afternoon intermediate class, advanced sight-singing work, meet at Recital hall, Conservatory of Music building, Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock. An elementary class meets at the same place Sundays at 4 o'clock p. m. An elementary class will meet in Recital hall on Wednesday evenings, beginning Oct. 19. The first rehearsal of the Choral Union will be held in Jordan hall, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 16, at 4 o'clock. Those wishing to join the union may do so on passing a moderate test in note reading at Jordan hall, Sunday, Oct. 16, at 3 o'clock p. m.

Homer Humphrey of the New England Conservatory faculty gives an organ recital at Jordan hall, Monday evening, Oct. 10, at 8:15 o'clock. Mr. Humphrey's recital is the third in the conservatory series.

The Haensel and Jones announcement for this season includes recital tours in American cities by Alessandro Bonci, Francis Macmillan, Nicola Zerola and Mme. Gerville-Reache; and concert tours by the New York symphony orchestra, Walter Damrosch conductor.

Mr. and Mrs. David Mannes of New York announce two sonata recitals to be given in Steinert hall Tuesday evenings, Dec. 13 and Jan. 24.

The season subscriptions for the Boston opera performances close on Saturday, Oct. 22. Until that date the subscription department has office hours at the Boston opera house daily from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

TECH AERO CLUB DINNER TONIGHT

M. I. T. Aero Club holds its first dinner tonight in the Tech Union. A. A. Merrill, who gives the aviation course of the Boston Y. M. C. A., will speak on the "Atlantic Aviation Meet."

The aviation society was organized at Tech last November by men interested in flying; among those were E. N. Fales '11, of Beacon street; B. C. Huber '11, and G. H. Abel '11, of Boston. At the start the club had 20 regular members and about 40 associates. A biplane was constructed after the Curtiss model. All the members have had some experience in gliding.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The centennial celebration of Manchester Unity Independent Order of Odd Fellows, commenced today and will continue through tomorrow.

A big street parade, which starts at 5:30 p. m. will be the main feature of the celebration. A banquet is to be held tonight at which many prominent persons will make addresses.

The one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the society is being celebrated this month in the United States, Canada, British Isles, Australia, Egypt, Africa, India and other countries.

Today's parade will form on Exchange place at 5 p. m. and half an hour later will commence its march about the streets of the downtown district. Arthur G. Jerome will be the chief marshal of the parade. Governor Pothier and his staff, Mayor Henry Fletcher and members of the city government and others the North Dakota from Thompkinsville for final trial.

Service Brevities.
The torpedo boats Fox and Davis have been ordered placed in first reserve at the Mare Island navy yard and put into full commission about Nov. 1.

Beckman Winthrop, acting secretary of the navy, has written a letter of commendation to Raymond M. Brittingham, ordinary seaman attached to the Iris, for rescuing a shipmate from drowning.

Charlestown Navy Yard Notes.
Pier 1 at the Boston navy yard is to be improved, and naval specifications are now ready for contractors who desire to submit estimates. Estimating closes Oct. 22. The front of piers and arches, except the four nearest dry dock No. 1, are to be removed from mean low water to grade 110. New reinforcing concrete girders are to be built between these piers. A concrete retaining wall is to be constructed behind the pier. The front of one arch is to be removed and be rebuilt. The supporting pier of two arches are to be built up and steel and concrete locks built. All seams of poor concrete, where not covered by new concrete facings, will be removed and the spaces refilled by new concrete.

Bids were opened today by the naval officials for improving the fire protection system at the yard. A large number of automatic sprinklers are included in the contract, which will be awarded after an examination of the various bids. C. M. Leach of Boston has been awarded the contract for extending the railroad system at the yard.

The bids of seven concerns are now being considered by naval officials for paving at the Boston navy yard. The contract, which is one involving the expenditure of about $100,000, will not be awarded until a thorough investigation of the bids are made. Six of the bidders are local concerns, as follows: Boston and New York Contracting Company, C. W. Dolloff, Frank Williams, C. M. Leach, William L. Dolan and Central Construction Company. The seventh bidder is Field, Barker & Underwood of Philadelphia.

Bids will be opened Oct. 11 for furnishing different materials for this navy yard. Among the property desired is 4000 pounds of dry white zinc, 125 gallons of paint and varnish remover, 15,000 feet of yellow pine, 1020 paint brushes, 1300 pounds of sheet brass, 1500 pounds of sheet copper, 1400 steel enameled unions and 16 folding platform scales.

Incidents Occurring in Washington Allston School Show Sturdy Growth Achieved Under This System.

An incident that greatly pleased and touched him is told by William C. Crawford, master of the Washington Allston school in Allston, as a phase of the school city work there. The story pleases him because it shows the sturdy up-building of character in the school rooms and it touches him because—but the story speaks for itself.

Two or three years ago there was a boy in the school who was heartily liked by almost every child in the building and the teachers as well, but who was constantly in disgrace for some misdemeanor. He was a sore anxiety to his mother, a little woman left alone to manage this strapping boy and one a little younger but just like him. Wholly inadequate she felt for the task and kept coming to the master for help and advice. He assured her the boy would come out right. When election time came round in the school the boy was a popular nominee for mayor. When his name was submitted to the master for endorsement the latter called the boy before him. "Do you think you would make a good mayor?" he was asked. Yes, he thought he would. But did he think his conduct in the past warranted his fellow-citizens in entrusting him with a position of so much authority? He was forced to admit he did not. Could he make good? He brightened up at that and was confident he could.

Very well, then! He was told to erase his past mistakes with his future record, showing what a good citizen he could make under another's rule. It was not what he had expected. In his own parlance it "hit him between the eyes." But he buckled down, and sure enough, at the beginning of the next term he was allowed to run for the coveted office. He won. He made a good mayor, an excellent mayor. There was no form of mischief he did not know and he was quick to detect it and put it out.

Last week he himself came to the master to consult him about his education. He felt obliged to go to wage-earning, but wanted to keep on with his studies; and so earnest was he that he arranged to get up at 5:30 o'clock in the morning, go to work that will keep him until 6:30 at night before he can reach his home and have his dinner, and then he will be off again to night school. In this way he hopes to fit himself for a higher and better work than what he could get if he should stop his efforts for self-improvement, content with the few dollars he could earn and what they might bring him.

Speaking of evening schools, a good story is told by W. Stanwood Field, director of the schools of this class in Boston. It did not happen in one of his own schools, but he vouches for the truth of it just the same. The little folk in one will review the parade from the steps of the city hall.

Among the persons who will speak tonight at the banquet to be held in Infantry hall are Governor Pothier, Lieut.-Gov. Zenas W. Biss, Mayor Henry Fletcher, Judge William H. Sweetland, the Rev. Dr. Russell of New York, Charles E. Thornton, Mayor Robert A. Kenyon of Pawtucket and Nathan M. Wright.

The centennial sermon will be preached Sunday at St. John's Episcopal church on North Main street by the Rev. Lester Fradner, Jr. The members of the Jodges will march to the church.

The committee arranging the celebration consists of the following: John Busil, William Cray, Arthur Coupe, H. C. Paulson, J. N. Illingsworth, Thomas Lund, Charles E. Thornton, James R. Bradley, William H. Worrall, James Gray, John Herbert, W. H. Gardner, Herbert S. Roberts, J. J. Pearson, William G. Spargo, Arthur Eyles, John C. Wade, W. E. Kershaw, W. Dunbar, R. H. Shaw, Andrew Dick, Thomas Turner, W. E. White and William H. Broadbent.

FOSS PETITION IS DISMISSED.
Judge Rugg of the supreme court on Friday afternoon dismissed the petition for an attachment for contempt against Congressman Eugene N. Foss which was brought by Crohan J. Daly. The petitioner alleged a violation of an injunction restraining the defendant from using any part of the building he erected in Newbury street as a garage or for the sale of automobiles.

ORIENTAL DOMESTIC

RUGS

We place on sale on MONDAY, a selection of RARE CHINESE EMBROIDERIES, the collection of the IMPERIAL CHINESE CONSUL, MR. STEPHEN W. NICKERSON of Boston.

In the spring of 1907, while visiting China in his official capacity, Mr. Nickerson was honored by being appointed special commercial representative of His Excellency Yuan-Shih-Kai, Viceroy of Chihli, and special agent for Chou-Fu, Viceroy of the Two Kuang Provinces, his particular mission being to foster trade relations between the provinces over which these viceroys ruled and America.

In the hope that he might stimulate added interest here in Chinese art, Mr. Nickerson secured many rare embroideries (for which the north of China has been renowned) it being his intention to exhibit them throughout America in connection with a lecture tour he had in mind. Prior to his leaving China his sight began to fail, and before he reached this country he was afflicted with total blindness, necessitating the abandonment of his plan as outlined. Failing health has kept Mr. Nickerson confined to his home for a period of about two years, and as he is no longer able to enjoy these beautiful art works, he has finally decided to dispose of them.

These wonderfully beautiful pieces vary in size from 6.4x11.3, and are suitable for many uses. Included in the collection are a number of LEOPARD SKINS, and we also exhibit a few RARE ANTIQUE CHINESE RUGS, in sizes varying from 2 ft. 2 in. x 4 ft. to 8 ft. 4 in. x 6 ft. 3 in.

We cordially invite you to view this exhibition, and urge that you be not deterred from coming because you may not be interested from a purchase standpoint, for these pieces are not only interesting but educational.

BESIDES:

It is possible for just 20 people to get a most wonderful value Monday—possible, provided each bought but one Rug, for we have reduced 20 room-sized BIGELOW WILTONS to prices you will not soon again see associated with Rugs of their high standard.

They represent patterns we thought well enough of to purchase at regular prices for our regular stock, but as we shall not re-order them, other patterns taking their place, with us their room is better than their company.

Only 20, remember, so don't be the 21st to want one.

$39.50 Wiltons in 9 x 12 feet, $29.50

37.00 Wiltons in 8.3 x 10.6 feet, 27.50

The buying advantages we possess as a wholesale house, together with our wholesale location (one block from Washington Street and Temple Place) carrying a very low rent, have a marked influence on our prices.

To be a policeman is an honor sought by the residents of the Washington Allston School city. Louis P. Nash, sub-master, tells a story of a school policeman that involves several points as to school city effectiveness.

One day Mr. Nash was waited upon by a committee of girls and boys who wanted permission to appoint a certain boy for school city police duty. Mr. Nash pointed out to them that the boy would not do at all in such an office, as he was in the class popularly known as "no good." Yes, they knew all that; but they had used up all the good ones and did not want to slight this boy's particular room.

So the boy was appointed, utterly failed, and was impeached—called up before the board of aldermen. They asked him if he did not want to hold office. He shamelessly allowed that he did. If they let him continue in office did he think he could live up to its requirements and perform its duties? Again he shamelessly allowed he'd try. He not only tried but succeeded and was a credit to his position.

The point is that the children, through their own self-government had succeeded in giving the boy a right impulse, leading him to a successful issue, where the teacher himself had failed to reach him.

The South and West End line will be run via Tremont, Berkeley and Boylston streets, both ways. The Dudley street, and the Jamaica Plain, Roxbury Crossing and Huntington avenue cars will be run inward via Columbus avenue, Berkeley and Boylston streets.

The Brookline line via Huntington avenue, and Jamaica Plain via South Huntington avenue lines will be run inward via Massachusetts avenue and Boylston street, returning over the regular route. There will be no change in the outward route of Huntington avenue cars.

ANNOUNCE CHANGE IN CAR SCHEDULE

During track construction at the corner of Dartmouth street and Huntington avenue, beginning at 12 o'clock tonight, the South Boston, Back Bay and Huntington avenue line will run outward via Berkeley and Boylston streets, Huntington avenue and Massachusetts avenue, returning via Boylston and Berkeley streets, and thence over the regular route.

WHO IS JOHN A. DIX?

WHEN the smoke of political conflict in New York the other day had somewhat cleared, people all over the country, scanning the list of Democratic nominations for the name of the man who is to run against the Roosevelt gubernatorial nominee, began asking: Who is John A. Dix? That the New York Democratic machine men knew all about him mattered little to people outside New York. Not even the hastily-consulted Who's Who for 1910-11 could offer any information. It was clear that if Mr. Dix was "Who" in 1910-11 the handy-volume editors had not heard about him. No wonder the public at large was put to ask questions!

It is among the vagaries of politics that the unexpected happens. Presidential conventions, no less than those of state and municipal portent, develop surprises that the public is fond of analyzing. How and why it happened, and who the new arrival in the arena of politics may be, all this and much more is asked by the uninitiated. In the case of Mr. Dix, the wonder is that so little has heretofore been known about him personally.

For John Alden Dix does not lack experience as a political adjunct. The inner circles of the party may furnish full and interesting particulars about the activities of Mr. Dix in state and county. As chairman of the Democratic county committee of Washington county, N. Y., Mr. Dix attained his first comparative prominence within his party. Two years ago he was the Democratic nominee for the lieutenant-governorship, with Lewis Chanler as the head of the ticket. It may be taken for granted that the all-observing eye of Charles F. Murphy, as chieftain of Tammany Hall, had taken due notice of this fine Democratic material in the making.

Mr. Dix is a business man, banker and a manufacturer. His political activities have been incidents of his career. But while his influence for the greater part of his connection with the party leaders centered around the county work and workers he was asked to go to St. Louis as a delegate when the National Democratic convention met in that city. In 1906 he was a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination at Buffalo, receiving 17 votes. When William R. Hearst was nominated, Mr. Dix bolted the ticket and issued the following as his reason for detaching himself temporarily from the fortunes of his party:

"The Democratic party is passing through an ordeal, the most daring and disastrous in its history. But from the shock received at the Buffalo convention it is evident that an organization in New York city, which shall represent democracy and not demagoguery, must and will be created. I shall remain true to Democratic principles, but I cannot vote for Hearst."

This political manifesto, uttered with undoubted sincerity of purpose, when considering the record of Mr. Dix as business man and employer, looms conspicuously into view at the present time when Mr. Hearst again comes to the front as a candidate for office within his state. There is no reason to suppose that the sentiment expressed by Mr. Dix at the Buffalo convention does not apply to later days. Like Mayor Gaynor in the city of New York, Mr. Dix in the state apparently refuses full allegiance to Tammany Hall. The three-cornered battle for control, the Democratic and Independence League parties will afford equal opportunity for Henry L. Stimson and John Alden Dix to display their gubernatorial qualities. As for Mr. Hearst and his following, if reports are correct that the Republicans are to have more than moral support of the Independence League, Charles F. Murphy has good reason for saying that the strength of the opposition has been underestimated. More than ever before the hope of the Democratic party centers around Dix and his capacity for healing differences within the lines.

To call the Democratic state nominee Dix the Reconciler would perhaps describe what he has been for years, and what he apparently proposes to continue to be. His efforts to make the county chairmanship a more important office than had been the case grew out of his belief that the county chairman was in the closest touch with the voter. As with his political ideas, so in his dealings with his men. He never could understand why small differences should be allowed to sunder relationships. Not all voters are able to share the direct gains of the party through office-holding. In the same manner, he avers, employers and employees should be able to get along amicably, each getting his proper share. Some one must lead, whether it is in politics or in business. Mr. Dix is a great believer in the power of arbitration, and he has put his doctrine to a successful test.

Among the various industrial enterprises in which he is conspicuous is paper manufacturing. He is president of the Iroquois Pulp and Paper Company at Thomson, N. Y.; vice-president of the Blandy Paper Company at Greenwich; director in the Standard Wall Paper Company, and interested in the lumber operations at Herkimer. He is also a director in the Albany Trust Company, the National Bank of Schuylerville, the Hudson Falls and Adirondack Trust Company at Saratoga Springs, and treasurer of the American Wood Board Company at Thomson.

His methods of dealing with his men are worth noting. It happened not long ago that the paper mill workers had come to the conclusion that they ought to have more money. There was some talk about a strike if the request were not granted. The men believed they were entitled to a 10 per cent increase. When the matter came to the notice of Mr. Dix he at once said that he would be willing to pay the increase providing the men would work for the next three months at the pay then received. If at the end of the three months the output of the mills had increased 3 per cent, he would willingly pay the advance, not only for the future but for the three months while the experiment was made. The men agreed. The output of the mills was increased even more than had been expected and the workers got their raise.

It is through such co-operative methods that Mr. Dix has won the esteem and the confidence of his employees. His consideration for their welfare is a byword in the state. His factories are modeled after most approved designs. Dared July and August the men get half holidays once a week. Union or non-union employees are all on the same footing, but Mr. Dix insists that every man has a right to make a living according to his understanding, and he asks a square deal from everybody.

In the matter of extensive lumber operations, largely for the purpose of supply for his paper mills, the Democratic nominee some years ago acquired more than 17,000 acres of woodland. He at once made it a rule that for every tree cut down another should be planted. He has worked effectively for the conservation of natural resources. It is his desire for cohesion, and his aim to derive no benefit without giving something in return which forms his strongest card as a political nominee.

Glens Falls, N. Y., was the birthplace of both John A. Dix and Charles E. Hughes. The former Governor of New York is not much older than his Democratic townsman, who was born Christmas day, 1860. Mr. Dix's father was James Lawton Dix, son of Samuel Dix of Vermont. His mother was Laura Stevens. Mr. Dix is a nephew of the famous John A. Dix, who, as secretary of the treasury under President Buchanan assisted in making American history.

This John Adam Dix entered the army in 1812, and in 1833 was chosen secretary. He was elected to the Senate in 1845. Here he advocated the doctrine of the free-soil Democrats and became their candidate for Governor in 1848. Following his occupancy of the treasury office he became major-general of volunteers and in 1862 took command of Fort Monroe. In 1862 he was appointed commander of an army corps and was instrumental in cutting off General Lee's communications by ascending York river. Mr. Dix was minister to France in 1867-68, was later president of the Union Pacific railroad, and in 1872 was elected Governor of New York state on the Republican ticket.

That John Alden Dix has reason to feel proud of what this member of the family accomplished is natural. The history of the preceding achievements may not improbably prove inspiring to the nominee the Democrats now rally to support. Political opportunities never were greater than at the present. Should Mr. Dix succeed in carrying the party banner to victory, the family tree will have one more branch as evidence of the solid soil in which it gained its nourishment.

Receiving his early education at Glens Falls, John Alden Dix was graduated from Cornell University in 1882. He began his business career as a member of the firm of Reynolds & Dix, dealers in marble, and later associated himself with a lumber concern. In 1889 he married the daughter of Leman Thomson of Albany, and became interested in the latter's lumber business. His activity in the direction of manufacturing has already been mentioned. As a banker Mr. Dix took after the interests of the state as much as after his own. It was due to his efforts that the money of the state on deposit in the bank earned a larger interest. The rate then prevailing was 2 per cent, while the banks got 6 per cent in return for money loaned out. Mr. Dix, as a stockholder in the Exchange Bank and First National Bank of Albany amalgamated his interests and after offering the state 3 per cent on loans was instrumental in having the other banks follow suit. The rate of 3 per cent has since obtained.

It seems fair to say that John Alden Dix comes into public notice well qualified to stand the fire of investigation. He may learn many things that his former less conspicuous part in the political arena failed to teach him. Records that show success in business may not entirely satisfy the requirements of politics. But the voters may be trusted to decide. And Albany, after all, is but an incident in the affairs of the Empire state.

U. S. BOY SCOUTS ARE REVELATION TO BADEN-POWELL

British General Is Astonished by the Energy of the Young Men Who Are Enlisted in the Work.

LONDON—General Baden-Powell made some interesting observations last night on the rapid spread of the boy scout movement. All over the world, wherever he went, he found many more scouts than expected. Even in South America there were large numbers. But in Canada he was really astonished at the extent of the movement.

The last week, when he was in the United States, his eyes opened still more. Already 2500 commissions have been taken up by scout masters, and there are 250,000 scouts in the United States alone.

What struck him most in America and Canada was the tremendous energy the young men put into scouting. They looked upon a change of occupation as the best rest cure they could have after business, and they did not go in for hanging about football matches like the young men in Great Britain.

CALLS CALIFORNIA CONGRESS TO URGE NAVAL PROTECTION

Governor Gillett Heads a Movement for Pacific Coast Battle Fleet and Merchant Marine.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Governor Gillett will arrive in San Francisco today to issue a call for a Pacific coast congress here next month.

This congress will be for the purpose of urging on the Congress of the United States the necessity of maintaining permanently in Pacific waters a fleet of battleships; also the importance of a merchant marine to the Pacific seaboard. An effort is being made to have Rear-Admiral Evans present.

The congress, from Nov. 14 to Nov. 16, will call together a gathering of men interested in the maintenance of a battleship fleet and awake to the importance of a merchant marine in Pacific waters. The Merchant Marine League has been conducting a propaganda for both of these objects.

BALLINGER ORDER STOPS MINNESOTA BEING MADE DRY

Action by Interior Secretary Allows Liquor in "Indian Country" Under Supervision of Local Officials.

MINNEAPOLIS—A Washington despatch today states that Secretary of the Interior Ballinger has issued an order permitting the introduction and sale of liquor in the northern part of Minnesota.

Under its terms liquor may be introduced and sold in the "Indian country" if the local officials see to it that the traffic does not touch the Chippewa braves. The city and county authorities must extend the fullest measure of cooperation in preventing sales to Indians. Those persons detected in engaging in illicit traffic will be prosecuted, as will those officials who permit the practice.

But for this order fully nine tenths of Minnesota would have been made "dry" territory according to the ruling of the bureau of Indian affairs at Washington, which prohibits the sale of liquor in certain districts, in accordance with the treaties of the United States government with the Indians in 1851, 1855 and 1863.

Nearly all the prohibition district was ceded under the treaty of 1855, which forbids the manufacture of and traffic in all liquors, or the introduction of liquor into this territory. The Indian agents already have carried into effect the order of the bureau in many northern counties, comprising about one tenth of the area of the state.

The federal government has been wrestling for many years with the problem of keeping liquor away from the Indians, and at last the drastic method of widening the "dry" zone, about the reservations was the resort of the Indian commissioner.

The treaty of 1851, under which a ruling was made excluding from the liquor trade Moorhead, from which most of the shipments into North Dakota, a prohibition state, have been made, also affects a large strip of territory embracing all parts of the state west of the Mississippi as far north as St. Cloud. The Indian commissioner at Washington, according to the construction he has been placing on the treaties, has the power to forbid, not only the liquor manufacture and traffic, but the introduction of liquor into an area embracing nine tenths or more of the state. He can keep liquor out of St. Paul and Minneapolis west of the Mississippi river, which embraces practically all of Minneapolis, also out of Duluth, Winona, Mankato and a host of other cities and towns.

RAPID PROGRESS OF PRAIRIE TOWN

KINDERSLEY, Sask. — On Oct. 5 Kindersley was one year old. In that time a wonderful transformation has been effected. From the virgin prairie, with but one sod shack within miles, there has sprung a model western town of 700 population.

Surrounding the town may now be seen homesteaders' shacks on all sides. Practically all these people came in last spring and they are still coming from eastern Canada and the middle states. For there is still some homestead and scrip land available.

For another year Kindersley will be the getting-off place for settlers finding their way westward into Alberta, as the Canadian Northern railway will not construct any more road this season.

BUILDERS READY FOR CANAL WORK

HELENA, Ark.—Work will soon be started on the Yellow Bank drainage canal, the contract for which was let in this city by the board of directors four weeks ago to the O. O. McDonald Construction Company of Collinston, La. This canal, which is said to be one of the largest drainage projects ever undertaken in eastern Arkansas, will require two years or more in digging, and will drain, when completed, some 200,000 acres of low swamp lands in the southern part of the county. The canal will be a trifle over 22 miles in length by 15 miles wide.

ANNOUNCE NEW MINING CONCERNS

TORONTO, Ont.—The incorporation of three more million-dollar mining companies is announced. They are the Lakeview Mining Company, Limited, of Cobalt, head office, Cobalt; the Central Porcupine Gold Mines, Limited, head office, Toronto; and the Bradley Donaldson Mines, Limited, head office, Ottawa.

VALUE OF OREGON'S FARM PRODUCTS

PORTLAND, Ore.—Oregon's total valuation of crops for the present year, as estimated by Dr. James Withycombe, director of the Oregon experimental station at Corvallis, will be approximately $113,000,000, classified as follows:

Dairy products, $14,000,000; wheat, 17,000,000 bushels, $13,750,000; hay, 900,000 tons, $10,000,000; oats, 11,000,000 bushels, $6,000,000; potatoes, 4,000,000 bushels, $5,000,000; fruit, $6,000,000; poultry products, $5,000,000; wool, 2,000,000 pounds, $1,000,000; hops, 90,000 hales, $3,000,000; livestock, $25,000,000; miscellaneous products, $23,250,000.

AGREE ON SAFETY DEVICES FOR CARS

WASHINGTON—Definite standards of safety appliances to be attached to railway cars and locomotives finally have been agreed on after nearly a third of a century of effort. It is estimated that the proposed changes in equipment will cost the railroads about $50,000,000.

The agreement was reached by the committee appointed last week by the interstate commerce commission. The committee consisted of 15 men representing the railroad commission and the operatives.

ARKANSAS COTTON CROP.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Governor Donaghy reports as follows on Arkansas' crop conditions: "There will be in the neighborhood of 900,000 bales of cotton picked and ginned in Arkansas this year. With an exceptionally late fall the crop should reach 1,000,000 bales."

COAL DOCK FOR MILLION TONS.

DULUTH, Minn.—The Carnegie Fuel Company, which recently bought the dock properties of the Lowry Holding Company, will build a coal dock of 1,000,000 tons storage capacity. A large hard coal warehouse will also cost about $1,000,000.

TURKEY IS HELD BACK BY LACK OF POWERS' CONSENT

Ambassador Oscar Straus Says That Ottoman People Need to Develop Industrially, but Are Prevented.

LONDON—Oscar Straus, American ambassador at Constantinople, in the course of an interview published in the Jewish Chronicle, speaks of Turkey's pressing need for industrial development.

In this, he says, Turkey is hampered by the stipulation which prevents her from giving adequate customs protection without obtaining the consent of the powers. This consent is withheld, though strong efforts have been made by the young and brilliant finance minister, David Bey, to increase the import duties from 11 to 15 per cent, in order to promote home industries and add to the revenues of the empire.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Governor White has received a letter from a member of the Imperial Japanese Parliament for the city of Tokio requesting a copy of the law and regulations governing the public service commission.

TWO NAVAL CRAFT TO GO AT AUCTION

Government appraisers have completed their examination of the naval craft Winslow and Detroit at the Boston navy yard, which are to be sold to the highest bidder Nov. 14. A price of $10,118 is placed on the Detroit and $1768 on the Winslow. It is expected they will be sold for much lower figures.

Appraisers also made an estimate on the U. S. S. Boston, which they value at $13,000, and the U. S. S. Concord, which is appraised at $43,000. These two former war vessels will be sold to highest bidders in a fortnight. Navy yard officials on Oct. 22 will auction off building No. 16 and 700,000 pounds of scrap iron and steel.

ENDURANCE RIDE BY MAJ.-GEN. WOOD

WASHINGTON — In a driving rain Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, and three other officers started from Ft. Myer early Friday on the first army horsemanship test of the year. It was General Wood's first ride on such a test in this country, the object of which is to put officers to a physical exploitation of their fitness for field service. The ride, in which officers stationed in this vicinity participated, had as its objective a camp near Brockville, Md., 30 miles by a roundabout route.

Richard Wagner:—Revolutionary and Poet—II

Years in exile. Political writings. Slow working out of his dramatic theories by their own development. Final triumph of Wagner music drama.

WHEN Wagner fled from Weimar and the police he returned straight to Paris for a second attempt with the public that had treated him so coldly. He thought that special city might have some sympathy with a republican exile. But the Journal des Debats would have none of his proposal to contribute a series of papers on "Art and Revolution" and Zurich finally received him.

Here he poured out book after book and essay after essay full of his sociological and artistic theories. His writings, however, are not those which would lead a great movement. He had no power to see both sides of a question or of treating opponents tolerantly. But there are passages of great power and even eloquence, and as pendants to his operative work the writings are of great interest. As Hadow says, the arguments which have established his theory of opera were not in "Oper und Drama," but in the pages of "Tristan" and "Parsifal."

"Lohengrin" was lying idle in his desk, buried under analyses of Aeschylus and denunciations of Meyerbeer, but now Wagner appeals for his fledgling to Liszt. That master replied that the work should be performed at the celebration of Goethe's anniversary, for which poets and musicians were coming from all parts of Europe. Preparations were made on an elaborate scale and the result was a splendid performance and such a success as Wagner had not had since "Rienzi" at Leipzig. From that evening dated the assured success of Wagner in Germany. And also from this dated the intimate and deep friendship between Liszt and Wagner.

"Oper und Drama" was finished in 1851 and then Wagner launched his "Judentum in Musik," which set the whole musical world of Germany in an uproar. The gist of the paper was that as the Jews have no real nation, but merely take on a superficial color of the peoples among whom they live, Jewish music has no deep sincerity of quality, lacking this national animus. He cites examples from Mendelssohn to prove this and denounces Meyerbeer unsparringly. Wagner in this polemic quite overlooked the fact that though Halsey, for example, was a Jew by birth and religion, his "Queen of Cyprus" had been praised by Wagner himself as a complete embodiment of the French spirit. Wagner's "Judentum" drew out the protest that Wagner was merely jealous of Meyerbeer. Seventeen years later the pamphlet was republished with the same result. But it is evident to any student of Wagner's thought that he was sincerely impressed with the truth of this contention, and wished to save the public from feeding their artistic sense any longer on what he held to be essentially meretricious and false.

Through all the uproar Wagner remained quietly at Zurich finishing the libretto of the Ring. Hadow shows how the new great tetralogy was not the result of a set plan but a normal growth out of the materials in which Wagner was at work. At first he wrote the poem for Gotterdammerung, then he saw that there should be something to explain the whole situation, and the story of "Siegfried" was wrought into a separate opera. Precedent for this lay in the fact that "Rienzi" had sometimes been performed in two parts on successive evenings, and the plan of two interdependent operas looked also to the old Greek system of tragedy. And then there was much to be told about Brunnhilde and the "Valkyries" was the result and the general introduction to the three in "Rheingold." One notes here a curious stepping backward from point to point even as Wagner's whole ideal of dramatic art seems to have been a going back to the splendid tragedy of old time.

These four of the Ring poems were finished in 1853. And that same year a Wagner festival was held at Zurich to celebrate the composer's fortieth birthday. It is said that he broke down in the effort to tell the people what he felt at this expression of sympathy and understanding. And indeed his exile was beginning to tell on him, for he was at heart an ardent lover of his home land. After a period of wandering in Italy in search of comfort he accepted an invitation to conduct the Old Philharmonic concerts in London.

The city was agog to see, says Hadow, "a blustering demagogue, a Marat of music, one who would destroy the classical composers and establish a republic of noise." But they heard instead a poet who could understand Haydn and Mendelssohn better than Costa himself and show them for the first time all that was in Beethoven's "Eroica." The players were soon delighted with him and the public, as Hadow puts it, soon began to turn an anxious eye on the critic's column to learn whether, after all, it might not applaud Richard Wagner. But alas, Wagner apparently had not a friend among the critics and they unanimously voted him "a desperate charlatan," his work a mass of rubbish and his theories impious. "Scarcely the most ordinary ballad writer but would shame him in the composition of melody."

For all that the concerts were uniformly successful, though the programs were of enormous length. The average was eight numbers, two symphonies, two overtures, a concerto and three vocal pieces. This was not Wagner's doing, but the scheme of the directors. He kept his own compositions in the background, giving only the overture to "Lohengrin" and then "Tannhauser," which was repeated by royal command, a great source of pride and joy to the much buffeted composer.

Berlioz came to London and Wagner liked him, but the two did not easily become companions. Berlioz was the polished and keen intellect, Wagner the man of ardor and enthusiasms. Their aim was alike but their manner different and events combined to make them enemies who should have been friends.

About this time an interesting incident showed how Wagner's fame was spreading. An emissary from the Emperor of Brazil asked for an opera to be given in Rio. Wagner went to work at "Tristan," which was done in two years, but meantime the Emperor of Brazil had made other arrangements, as Hadow says.

Wagner now returned to Paris and gave three operatic concerts at a loss of $2000, but they attracted public attention. Everybody on the boulevards had something to say about the music of the future. Cartoonists took it up.

as Punch had done with its "promissory notes" defined as music of the future. One showed a man taking his seat in a theater without paying and saying "I am the payer of the future." Berlioz declared against Wagner and he was about to withdraw from Paris a third time in defeat when the Emperor came to the rescue. The Princess Metternich persuaded him to replace Berlioz's "The Trojans" by "Tannhauser." But this did not mean a victory. The Jockey Club, says Hadow, objected to "Tannhauser" because the ballet came too early, before they were ready to arrive. They organized a clique with whistles, and never was there any such uproar in any theater. People on the front rows played flageolets, the gallery howled and the opera produced at a cost of $40,000 and 150 rehearsals had to be withdrawn. But one good resulted for the exile. At the entreaty of the Princess Metternich he was allowed to enter all the German states but Saxony, and soon that embargo was also removed.

Wagner settled at Mainz and began at "Meistersinger." Many worries pressed upon him. "Tristan" was not accepted and poverty hounded him. But this bright one of his operas went happily on nevertheless. The indomitable courage of the man alone proves his message. And yet in 1864 he published the Ring as a poem, not expecting that he should ever have time to finish the music, or certainly not hoping to hear it performed.

But now came the great change of all. A new King came to the Bavarian throne and Wagner was called back to Munich, where a superb performance of "Tristan" took place. Wagner soon became the King's constant adviser, not only in matters theatrical, but of statecraft. He almost realized, it is said, Plato's philosopher politician. But the King's minister finally objected to this countenance of a revolutionary, and Wagner was forced again to retire to Switzerland. The "Meistersinger" was given with great success at Munich, in 1868, followed by "Rheingold" and "Walkure." But in spite of this musical victory the indefatigable thinker returned to his polemics. Now came the essay on "State and Religion," and many other papers, such as the monograph on Beethoven and Schopenhauer, and others on German art and politics. A few poems came, too, but of small account. The extravaganzas on the siege of Paris is absurd and weak and caused a blaze of indignation in that city, not yet attuned to Wagner.

In 1870 Wagner was married to Cosima von Bülow, Minna Wagner having passed on in 1866. The Siegfried idyl showed the peaceful spirit in which the master had at last come to dwell with the new home joys about him. The beauty of this affection and companionship is one of the few rare and right marriages among great artists which show that kindred natures do occasionally find one another out in that troubled world of art.

In 1872 Wagner was recalled to Bavaria and the building of the great Bayreuth theater began. The money was subscribed and also collected by Wagner societies throughout the world. In August, 1876, the year of the American centennial, came the first great performance of the Ring. Richter conducted, Wilhelm led the orchestra and almost every great operatic artist in Germany sang. Here was German opera for Germany at last and one of the remarkable features of these performances has always been the enthusiasm with which great artists have given their time and labor, giving up other engagements that they might serve here.

"Parsifal" now comes. The poem was written before his first London visit and was first read to a party of friends in that city. That Wagner had thought on these lines is proved by the miracle play and the cantata of the apostles of his early projecting. Now these threads of thought were gathered up and made into a marvelous story, with the legend of the Grail, the message of the Redeemer and the symbolism of the sacrament interwoven. Of the dramatic quality of this libretto Hadow says that Shakespeare has no more pathetic figure than Kundry, nor Goethe no scene of more tremendous import than that in which Parsifal uplifts the Grail over the kneeling knights. The closing hymn of adoration in this work is the "Nunc Dimittis" of Wagner's long and faithful service.

That Wagner was a better poet than Beethoven and a better composer than Goethe is the sneering phrase of his critics, but in judging him as a poet it must be remembered that he never wrote to be read apart from his music, any more than he composed to be heard outside the theater. To be sure, he gave a few concerts of his works, but this was because he must. His whole theory and purpose were to give an absolutely united drama. The other arts had, he held, all reached their height, sculpture, painting, poetry in Shakespeare and music in Beethoven. Wagner's work was to combine these in one composite art, a new art of the music drama. His basis of thought was that true art must come from the people, not from princely patronage. It expresses the height of the national development. With the greatness of Athens came Aeschylus and Sophocles. The people have invented speech and laws, and from them art must come, too. Secondly, he saw that a national art is best expressed in a national theater. The mimetic instinct in the people—the basis of all art—could best find a full expression so. The drama includes poetry, music, the rhythm of the dance for line, the beauty of line and color, too, in the stage pictures.

Wagner's influence was everywhere an awakening of thought, and a stirring to belief in possible new conquests, even in his own achievement was not a final perfection of anything.

Seven-ton granite rock stands on edge of woods where seven pioneers sought seclusion for prayer and near which they discussed their aspirations for benefiting mankind.

Granite Boulder Will Be Dedicated Wednesday in Memory of First Seminary Students for Foreign Field.

ANDOVER, Mass.—On Wednesday, Oct. 12, there will be dedicated on Rabbits rock a boulder in memory of the first missionary students of Andover Theological Seminary.

This year is also the centennial of the American Board of Missions at Boston, and a committee from the board will come to Andover for the dedication. This boulder, recently placed at the edge of the "Missionary woods," now has a bronze tablet placed upon it with the following inscription:

"In the 'Missionary woods' once extending to this spot the first missionary students of Andover Seminary walked and talked 100 years ago, and on this secluded knoll met to pray. In memory of those men, Adoniram Judson, Samuel Nott, Samuel Newell, Gordon Hall, Samuel J. Mills, James Richards, Luther Rice, whose consecrated purpose to carry the Gospel to the heathen world led to the formation of the first American society for foreign missions, in recognition of 248 missionaries trained in Andover Seminary, and in gratitude to Almighty God, this stone is set up in the centennial year of the American board, 1910."

The local committee, which includes the Rev. C. C. Carpenter, the Rev. M. W. Stackpole, Prof. E. V. Hincks, D. D., Dr. O. H. Gates, the Rev. F. R. Shipman and the Rev. F. A. Wilson, have arranged for a brief dedication service at Rabbits rock Wednesday forenoon, Oct. 12, the day of the "Boston pilgrimage."

Mr. Stackpole as chairman of the committee of Phillips Academy, will preside. Professor Hincks, senior professor of Andover Seminary, will make an historical statement; the Rev. Robert A. Hume, D. D., of India, of the class of 1873, whose father, of the class of 1837, was also a missionary in India, will give the address; the Rev. George A. Hall, of Brookline, grandson of Gordon Hall, one of the missionary band, will offer prayer; and a missionary hymn, written by Samuel F. Smith when a seminary student, will be sung.

The tablet will be unveiled by the Rev. James Austin Richards, pastor of Mt. Vernon church, Boston, an "Andover boy" and grand-nephew of James Richards, another of the seven missionary students commemorated.

The only seminary dormitory then in existence was Phillips hall, where Judson and his comrades in mission work lived. The famous conference of 1810, which led to the formation of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was held at Professor Stewarts' house, now demolished, but well known to alumni as the "Shaw-shine Club house."

Phillips hall is still standing. The "commons," in the rear, where the students all boarded, is gone, but "The Old Oak of Andover," which Mrs. Stowe wrote about nearly 60 years ago as "the apostle of the primeval forest," and which Elliptical Pearson climbed nearly half a century before that to locate the future seminary, is close by.

Across the field are "Missionary woods," where those pioneer students were accustomed to walk, and the rocky wooded knoll which is well identified by the testimony of Squire Farrar, the early treasurer, brought down to us by Professor Park as the place where they prayed together. On this knoll, through the free-will offerings of Andover citizens, this memorial boulder has just been set up, bearing an inscription in brass.

Although the seminary is now removed—perhaps all the more because it is removed—it seemed some worthy memorial of the great part the old town of Andover had in the beginnings of American missions should have a place on Andover hill.

The knoll on which the boulder stands, from its location and character, will not be used, as is the case of the adjoining lots, for residences, and the Phillips academy trustees were heartily in favor of its location there.

The granite mass, estimated as weighing about seven tons, was found in the edge of Carmel woods, and is the only one of several rocks examined in different parts of the town which is pronounced by geological experts to be of sufficiently enduring qualities to be sure of lasting 1000 years.

Oneonta New York's Youngest City

MUNICIPAL BUILDING, ONEONTA.

ONEONTA—The youngest city in the Empire state, Oneonta, was incorporated last January, with about 10,000 inhabitants. It was in its infancy about the close of the revolutionary war and has grown from a rude hamlet of that day to its present estate. It is on the Susquehanna river, about 20 miles from Otsego lake, and near what used to be a camping ground of Indians—Delawares, the Oneidas, the Tuscaroras and various other tribes.

Oneonta is an Indian word and signifies "a place of rest."

Oneonta has fine schools, the state normal, one of the finest in the state; the new high school which has recently been built, and three primary schools. All are fine buildings of stone and brick. Other public buildings are a fine state armory and a new municipal building, while Congress has appropriated $20,000 for the purchase of a lot on which to place a federal government building.

WHAT THE SHEARS SAY

THE GOLDEN HARVEST.
Sing a song o' harvest? Ain't got the time to sing.

When the dollars are a-fallin' like the blossoms o' the spring!

Plenty on the hilltop,
An' where the valley dreams,
In shower after shower
The gold of autumn gleams!
Little time for singin'—to answer music's call.

When, with merry jingle, the shiny dollars fall!
Joy enough for millions
The shining harvest yields;
The world is now a-reaping
In autumn's golden fields!

UPS AND DOWNS.
"Soy, Chimmie, wo'd de boss call y' up fer?"
"T' call me down."—Baltimore News.

HE KNEW.
A new teacher at a Montreal school desired to impress upon the pupils the quality of gratitude, and with a view to ascertaining how they understood the idea of grace before meat, asked one pupil: "Johnny, what does your father say as soon as you sit at the table?"
Johnny—He says, "Be canny with the butter, now; it's 40 cents a pound."—Montreal Star.

DR. CRAMPTON QUILTS AFTER 27 YEARS IN SERVICE OF THE U. S.

WASHINGTON—Dr. C. A. Crampton, the government's denatured alcohol chemist, has quit after an experience of 27 years in the government service. His retirement as a public servant caused something of a stir among the holders of government jobs, for it is seldom that one of them ever puts into effect oft-repeated resolutions to quit.

In a way Dr. Crampton fell a victim to the collapse of the denatured alcohol boom and to the red tape of the government. When the denatured alcohol law was passed, he was chief of the division of chemistry in the internal revenue bureau. Free alcohol looked like a coming thing, and the commissioner of internal revenue wanted Dr. Crampton to devote himself to that line. So he threw up his place as chief of division and accepted the denatured alcohol place at a substantial increase in salary.

A private corporation probably would not have split the denatured alcohol work from the regular division of chemistry, but it happened that Congress appropriated the denatured alcohol money in a lump sum, and the men drawing cash from that source could not legally be working elsewhere.

Mr. Crampton went right ahead with the denatured alcohol business. He made one or two trips to Europe and had charge of the technical work of deciding what special denaturants manufacturers should be allowed to use. He did what was possible to point the way toward a popular use of denatured alcohol in cooling and for power but he entertained no delusions on that point. He realized that progress would be slow and he did not encourage those highly colored stories which were circulated early about the vast boon which free alcohol would be to the farmer.

He has seen the consumption of denatured alcohol in manufacturing go forward amazingly. But the average member of Congress lost interest in denatured alcohol when it was found that it would not immediately be of large benefit to the farmer and the housewife. So Congress wiped out that special appropriation for denatured alcohol work and abolished the place which Dr. Crampton had filled. Because of his long and successful work for the government he was given another place but he had to drop back to his old salary. So, as soon as he could arrange his plans, he quit altogether.

PROBLEM IS HARD.
"I'm in a dilemma," said the politician.
"What's the trouble?"
"I can't get up a dollar dinner celebration without hurting my argument against the high cost of living."—Washington Evening Star.

ACHIEVEMENT.
Things are achieved, when they are well begun;
The perfect archer calls the deer his own

KING MANUEL SAILS TO REGAIN PORTUGAL, SAYS LONDON REPORT

chance of a royalist movement against the capital.

"But we must not overlook our work of preparation," he said. "The people are still in a state of great excitement and until normal conditions are restored we will take every precaution against endangering our new-found liberties, which have been so dearly won."

It is learned today that the only demand made of the Duke of Oporto, when he was captured early in the fighting in Lisbon, was that he leave the country. Promising this, the duke was given an escort to the royal yacht Amelie, on which, the revolutionists knew, it was intended to convey the other members of the family to Gibraltar.

The promotion of all army and navy officers prominently identified with the revolution will be effected as speedily as possible.

The government is about to order a revision of the voting lists preliminary to holding elections for a constituent chamber. The provisional government will not remain in office beyond three months.

The chief points in the government's program are:

First, the development of public instruction and national defense on land and sea.

Second, administrative decentralization.

Third, colonial autonomy.

Fourth, to guarantee fundamental liberties by judicial power.

Fifth, expulsion of monks and nuns.

Sixth, obligatory civil registration.

Seventh, lay instruction.

Eighth, separation of church and state.

Ninth, the strengthening of the credit and finances of the country.

It was reported today that a number of leading royalists and clericals, who held out to the last against the government, are to be executed for their activities. A court martial, it is said, will be held of those included in the ban.

The Spanish government has interfered in behalf of a Spanish citizen, a member of the city guard, who is under sentence.

The expulsion of undesirable Catholics is to be pushed with the greatest vigor. In the belief that many of the monasteries and convents are storehouses of wealth that should be appropriated by the government, many of these institutions are being searched and their valuables confiscated. More than a score of priests, accused of seditious utterances against the provisional government, were arrested today.

A conflict between revolutionists and defenders of the Quelhos monastery today resulted in its capture after a heavy artillery fire, in which several monks were killed. The defenders surrendered after two hours resistance. The expulsion of monks from other monasteries is being accompanied by severe fighting.

The decree ordering all religious orders to leave Portugal within 24 hours will be issued Sunday.

The encamped forces of the provisional government have delegated 200 soldiers and armed civilians to police duty in guarding public and other buildings, especially the banks of the city. The wearing of carrying of small Republican flags of green and red is considered the open sesame to safe conduct throughout the city.

During the night all shops and restaurants in Lisbon are closed.

King Manuel's portraits have given way to pictures of members of the new government and photographic records of the revolution in the shape of groups of armed leaders and companies of insurgent troops, not in action but posing for the camera.

The damage done to the city by the bombardment was surprisingly slight.

The recent events which startled the world are discussed by all classes with phlegmatic calm. The general feeling evidently is one of relief that a crisis so long anticipated as inevitable was surmounted so speedily with comparatively little violence.

Senhor Braga desires it to be understood that the revolution had no military or personal aim, but was purely the outcome of philosophical ideas.

He declares he had every confidence that an honest administration would suffice without adventitious means to put the finances of the country on a satisfactory footing and achieve the moral and physical improvement the nation so much needed.

A cabinet council was convened Friday and discussed at length questions surrounding the administration of the affairs of the nation. At its conclusion an and Tennessee line, that the first important speech of his present trip South was delivered. That is one of the chief places in the ninth congressional district of Virginia, the only one represented by a Republican.

The chief stop in Tennessee was made at Knoxville, where the colonel looked briefly over the Appalachian exposition, reviewed a beautiful floral parade, made a speech to a great crowd on the exposition grounds, restored a lost and tearful boy to his family, and made a second speech at a banquet in the evening, getting away on his journey to Atlanta at midnight.

The speech at Bristol was in many respects the most important Colonel Roosevelt has delivered since his return from Africa. It dealt largely with the expression "new nationalism," and he seemed to be taking pains to make his position clear not only to those who were listening to him, but to the wider audience that should read today what he was saying.

The two cardinal principles of the new nationalism, he said are, in the first place, honesty—efficient honesty; in the next place, the right of the people to rule.

Declaring himself against the crook, rich or poor, also in favor of closer supervision of wealth, and stating his belief that development of the nation had progressed to a point where former methods of government were in a measure outgrown, he urged enlargement of governmental power in order to prevent wrongdoing which a century and a quarter ago could have been remedied by much simpler methods.

Official note was given out declaring that the republic was firmly established.

Aims of Government

NEW YORK—A despatch direct from Bernardo Machado, the minister of foreign affairs in the newly constituted provisional government of Portugal, sets forth the purposes and aims of the present government. Senhor Machado, who speaks at the request of and for Theophile Braga, the provisional President of the new republic, cabled as follows:

"The republic of Portugal has been proclaimed by the army, the navy and the people. The maintenance of order is completely assured. The enthusiasm of the public is unparalleled.

"The provisional government has before it a great duty, involving much work. It has, in effect, a country to make over. We will endeavor to put in operation the program of the Republican party. This includes a policy of decentralization.

"The financial budget is to be equalized in the general interests of the country. The national wealth will be developed.

"All national alliances now existing will be respected and friendly relations with all other states are desired.

Notifying Nations

PARIS—The task of notifying, through the medium of accredited representatives, the various powers of the establishment of a republic in Portugal will fall to Dr. Magalhães Lima and Senhor Elvas, the former of whom is now here as the provisional government's temporary minister.

Mr. Lima said he will privately sound Premier Briand as to France's attitude toward the Portuguese republic, after which he will demand an official audience.

It is certain that before any of the powers recognize the new republic there will be a full exchange of views among them and that all will act in accord. It is considered immaterial who makes the first recognition, so long as all are agreed. In view of England's recognized friendliness to Portugal in the past, it is believed that it should act first.

closing of countless manufacturing plants in the United States whose managers could not hope to compete with the employers of cheap labor abroad, and the consequent throwing out of employment of thousands of American workmen.

The chief difference between the tariff agitation of 20 years ago, following the passage of the McKinley bill and that of the present time, Congressman McKinley said, is that the Democratic leaders of tariff reform today are supported by this powerful body of American manufacturing importers, who 20 years ago were importers only.

In other respects the agitation of 20 years ago is paralleled by that of today, he said, and the great question for Americans to answer is whether they are going to profit by their experience following the election of Cleveland in 1892, and leave well enough alone.

Mr. McKinley said that the Republican party had kept the pledges made during the presidential campaign two years ago to revise the tariff. He said that the people did not want a radical revision. He pointed out that this was shown in the election of a Republican President.

If there had been a real demand for radical reduction of the tariff, he said, Mr. Bryan would have been chosen to lead the Democratic party and would have been elected.

Another point of criticism against the Republican party on the part of the Democratic opponents, said the congressman, is the alleged extravagance of the Republican administrators at the national capital.

In his speech at the ratification meeting this evening, Mr. McKinley stated in this connection, he is going to show that if the Democrats were in power today they would have to expend as much as the Republicans are expending or impair the efficiency of one or more of the governmental departments.

He will also show, he said, that the $1,070,000,000 appropriated by the government last year is being wisely expended under the careful supervision of President Taft.

Congressman McKinley left the city soon after noon for a short conference with President Taft at Beverly.

Former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., will preside at the ratification meeting in Tremont Temple tonight.

In addition to Congressman McKinley the speakers announced include Gov. Eben S. Draper, Lieut. Gov. Louis A. Frothingham, James M. Swift of Fall River, Republican nominee for attorney-general; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

The doors will open at 7 o'clock. The Boston Letter Carriers band will furnish music.

Somerville Has Rally

Somerville Y. M. C. A. hall was the scene Friday night of the first Republican ratification meeting in the state since the convention and was presided over by Robert Luce of that city, who was chairman of the state convention.

The speakers included Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Mr. Luce. The latter spoke at first rather facetiously of the Democratic convention but concluded by earnestly turning it to Republican account. He introduced Mr. Frothingham, who said in part: "One of the great things accomplished by the Republican party in this state has been the creation of a public service commission to stand between the corporations and the people. It has been so good that it has been copied by other states and by the nation."

Mr. Frothingham also commented on the advantage to the Republican party as the result of the Democratic convention. He was followed by Governor Draper, who said in part: "I am extremely sorry that the Demo-ports of the addresses for which they have received no manuscript and see that the various news clearing houses, including the Associated Press, the United Press, the International News Service, the Western Newspaper Union, the American Press Association and the Canadian press are fully and accurately served.

The incoming of hundreds of visitors to Boston, many of whom are complete strangers to the city and its devious streets and transit lines, meant that there would have to be a committee of hospitality. Secretary George W. Mahaffey of the Boston Y. M. C. A. has been appointed chairman of the committee on registration and entertainment. He will see that all the visitors are pleasantly provided for in the homes of local Congregationalists or at suitable lodging-houses and hotels. Secretary Mahaffey will be at the present temporary headquarters of the Boston Y. M. C. A. at 2 Ashburton place, where he will receive registration of all the delegates. Under his direction the army of delegates and friends move to the separate places to which the billets assign. Mr. Mahaffey has an excellent system, and by means of a card catalogue will preserve the best of order in the handling of the big throng of those dependent in a large measure upon him for comfort.

The moderator will be elected on Tuesday. Prominently mentioned is the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of the Clinton Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., former pastor of the Union Congregational church, Boston, and First church of Detroit, Mich. He is well known in Boston.

There is some sentiment in favor of honoring a foreign missionary with the moderatorship, and among the names mentioned is that of the Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Smith, of China, author of "Chinese Characteristics," "Village Life in China," and one of the most influential representatives of the American Board both at Peking and in America.

For the convenience of the thousands of delegates who have begun to arrive for the meetings of the Congregational national council, American board and national societies, the entertainment committee issued today a complete manual of information, a copy of which will be given to each delegate upon registration.

Dr. and Mrs. James L. Hill, 225 Lafayette street, Salem, Mass., will keep open house, and offer luncheon from 1 to 5 o'clock to members of the Women's Federation and their friends who visit that historic place on Pilgrimage day, Oct. 12.

The various officers in the Congregational house, 14 Beacon street, will be glad to see their friends at the rooms of the societies every afternoon between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m.

Brotherhood luncheon conferences at the Twentieth Century Club, 3 Joy street, from 12:30 to 2 p. m. Oct. 14, 1 p. m., women's federation banquet in Kingsley hall, Ford building, Ashburton place, Oct. 15, 6 p. m., brotherhood banquet in Tremont Temple.

Missionary and Sunday School exhibits will be shown in vestry of Park street church each day. Stereopticon lectures will be given daily in Chipman hall, sixth floor, Tremont temple, on the work of the American board, as follows:

Monday, Oct. 10, 5:15 p. m.; Tuesday, Oct. 11, 1:30 p. m.; Wednesday, Oct. 12, 3:45 p. m. and 5:15 p. m.; Thursday, Oct. 13, 1:30 p. m. and 5:15 p. m.; Friday, Oct. 14, 5:15 p. m.; Saturday, Oct. 15, 12 m.; Monday, Oct. 17, 1:30 p. m.; Tuesday, Oct. 18, 4:30 p. m.; Thursday, Oct. 20, 4:30 p. m.

By special arrangement the American house, 36 Hanover street, will serve each day, Oct. 10 to 20, in its banquet hall, a special table d'hôte luncheon from 12 to 2 p. m., and a special table d'hôte dinner at 6 to 8 p. m. Crosby's restaurant, 19 School street, will reserve a large hall each day, Oct. 10 to 20, from 2:30 to 8 p. m., for service a la carte.

An agent of Armstrongs Express Company will be on hand at Lorimer hall, Oct. 10 and 11, to transfer baggage from railroad stations to place where delegates and others may be assigned.

The Democratic party was unable to carry its convention to a successful issue. This seems to me to be more important than all other questions which have arisen or can arise in this campaign. It is the basic question of capacity for self-government, and in this convention this capacity was lacking.

"At least 20 persons have congratulated me today on the actions of the Democratic party, saying that it would insure my election and that of the whole ticket. I would rather not be elected Governor of this state if it depended on the disgraceful conduct that marked the Democratic convention."

Congressman McCall concluded the speaking with remarks on the tariff, in which he charged the national Senate with many of the increases which he declared were made above the schedule as sent up from the House. He declared the bill reduced prices on 700 articles of necessity and increased on 200 articles of luxury and that it was as nearly perfect as possible.

said to be holding out for Colonel Gaston.

Some of the closest business friends of Colonel Gaston are urging him to reject the proposition to be the nominee, because of the manner in which it comes to him, it is reported in financial circles today.

Many friends of Colonel Gaston say that he surely would have accepted the nomination had it been offered as the result of a harmonious convention.

Colonel Gaston apparently is keeping himself in the background today. It was said at the National Shawmut Bank that he had not been there all day. His home in the Back Bay is closed. He was at his summer place in Barre, Mass., early today, but had left there, it was said over the telephone. Colonel Gaston is reported today to have said Friday night that he had not been tendered the nomination, that he had not heard from the nominating committee, and that he could not say whether or not he would accept the nomination if it were offered to him.

James H. Vahey intends to keep up the fight to the finish, and if it is possible to deter the committee from selecting a candidate today, Mr. Vahey will issue a statement tomorrow which it is believed by some will have an important bearing on the situation. Mr. Vahey, however, will give no intimation today of the nature thereof.

With Congressman Foss declining to further consider being a candidate, and Mr. Vahey still very active, it is the opinion of many today that Mr. Vahey is holding the balance of power, and that when a candidate is named it will prove a victory for Mr. Vahey and the defeat of Mayor Fitzgerald, who it is claimed has been backing the anti-Vahey movement.

Representative Thomas P. Riley of Malden, who has been an active candidate for the lieutenant-governorship, today is circulating nomination papers for filing with the secretary of state as an "Independent Democratic" candidate for this position. As there has arisen doubt as to the legality of the convention delegating to a committee the choice of a nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Riley intends to be on the safe side. If he is not the choice of the committee for this position, it is said he will run as an independent candidate.

Many of the local Democratic leaders appeared considerably chagrined today when it became known that as far as the

CHICAGO-NEW YORK AIR RACE SUNDAY

CHICAGO—The start of the Chicago to New York aeroplane race has been postponed from today until Sunday, according to an announcement of the Chicago Evening Post, which, with the New York Times, has offered a purse of $25,000 for the flight.

Conferences between representatives of the papers and the aviators were resumed today in hopes of straightening the tangle started yesterday when the aviators decided they would turn the "race" into a one man flight.

After a conference, Augustus Post, representing the aviators, announced that it had been decided that three aviators would start as originally planned. He was asked, however, if Messrs. Willard and McCurdy intended to endeavor to complete the trip and said: "The situation is this: Willard, McCurdy and Ely will start. What may happen afterward I cannot undertake to say."

To win the $20,000 offered by the two newspapers Messrs. McCurdy, Willard and Ely must start, but the aviators have it figured that Messrs. McCurdy and Willard can land on the first plot sighted, dismantle their machines, follow Mr. Ely by train, and aid as much as possible.

The Post absolutely refuses to accede to any such arrangement.

BROCKTON FAIR CLOSES ONE OF ITS BEST YEARS

BROCKTON, Mass.—On Governor's day, which ended the Brockton fair, there was an attendance of 24,935 and all the events were carried out. The total attendance of the fair was 191,562, the largest since 1905.

Claude Grahame-White made a flight at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and again at sunset. Many of those present had never seen an aeroplane before.

The presence of Governor Draper, Gov. Frank B. Weeks of Connecticut and Gov. Henry B. Quincy of New Hampshire, together with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Lieut. Gov. Louis A. Frothingham and other distinguished guests, served to make the closing day of the fair a notable one.

A public convention will be held in Whitwell hall, Everett, next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Congressman Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea is expected to be unanimously renominated to that office. Mayor Charles Bruce of Everett will preside. This district is the one Senator Henry Cabot Lodge represented before becoming a senator. The latter has been invited to be present at the convention.

NEW TAXI-CAB SERVICE IS PLANNED FOR BOSTON

Promoters Would Operate on Old Rate and Install Parcel Delivery System for Greater Boston Towns—Large Concrete Garage.

To establish in Boston a new taxicab company and inaugurate, in connection with this company, in Boston and suburbs a 5 and 10-cent parcel delivery system, having 150 taxicabs and 100 light running automobile delivery wagons are in brief the plans of several Boston capitalists, a representative of a large automobile company and a New York taximeter firm.

Several conferences have been held between these parties during the past few days at the Hotel Brewster. The meetings, however, have adjourned to New York, where more thorough details will be mapped out.

It is the purpose of this prospective company to run taxicabs under the old tariff regulations, with cars that would be kept up to date in every respect and have drivers that make a creditable appearance and use the mechanism of taxicabs in the same manner as if the machine were their private property.

For the parcel delivery system the plan is to make the organization available for the stores in Boston and the general public. The project calls for the establishment of centrally located distributing points where parcels could be left to be received there by the delivery teams and delivered to the various addresses.

The automobile concern interested in this huge proposition, which has been temporarily called the Million Dollar Taxicab Company, is one that has $15,000,000 capital behind it. The taximeter company is one that has just placed on the market what is called the Ever Ready taximeter. At least six of these new style meters will be in operation in Boston and Cambridge within a fortnight. They are on taxicabs owned by private individuals and will be given a thorough test here for the first time.

It is the contention of the promoters of this prospective taxicab-parcel delivery company that a new company could invade Boston and conduct a profitable business, running the cabs on the basis of 30 cents for the first half mile and 10 cents for each additional quarter-mile; with an extra charge of 20 cents when a trunk is carried and 10 cents for each six minutes of waiting, but no extra charge to be made for the number of passengers (cars to carry five persons) or return trip of a cab to garage or stand from place it is dismissed and without having the double tariff system has been agreed upon after an exhaustive investigation by the parties interested in this prospective company.

Although the promoters of the new company have gone to New York and there is a desire on the part of some of the gentlemen to arrange for beginning operation at once, two of the party are of the opinion that it would be better to arrange preliminaries, obtain building, etc., and be ready to operate in the spring. This will be threshed out in New York.

The members who want to wait until spring argue that it would be better for the company to come into the field after Bostonians have had a thorough tryout of the new taxicab rates. They state that the system which the Million Dollar Taxicab Company plans to operate under would bring back the taxi traveling public to ride in their machines.

The company plans to take the public into their confidence, the proposition being made that the books of the company be open at all times and that a plan of instructing the public how to ride in a motor vehicle with a taximeter attachment without being overcharged be put into operation.

The site where the present forming company would locate has been settled on and during the coming week attorneys will begin negotiations for the purchase, and see if there would be any remonstrations from abutting property owners against the location of such an industry. The ground is located in the Back Bay.

The building planned to be erected would be a large six-story reinforced concrete structure of the type of the new headquarters of the New York Taxicab Company of that city. Runways are to be used instead of elevators and every cab will have its own stall, which locks automatically and can be opened only by the superintendent and through means of a push button located in his office near the entrance and exit of the building. Every modern appliance known to the up-to-date garage would be installed on plans drawn by a competent automobile engineer who has been connected with the London Cab & Omnibus Company of London, Eng.

The repair shop would be located in the garage and men brought from the automobile factory where the taxicabs are manufactured installed as mechanics. A school for drivers would be established where not only would the proper care and handling of a taxicab be taught, but special attention paid to cause the drivers to be neat in appearance and courteous to their fares.

It is the impression of the promoters of this company that the securing of careful drivers would tend to decrease the high rates of liability insurance now in effect on the taxicabs in Boston. This rate now is in the neighborhood of $450 per cab a year and the insurance companies will take only a limited number of cabs at this high rate.

While the company would be a Massachusetts corporation, it is stated that no stock would be floated, the company being promoted by the manufacturers and the few capitalists now interested.

ENCLOSED CARS
IN BIG DEMAND

Marked Extension of Manufacturing These Bodies Has Much to Do With the Increased Buying.

Whether the experience this fall of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company of Buffalo in regard to enclosed cars is typical of the whole industry is a question, but it is a fact that its records show that the demand for enclosed cars is far in excess of that of any other year.

Periodically at the Pierce-Arrow plant percentages on body styles and colors are struck. By means of these the company is enabled to know at all times just what the trend of the buying public is in general and particularly toward its own cars. The figures so far this season show that the proportion of enclosed cars to the total output is a trifle more than 60 per cent greater for the present season than it was for 1910 cars. This increase amounts to about 10 cars in each hundred.

The demand for enclosed cars is heavier, of course, in the fall than at any other time of the year, but it is not expected that the figures obtained for the season's business as far as it has progressed will be altered to any material degree. One of the reasons for this belief is that of the enclosed cars order so far, the subliminal and broughams, or limousines as they are popularly known, outnumber the landaus and landaulets in the proportion of more than three to one.

Landaus and landaulets will be ordered in the spring if the experience of other seasons holds good, owing to the fact that they are ideal in spring and summer, when they may be used in either open or closed form, according to weather conditions. A fact which has undoubtedly had a large effect in the great increase in enclosed car orders has been the marked extension of manufacturing facilities for turning out these bodies in quantity.

DEMAND GROWS FOR REO CARS

Vice-President Owen Reports Company's Selling Force Was Never Better Organized Than at Present Time.

R. M. Owen, vice-president of the Reo Motor Car Company, returned to New York Friday from a flying business trip to the Reo factory at Lansing, Mich., and to other western points and reports a very promising outlook for 1911. Never before was the Reo selling organization in a stronger and more hopeful attitude than at the present time. There are now close to 90 Reo dealers in the United States and many of these have doubled their 1910 contracts for 1911 Reos and insisted on having the privilege of increasing their 1911 specifications from 50 to 100 per cent before May 1, 1911.

Mr. Owen says that with the added facilities which the large new Reo engineering building affords and the many new devices and appliances which have recently been installed for the purpose of thoroughly testing and trying out every piece of material and part in Reo cars is certain to insure maximum economy, reliability, safety and efficiency in every Reo shipped during the ensuing year.

Since the Reo recently made its sensational run from New York to San Francisco in 10 days, 15 hours and 13 minutes, thus lowering the previous world's record by nearly five days, thousands of new inquiries have been received for this popular winning 1911 Reo "4-30," and the daily inquiries are constantly increasing.

NAVAL ACADEMY
MEETS RUTGERS

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The midshipmen expect to win from Rutgers today, but do not anticipate a big score. Several changes will be made in the team as it played against St. John's last Saturday, and a number of players are in much doubt as to their positions. Much interest is taken in the showing of Gilchrist, a fourth class man, who played on the University of Missouri team last season. He will play right end today.

EXETER, N. H. — The University of Pennsylvania 1914 football team meets Phillips Exeter here this afternoon. Signal practice was held in the gymnasium Friday afternoon, outdoor practice being omitted. The players are in good condition, except Faulkner, and they are capable of playing a hard game. Some new men may get into the game. The lineup will be: McCabe, left end; Kirkpatrick, left end; Allen or Carter, left end; Stone, left guard; Brickley, left guard; Wright, right guard; Loftin, right tackle; Gilchrist, right end; Erwin, quarterback; Dalton, left halfback; Clay, right halfback; Austin, fullback.

The first substitutes will be: Elwood, Hitchens, Withington and Martin, line-men; Easton, Ayer, Collins, O'Brien, Leavitt and Fox, backs.

TURBINE ELECTRIC RAILROAD ENGINE

The world's first steam turbine electric locomotive has been completed at the works of a British locomotive company at Glasgow, says the Kansas City Times. In its operation the electricity which actuates the motors is generated by a dynamo driven by a turbine engine, deriving the steam, which is superheated, from a boiler in the rear. The turbine make 3000 revolutions per minute, developing 1000 normal horsepower.

Increased efficiency and economy in fuel are secured, it is declared, in the innovation.

JOINT COMMITTEE IS WORKING FOR CHANGE
IN NEW JERSEY LAWS

AFTER CANDIDATES

NEWARK, N. J. — A joint committee representing the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey and the New Jersey Automobile Trade Association has started active work to obtain a betterment of legislative conditions in this state during the coming session of the New Jersey state Legislature. Headquarters for the campaign are to be opened here and every effort will be made to help the fortunes of the candidates pledged to support the desired amendments to the state motor vehicle law. There are 10 members of the joint committee, five each having been appointed by the state body of clubs and the state dealers' organization.

At a recent meeting of the committee a resolution was adopted condemning past automobile legislation and declaring strongly for a number of amendments to the existing law. It was also decided to place before the candidates for office at the ensuing election the proposed amendments desired by the automobilists of the state and to ask each candidate to pledge his support or to refuse such support. The list of amendments desired that will be submitted to the candidates is as follows:

"1. That non-resident automobilists, desiring to tour in New Jersey be permitted to do so for a limited period of time without expense to them and without requiring them to take out special licenses or sign powers of attorney before entering the borders of the state, provided they have duly complied with the laws of the states in which they reside and provided their home states extend the same privileges to residents of New Jersey."

"2. That the law which was recently passed requiring all vehicles to carry lights at night shall be properly enforced, made so it can be properly enforced, a minimum penalty fixed and the fines collected for breaches thereof turned over to the state treasurer to be spent only on the repair of the improved highways."

"3. That the horsepower of cars for license purposes shall be rated according to the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers formula and not upon the manufacturer's rating."

"4. That in consideration of the large sums received from license fees by the state, automobiles be exempted from further taxation and that the fees so collected shall be paid in lieu of any and all taxes."

"5. That $2000 per year for a period of at least three years be set aside from the funds paid by the automobilists for licenses, etc., such amount to be used in erecting proper guiding signs upon the highways where required."

"6. That motorists shall have the right to appeal to the supreme court from the decisions of the commissioner of motor vehicles."

"7. That a law be enacted requiring gates at all grade crossings of steam railways and of electric railways where operated over a private right of way crossing a public highway."

UNIVERSITY WILL
CITY'S PROSPERITY

VANCOUVER, B. C. — The report of the university site commission, which designates Point Grey as the location for the University of British Columbia, is attracting public attention to this rapidly growing municipality adjacent to Vancouver, and will add materially to its growth and improvement.

The commission recommends that not less than 250 acres be set aside for the campus, and 700 acres for experimental purposes in agriculture and forestry. On account of the diverse agricultural conditions in the province, it is suggested that the work of agricultural education be divided between the university college of agriculture and the schools of agriculture in the different centers. It is also advised that the university provide short courses for farmers' sons in the winter months, and technical night schools in the different mining centers. In concluding their report, the commission recommends that a liberal salary policy be adopted so as to attract men of the highest ability, and place the university on an equality with the best universities in America.

Point Grey municipality comprises about 20 square miles, much of which is yet in a rough state, but which is being laid out in streets as rapidly as possible. $950,000 has just been raised by sale of bonds, which will be expended in providing adequate waterworks and sewerage systems; $100,000 will be devoted to park purposes, while car lines are projected to radiate from a common center and encircle the whole district. The district has wonderful scenic attractions, jutting out into the Gulf of Georgia and affording a magnificent view in all directions, and it will doubtless become a popular and ideal residential center.

Chalmers LIMOUSINE

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

You can spend a great deal more money but you can't buy any more in a Limousine than you get in a Chalmers for $3000.

This is a broad statement to make and we couldn't prove it in a newspaper.

But think of the proved Chalmers "30" Chassis. Think of the body made by the most famous coach builders in the country, with white ash frames, white-wood paneling, solid walnut window frames, finest quality of broadcloth, highest grade of hair in the cushions, and every refinement that any one can ask.

Come and prove for yourself that you can't buy more in a Limousine than you get in a Chalmers at $3000.

CAUSE OF UNDUE NOISE

Undue noise in the gear-box arises in almost every case from worn gearing or gear shaft-bearings. Many methods are used to overcome this noise, the basis of them all being the employment of a thick gear-box lubricant to serve as a vibration absorbing medium.

These differ only in the nature of the medium employed, shavings, sawdust, or french chalk being mixed with the grease to thicken it. A gear-box so packed is certainly quieter, but not only is the process uneconomical, but the real cause of the noise is overlooked, and moreover the reduction in noise is obtained at the expense of power, which, added to that caused by the inefficiency of worn gearing, amounts to a serious loss.

A further objection to such makeshift remedies is that the free movement of the gear sleeves is greatly lessened, and gear changing is made difficult. A fact which must not be overlooked is that any gear-box will be noisy if allowed to run dry.

The only satisfactory way to cure a noisy gear-box is to find the cause and remedy it, by renewing such gears or bearings as are worn, or replacing enough lubricant if run dry.

ALLOTING SPACE FOR BOSTON SHOW

Already the Boston auto show is looming up in the net very far distance and the offices of the management are besieged by intending exhibitors. Allotments are now being made by Manager C. I. Campbell and every indication points to the usual big show next March. All classes and kinds of cars will be shown, it being an "open" show, no discrimination as to licensed or unlicensed being considered. This is of course as it should be, as the Boston show is distinctly a show for the public.

Besides the wonderful completeness of the exhibits, as usual great attention will be given the musical features and decorative scheme.

ANDOVER FACES
CUSHING ELEVEN

ANDOVER — The Phillips Academy football team meets the Cushing Academy eleven this afternoon. The local team expects a hard battle with the visitors, as Exeter defeated the Cushing team by the score of 12 to 5 last Saturday.

Jones, last year's veteran tackle, will probably start the game in his old position, the right side of the line, and his presence in the game is expected to strengthen the Andover line. McDonald will probably start at quarter, with Webster in reserve. Sawyer, Rogers and Mahan will comprise the first string of backs.

ACQUISITION OF AUTOS
BY FARMERS A SURPRISE

During the last two years the increase in the number of automobiles owned by farmers has been little short of marvelous. In the opinion of E. R. Thomas, president of the E. R. Thomas Motor Company of Buffalo, who has given his keenest attention to the subject of the growth of the motor car business in the South and Southwest, this is one of the most remarkable features of the industry.

"The social economy of many other lines of human endeavor," says Mr. Thomas, "has been changed as a result of the wonderful spread of the automobile. The social life of the country districts has been revolutionized, and the people have been brought in closer touch with each other by the greatest time and distance annihilator of modern times."

"To persons who have not kept in close touch with the trend of the automobile industry the most remarkable feature of the whole business is the phenomenal increase in farm automobiles in the last two years. The effect on roads has been far reaching and beneficial to an extent that is impossible to estimate. This certainly demonstrates that the motor car industry is not governed by the same conditions as the bicycle industry.

"Bankers and other men who from the very nature of their business must be cautious and conservative have predicted all sorts of dire results from lack of demand. That their reasoning was from false premises is shown by the steady demand for all kind of cars and an analysis of the distribution of the wealth of the country. The demand for the higher priced cars is steadily increasing and shows a healthy growth."

THIRTY-TWO AUTOS ENTERED TO CONTEST TODAY AT FAIRMOUNT

LOOK FOR FAST TIME

PHILADELPHIA—The entry list of the Fairmount park automobile race to be decided here today is a strong one and some remarkable racing is promised. Times at Fairmount have never been fast owing to the difficulties of the course which is twisting and contains many dips and little rises. Robertson who has been twice a winner of this fixture has never made much better than an average of 50 miles an hour, but it has always been a race worth going a long way to see. One feature of the contest has been the handling of the crowds. Philadelphia authorities have refused to allow automobiles to be parked near the course, which prevents accidents to spectators by the possible overturning of a car.

The race will be in classes and the entire list contains 32 cars, one more than the Vanderbilt cup race. Many Philadelphia dealers have entered machines and in that respect the fixture has a local interest.

The entry of the Ford with Kulick to drive has added an element of great interest. The Ford is so comparatively light that its adherents claim for it the ability to hug the pole and cover really less distance than the older machines. The little Ford is without a doubt a fast car at present gear and gave Ralph de Palma a good contest at Syracuse the other day. Nothing except the 90 horsepower Fiat was able to beat it. The Ford possesses one horsepower for every 45 pounds of its weight. The entry list is as follows:

Class 2—Vincent Tadula, Abbott-Detroit; Frank Kulick, Ford; "Bill" Endicott, Cole 30; Mortimer Roberts, Abbott-Detroit; Montague Robert, Abbott-Detroit; Harry Endicott, Cole 30.

Class 3—Harold Hardesty, Pullman; Ernest Gellard, Pullman; H. P. Frey, Mercer; Joe Dawson, Marmon; Joe Matson, Corbin; W. H. Nash, Otto; William Oliver, Jr., Mercer.

Class 4—Jack Aitken, National; Ray Harroun, Marmon; Harry Cobb, Jackson; H. L. Wilcox, National; Willie Haupt, Benz; H. C. Knight, Westcott; Ed Hearne, Benz.

Class 5—E. M. Hausen, Apperson; Ralph Mulford, Lozier; G. E. Davis, Apperson; Tobin De Hymel, Stoddard-Dayton; C. A. Bergdoll, Benz.

Class 6—C. R. Bergdoll, Benz; Len Zingel, Chadwick; J. Fred Betz, Lion Simplex; Mr. Jagersberger, Mercedes; Al Mitchell, Chadwick.

In addition to the principal prize for the victor at large the winning driver in each of the five classes will receive $1000.

ARMY FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS

WEST POINT, N. Y.—The army football team was given some extra practice Friday. The men ran through the formations to be used today against Tufts College with clocklike precision. Homer and Hardy, both strong players, alternated at left tackle, and both will get in today's game. The army line-up for the first game of the season will be: Left end, Wood; left tackle, Homer; left guard, Walmsley; center, Arnold; right guard, Weir; right tackle, Devore; right end, Hicks; quarterback, McDonald; left halfback, Dean; right halfback, Brown; fullback, Surles.

AUTO SPEEDING IS EXTRAVAGANT

Prominent Manufacturer Asserts That Reasonable Driving Lowers Maintenance Cost of Motor Cars.

Present automobile owners and prospective purchasers of cars for 1911 who have observed that there is no marked reduction of prices among standard makes of automobiles and who are asking themselves in what way the cost of automobiling is to be kept at a reasonable figure, will find food for thought in the following reply of B. A. Becker, general manager of the Elmore Manufacturing Company, when the same query was made to him:

"Economy of maintenance," said Mr. Becker, "hangs squarely upon economy of speed. I expect to see a radical limitation of speed by laws of well-nigh national application, and shall welcome that day."

"Of course we make speedy cars—none are faster—but that is not their chief recommendation. We make a roadster, for instance, selling for $1200 that is capable of a speed of 60 miles per hour, but I don't think that is anything in its favor. The ample power is necessary for hill climbing and bad road conditions. That it also affords the means for getting excess speed is only incidental. Nothing knocks out a car as rapidly as long continued fast work, and this spells extravagance and useless stress upon every part of the car as well as on the tires."

I think that the day is at hand when speeding will be condemned by every thoughtful driver, and the non-thinking kind will gradually see that they are being looked down upon, just as it is the case today with those given to wanton waste in other respects.

"And there's still more to this subject. Few accidents take place that are not primarily caused by excess of speed. On the other hand I think that most men who have driven for as many years as I have will agree that a speed of from 15 to 18 miles an hour affords not only the most comfortable but the most entertaining riding. Anything above that detracts from the interest in the surroundings that is a large part of the wholesome pleasure to be found in automobiling."

MOTOR CAR WINS ECONOMY TEST

Maxwell Runabout Proves Superior to Horse and Buggy in Unique Contest of Six Days.

NEW YORK—S. M. Butler, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, has announced the results of the six day economy test between an automobile and a horse and wagon. The Maxwell runabout not only won the test by a large margin so far as expense was concerned, but it covered nearly three times as much ground as did the horse and buggy. The event was the first organized, systematic attempt to compare the relative costs of travel by horse and wagon and automobile.

The contest was conducted in a conservative manner in order that neither mode of transportation might benefit by unusual practices. As passenger mile cost was the basis of the test the automobile was continually under the supervision of an observer appointed by Chairman Butler, the car being locked up in an official garage when not in service. Gasoline and lubricating oil were the only items of cost, as the car needed no repairs, adjustments or replacements. The gasoline and oil for the automobile and the oats and hay for the horse were purchased along the day's route.

In compiling the final figures of the test, depreciation of both the automobile and horse and buggy was taken into account. In the case of the automobile 20 per cent a year was allowed on a basis of 10,000 miles a year. This amounts to $180 a year, or 18 cents a mile. Depreciation on the wagon, harness and horse is based upon an original cost of $275, the outfit supposedly lasting 10 years and being capable of 10 miles travel every day, making the depreciation $0.075 a mile.

Following are the summaries of mileage, disbursements and depreciation on each vehicle:

NEW MOLINE NOW ON EXHIBITION

Considerable interest has been displayed in the arrival of the 1911 Moline car, which was placed on exhibition at the Selden motor car salesrooms, 801 Boylston street, on Wednesday last, and where it has been viewed by a great many.

The Moline comes to Boston with a great record and a fine reputation, and its achievements of late have doubled the desire of the knowing ones to see it. The model on exhibition is a 4-cylinder 35-horsepower touring car with a wheel-base of generous length insuring the much desired quality-ease of riding.

One of the points of interest in the Moline is a long-stroke motor, which as is well known has great advantages, viz., in the economy of gasoline, great hill-climbing power—less strain on all engine bearings. The Moline is a car that has been put to the severest tests over rough roads and steep grades which have been selected to prove its reliability and power. It is made in runabout, toy tonneau, torpedo bodies and limousines.

MUCH PROGRESS IS MADE PREPARING FOR NEW YORK AUTO SHOW

Interior of Madison Square Garden to Be Remodeled and Handsomely Decorated for Exhibits.

RUN IN TWO PARTS

NEW YORK—Preparations are now in full swing for the eleventh national automobile show, to be held in Madison Square Garden, Jan. 7 to 21, 1911. Although the show is some three months distant the details are so many that early preparations are necessary to bring matters to a successful conclusion, and the show committee, consisting of Col. George Pope, chairman; Charles Clifton, Alfred Reeves and Merle L. Downs, secretary, are busy every minute.

Plans for the remodeling of the interior of Madison Square Garden have been completed. Already men are laying the concrete bases for the structural steel work which will be used throughout the building. The steel work will be the main support of the elevated platforms and will add a tone of solidity to the amphitheater. The raised platforms will be extended to the aisle of the main floor, thus forming a roof for the spaces in the outer ring. The front balcony similarly will be extended. Complete cars will be shown on the main floor, raised platform and balcony of the amphitheater, and in the exhibition hall at the right of the entrance and in the basement.

All that is new or old in the accessory line will be on exhibition on the outside of the raised platform and first balcony nearest to the walls of the building, in the second balcony and in the concert hall.

The forthcoming show will be divided into two parts, one of which will be devoted entirely to passenger or pleasure vehicles. This will be known as part 1 and will be held during the week of Jan. 7 to 14. Part 2, which will be devoted to commercial or freight-carrying vehicles, electric carriages and motor cycles, will be held during the period of Jan. 16 to 21. Just how the show management plan to "clean house" for part 2 in the short space of time between the two shows is hard to understand, but this difficult task will be properly engineered and carried out successfully and everything will be in place when the doors open for the two periods of the national show.

WILL TEST VALUE OF STONEY GATE VALVES FOR LOCKS

GATUN, C. Z.—Seven tests are to be made here to determine the efficacy of the Stoney gate valves which will control the flow of water through the culverts of the locks. Two concrete piers are in process of erection on the floor of the west chamber of the upper locks, on which the valves will be erected in horizontal position for the first four tests. The piers are about six feet high, permitting free access for the inspection of the roller trains. The gates are of steel and are 10 feet 8 inches wide by 18 feet 10 inches high, made to close a job 8 by 18 feet. The points to be determined by the first four tests are:

(1) The friction developed by the roller trains when the valve is moved under a superimposed load equivalent to the water pressure against the valve under operating conditions. (2) The deflections of the valves under loads equivalent to operating pressures and the effect of the deflection upon the rollers to determine whether it will be necessary to provide roller bearings on end of valves. (3) The effect of an eccentric pull on the gates to simulate the conditions if the valve stem is not attached to the gate on the axis through the center of gravity. (4) The effect of the wear on the rollers and roller train tracks for continuous operation under a working load.

Points 1 to 4 will be determined by assembling the valve and roller trains in a horizontal position and loading the valve with pig iron or rails in increasing amounts to equal the pressure due to varying water heads up to 60 feet. A wire rope run through each end of the gates through snatch blocks to a hoisting engine will permit of the valve being operated at will.

Three other tests will be made to determine: (5) The efficacy of the sealing devices, particularly the spring side seals, under water pressure, and the water tightness of the uncaulked skip plates and rivets. (6) The initial force required to break the water seals and open the valves about one foot. Test 7 will be deferred until the operating machinery has been installed.

NO FRESHMAN SCRIMMAGE.

Because of the slippery condition of the field Friday the Harvard freshman football squad was not given a scrimmage. The centers, backs and ends reported early and were given a short practice in punting, with the ends running down under the kicks. When the rest of the men reported the whole squad had practice in tackling the dummy, falling on the ball and starting. The first and second squads finally ran through the signals.

Notes of Interest to the Automobilists

R. R. Ross, manager of the Fiat, has been elected a member of the Boston Automobile Dealers Association.

From Indianapolis, Ind., to Cheyenne, Wyo., is the long trip which F. A. Larivan and John A. River have just completed in an American roadster. The young men, whose homes are in Cheyenne, covered the distance in leisurely manner, on a schedule that averaged 200 miles for each day's running.

The Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis has announced that a 30 per cent dividend has been declared. Announcement is made of plans to double the output for the coming year, and notice has been given of the increase of capital stock from $100,000 to $300,000. Papers have been filed with the office of the secretary of state to that effect.

So great has been the interest in bicycle racing this season that it has been decided to postpone the closing of the famous Newark (N. J.) Velodrome for one month, or until Nov. 1. An interesting series of match races between Frank L. Kramer, the 10 times American sprint champion, and A. J. "Rocket" Clarke, the Australian sprint champion and winner of last year's six days' race, will be the chief events of the postscript season.

"It is commonly supposed that automatic constant flow lubrication when properly regulated, is calculated to overcome any tendency to smoking at the exhaust, which in the older splash system, results from irregular and frequently over-abundant supply," said Frank B. Killian, chief of the mechanical department of the Vacuum Oil Company, of Rochester, N. Y. "In the system in which the oil is forced through ducts in the crank shaft, in particular, it is supposed that except where the regulation is out of order there should be no tendency to overfeeding. That such is not necessarily the case has been proven in many instances to the mystification of the driver."

With the two cycle automobile motor in a highly perfected state, as shown by the 1911 Elmore models, manufacturers of four-cylinder motors and a great army of drivers are seriously asking themselves whether or not they are in the midst of a revolution, or at least have reached a time when the advantages of the two cycle motor must be frankly conceded.

Harry Grant, the two-time winner of the Vanderbilt cup with the same Alco car, returned to his home in Boston when he learned that the grand prize race had been called off, but he did not go until after he had been the guest of honor at a dinner tendered by the American Locomotive Company. At the dinner Grant and his mechanic, Lee, and also his other helpers, were presented with substantial checks.

Drivers often complain at the time required in running viscous lubricating oils into their proper receptacles. Engine oils run fairly freely, provided the tank has a fair-sized aperture, but the coarser oils used for axles and gear boxes, and the thicker varieties used for high speed engines, often trickle very slowly, so that it is a tedious task to get them where they are wanted. The tendency of a very gentle heat applied for a few minutes to thin such oils almost to the consistency of water is not often taken advantage of. It is overlooked because these oils are known neither to burn nor vaporize except at high temperatures. If a can of oil is placed on a stove for a few minutes before being used, it can be used as readily as if it were gasoline. The same plan can be used for thinning oil to be put into dash lubricating tanks and for putting a reserve supply in a small can.

The first female chauffeur to be licensed in New York state has appeared.

Miss Natalie White, and the fact was not known over 24 hours when her services were secured by the purchaser of a new Thomas Flyer.

New York city now has a motor truck mart or-selling center where prospective users of commercial motor vehicles may see displayed under one roof several types of gasoline delivery wagons and trucks. One whole floor in a large building in Broadway, between Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth streets, has been leased by a combination of truck manufacturers and the offices, showrooms and accessory stores of interested concerns are located there.

The authorities of Pennsylvania have canceled only two registrations so far this year out of the more than 32,000 that have been issued since the beginning of the year. It has been decided that the number tags for cars registered during 1911 will have yellow backgrounds, with figures and letters in black. The keystone shaped seal and other features of the present blue and white tags will be retained.

"It is very possible," said Burton J. Westcott, president of the Westcott Motor Car Company of Richmond, Ind., "that yate and Australian hardwood may yet be one of the most important factors in the building of the automobile. Official tests of the many valuable hardwoods native to Western Australia have made known the extraordinary properties of yate, believed to be the strongest of all known woods. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equaling that of good cast iron. But many specimens are much stronger, and one was tested up to 17½ tons to the square inch, which is equal to the tensile strength of wrought iron. The sawn timber of yate is probably the strongest in the world. The tree grows to a maximum height of 100 feet, and has sometimes a diameter of 2½ or even 3 feet."

THOMAS FLYER

Victorious in High-Gear Test

A 6-40 Thomas has just completed a 2000-mile trip in ten days, passing through eight States entirely on high gear, the other speeds being eliminated and the transmission sealed. Sounds extravagant no doubt. It would have to us two years ago.

The Alleghany, White and Green Mountains, with their numerous water-breaks, were no obstacle and the car swept over those with ease. Anybody was privileged to drive and this feat on high gear is unprecedented, proving that whoever drives a Thomas makes no difference, where you go is no barrier, the distance is immaterial.

The average motorist would say these feats are impossible, and so it would be with most cars. In fact we do not know of another car which could equal this showing.

We are far-sighted enough to realize that the long-stroke, large-valve motor used practically exclusively abroad, is the most efficient, most powerful motor made, and, combined with six cylinders, is as near perfection as the science of man has yet attained.

SPEED UP! SLOW DOWN! How often do you suppose these requests are made during the course of a single year by automobilists at large? We venture to say thousands upon thousands of times, and only the six-cylinder, long-stroke Thomas is capable of instantly obeying these commands always on high gear, a great motor improvement that all high-grade cars must eventually adopt. A phenomenal saving mechanically, physically and mentally.

TO MEN WHO KNOW MOTOR VALUES it is scarcely necessary to point the moral! The elimination of the necessity for gear shifting removes the one barrier to the complete enjoyment of motoring. It avoids the jerks and jars that disturb every one when running in congested traffic. It avoids the rasping noise incident to gear shifting, so trying to one's composure. It makes smooth, steady, comfortable riding possible under all conditions of travel if your car is equipped with proper springs.

REMEMBER These features are found exclusively in THOMAS CARS, which alone have the great motor improvements that all high-grade cars must eventually adopt.

EARNED advertisers claim the advertising medium of par excellence is the publication reaching the home. The Christian Science Monitor is supreme in this class among the daily publications. In attaining this position, The Christian Science Monitor has not only secured a circulation of recognized quality through its four editions published each week day for the City of Boston and New England, but is also a factor in solving a problem that for a quarter of a century has been a much discussed feature in publishing circles, namely, a National Daily, The Monitor having two editions--- for national and international circulation.

As the pioneer in clean journalism, The Christian Science Monitor occupies a unique position, because it not only censors its news, but exerts every effort to protect its readers against fraudulent advertisements. The following statements are made by advertisers who have used the Monitor columns:

THE APPENDED STATEMENTS CAN BE VERIFIED IN THE MONITOR OFFICE

A Local Advertiser Informs Us:

Q "Please discontinue our advertisement. We have received so many inquiries productive of 'prospects' that we are unable to cope with them. We shall continue our advertisement when we have met the present demand."

A Local Hotel Manager States:

Q "My ad in The Monitor has kept my rooms continually occupied. I cannot help but notice an increase in business which, by careful observation, I attribute to this ad."

A National Advertiser Reports:

Sixty Thousand Troops Take Part in French Maneuvers

TROOPS UNDER GENERAL PICQUART WHO WERE MASSED AT PICARDY TO OPPOSE THE ADVANCE OF GENERAL MEUNIER. From left to right the photographs represent cuirassiers on the march, next another view of the same troops, third the staff of the third cavalry division, and fourth, the third cavalry (Dragoons) returning from maneuvers.

Each Side in Possession of One Hundred and Fifty Field Guns—Clement-Bayard Airship Does Good Work, Making Thirty Miles an Hour.

PICARDY—The French army maneuvers of 1910, which have just taken place, have been of more than usual interest, owing to the fact that they represented the landing of a German army corps on the northern coast of France, and its being held in check by the second (Amiens) army corps till the arrival of other troops from Paris. Some of the best French writers consider that in the event of war between France and Germany, if England remained neutral this would be the most probable line of advance, and some of the French papers always referred to the troops under General Meunier as the Germans. To give a more exact representation of what would happen if a landing did take place, General Meunier was only given a portion of his force on the first day of the maneuvers, and was each day reinforced by the troops who were supposed to have been landed since the previous day. General Picquart, commanding the defending or French force, was reinforced in a similar manner each day by the troops which were supposed to have reached him from the capital.

The orders given to the invading army were to detach an army corps to the northeast, in the direction of Beauvais and Amiens, to prevent the French from concentrating.

The task of General Picquart was to collect as quickly as possible all the troops in Picardy to oppose this advance, while the French commander-in-chief collected all troops available, including the garrison of Paris, and moved to join hands with him and drive the enemy back toward the sea. Some 60,000 troops took part in these maneuvers, including the first and third cavalry divisions, and a large number of zouaves, chasseurs a pied, and colonial infantry, from Paris and other garrisons. Each side had nearly 150 field guns, this being the first time that French troops have worked with such a large number of guns compared to the number of men engaged, and one of the most interesting points in the maneuvers was how to make use of so many guns. As events turned out, General Meunier, who was an old artillery officer, succeeded in bringing every one of his guns into action, while on General Picquart's side there were many batteries which never came into action during the seven days' maneuvers.

The first three days were spent in forced marches to seize points of vantage, and in bringing up as many men as possible to hold these points as long as possible and so give time for the concentration of the larger bodies in rear. Then followed attempts to outmaneuver each other, and a stand on the part of the invaders on the plateau of Morvilliers, between Rouen and Amiens, and a three days attempt on the part of the French force to dislodge them.

All arms had very hard marching during the first three days and stood the test well, in spite of the heavy kits carried by the infantry. There were a large number of reservists in the ranks, some regiments having over 1000, or about one-third of their strength, but these did their work as cheerfully and as well as their younger comrades, and very few men fell out in any of the regiments. This was no doubt owing to the custom of billeting the men at night instead of exposing them to the rigors of a chance bivouac, and to the way in which the men shake down at every temporary halt and cook for themselves. Their wants were also catered to by traveling kitchens which came up at the close of maneuvers each day with a ready cooked meal for the men before they dispersed to their billets.

The large numbers of cavalry on both sides led to expectations of brilliant cavalry work, as officers and men of the French cavalry are second to none in the world, and are beautifully mounted on thoroughly well broken horses. The wooded and hilly nature of the country, however, made the movements and action of cavalry in large bodies very difficult. There was, however, one notable example, when the but the actual test of war could really decide the question.

The great feature of the training of the French army is its aggressiveness. It never waits on the defense, but always is ready to attack. This was well instanced on the last day of the maneuvers, when General Meunier, instead of waiting to be attacked in his position, moved out his whole force and tried with considerable success to anticipate the attack of General Picquart's troops. A French captain advancing down a village street found the further end of the village held by the enemy. Instead of trying to get his men under cover, he continued his advance right up to the enemy. An umpire came up and asked why he advanced. His reply was, "Quand j'ai mauvaise position toujours j'avance." An army animated by this spirit will be hard to beat in time of war.

A large number of foreign officers watched the maneuvers, including the chief of the Prussian general staff and the newly elected President of Brazil, himself a soldier and, till his election, commander-in-chief of the Brazilian army. All followed the maneuvers with the greatest keenness, not only with a view to seeing the working of the troops, but also to see what the French call "the fourth arm," the airships and aeroplanes—could do. France today leads the world in aviation, and no other country could have shown such good work. There were four large airships or dirigibles, of which the latest and best was the Clement-Bayard, carrying seven passengers, including an operator for its installation of wireless telegraphy, and moving in calm weather at the rate of 15 yards a second, or about 30 miles an hour. It did everything that was required in the way of observation, and on one occasion during the maneuvers took dispatches to Paris and returned to its hangar.

In addition to the airships, each side was supplied with aeroplanes, both biplanes and monoplanes, and these were piloted by the best French aviators, who are all officers of the reserve, and carried trained officers as observers. These machines were out on many occasions when it was too windy for the airships to venture, and the information they were able to bring back enabled each commander to know exactly what his opponent was trying to do and resulted in many hurried changes of plan on both sides, and on one occasion in the surprise and crushing defeat of the first cavalry division. So far these airships and aeroplanes do not carry any weapons, but machine guns and field guns had been mounted on fast motor cars to chase and destroy them.

Large numbers of people came out to see the maneuvers and took the greatest interest in the proceedings. The President of the republic was present on one day, but only stayed half an hour with the troops, which occasioned considerable comment in the Paris papers, especially as it was known that the maneuvers had been specially arranged that day so that he would be able to visit the troops without inconvenience to himself.

It was in this difficult country that General Manteuffel defeated the army of Rouen in its ill-fated attempt to relieve Paris in the Franco-German war of 1870. The French army of today, however, is in a very different state of preparation from the army of the empire in 1870, which was reported to be ready to the last button, but when the test came lacked everything that was essential to the soldier and was without a trained staff to control it.

LOWER RATES PROMISED.

RENO, Nev.—Telegraph rates in Nevada between the Ely district and other parts of the state will be materially reduced within a short time, when the Western Union corporation takes over the line owned and operated by the Northern Nevada railway between Coburn, on the Southern Pacific and Ely, a distance of 140 miles. At present a high rate is charged for tolls going over this line.

"PEACE THE WHOLE OBJECT OF WAR"

Will the perfected aeroplane make for universal peace, or will it be a new agency for war? Will the navy whose ships are destroyed by bombs dropped from the hands of aviators hasten to declare a cessation of hostilities, or will its government hurriedly subsidize private aircraft to meet the opponent in the air, or appropriate money for the purchase of guns made especially to fight the airman from the land or the water? These were proper questions to ask of an army officer who can look back over a period of service dating from before the outbreak of the civil war. The opinion of the man who helped to open up the great plains of the West in the face of Indian hostility; the man who, as commander of the Rocky mountain division after the close of the war, performed a work that makes his name remembered in the West of today—the opinion of such a man on such a subject might be of some worth. And so the interviewer waited in the parlor of Brig-Gen. Henry B. Carrington's home in Hyde Park.

When the general entered the room, however, his reply to the propounded questions left the aeroplane far behind in his consideration of the tendencies that make for war and peace. In the free navigation of the air the general sees a tendency toward confused relationships among men and nations that needs to be properly controlled. But on the broader question of war itself he says: "It is absolutely certain that no human intellect has ever conceived, nor can the finite man conceive, of any remedy for vice or crime, except it be a revelation of the heart itself, until it be controlled absolutely by the Golden Rule.

DELAY BUILDING POSTOFFICE.

PASADENA, Cal.—The building of the new Pasadena postoffice for which the recent session of Congress appropriated $200,000 will be delayed for some time, according to Postmaster J. W. Wood. He recently received word from the supervising architect of the United States treasury department to the effect that the department will be glad to listen to proposals as to the architecture for the proposed structure, to the end that the building shall harmonize with other public and private buildings of the city.

"Moreover, there never has been a civilization, up to the present hour, that has prospered thoroughly, either in governmental forms, religious ceremonies, or social happiness and virtue, that has not gained its incubating, fostering and developing force in Christianity itself. Not a race has existed on the face of the earth that has not cherished some conception of some invisible, but all-sufficient, agency by which man could be rescued from enemies or evil; while every

MEASURE PASSES SECOND READING

MELBOURNE, Victoria—The bill to enable the federal government to take over, with the view of ultimately developing the northern territory of South Australia, has passed its second reading in the Senate without a division. It is generally admitted that it is entirely contrary to the interests of Australia to leave the northern territory in its present undeveloped condition, and it is expected that, although there may be some opposition the bill will eventually be passed.

BRIG-GEN. HENRY B. CARRINGTON.

DECLARES NOTED VETERAN WARRIOR

one of them, separated from Christianity, pure and simple, has either fallen into wild and grotesque idolatry, or as wild and grotesque superstition that had neither brain wisdom nor intelligent common sense to give it sustaining and effective value.

"In war the heaviest armament and the best-drilled members must win. But, as the whole object of legitimate war is to prevent war and secure peace, the true germ of peace must be that already foreshadowed in the inner spirit of every man or woman who seeks peace.

"Therefore, as you magnify agencies that are hostile to peace, so in the exact proportion are you rendering peace impossible, until mankind recognizes that the true gospel of peace is to end war and bring about the time when the most secluded hamlet is a retired country village shall become as safe as if under the frowning battlements of the strongest fortress or agency of defense human ingenuity ever fashioned."

And here is the last word this famous Indian fighter had to say on the subject: The inner peace is the seed of the universal peace. This is the deep-rooted conviction of a man who has forced peace upon Red Cloud Sioux by means of the rifle and the cannon.

General Carrington is a leader among members of the Grand Army of the Republic. He was district delegate from Pittsburg in 1894, delegate-at-large from Louisville next year, district delegate from San Francisco in 1896 and delegate-at-large from Toledo in 1908, in which year he delivered the address at the Sheridan memorial exercises in Nebraska. To this ceremony, at which were present the survivors of the Indian campaigns that started Nebraska upon its road to fame as a state, General Carrington was accompanied by his wife, who is sometimes called the Florence Nightingale of the South and West. Her recently published book, "Army Life on the Plains," describes many of her husband's deeds while the western wilderness was being opened and made safe for settlement.

INCREASE IN BANK DEPOSITS.

A PRINCE'S WISH

RICH and powerful boys, as well as rich and powerful men, often yearn for the freedom which belongs to those with less dignity to sustain, and sigh for the pleasures of the common people. This is well illustrated by an anecdote of the son of Queen Hortense of Holland, which was told by Madame Ducrest.

On one occasion the boy was seated near the window in the palace looking toward the park and appeared to view with indifference the many presents which were spread before him. His looks were constantly directed toward the grand avenue in front of the palace. Feeling impatient at his appearing less delighted than she expected, the Queen asked him if he were not grateful for his grandmother's attention in procuring for him every toy he could wish.

"Indeed, I am, mamma," the boy replied. "But I am not surprised at her kindness; she is always so good to me that I am accustomed to it."

"Do you find no enjoyment in those pretty toys?"

"Indeed, I do, mamma. But—"

"What, then?"

"I am very anxious for something else."

"Mention it, my son. Depend upon my giving it to you."

"Oh, mamma, you will refuse me!"

"Is it money for the poor?"

"Papa gave me some this morning. It is already distributed. What I want is—"

"Tell me, dearest child. You know how I love you. Rest assured that I want to begin the year by giving you whatever you most wish."

"My dear mamma, I want you to allow me to walk in that heap of mud at the

WAYS OF "STRIKING A LIGHT"

THE world was thousands of years old before matches were known. The little tip of the match looks very simple, yet it is made of so many substances put together that it took chemists years to discover just what materials should be used in making it.

Sometimes uncivilized people rub two dry pieces of wood together until one catches fire. Often they use two stones, striking one against the other until a spark falls amid some dry leaves and starts a blaze.

The Australian bushman uses a method of his own to procure a light. First he selects two pieces of light wood, each about a foot long, from the pile of dry leaves. On this strip of wood he kneels in order to hold down the ends. Then he rolls the other pointed stick between the palms of his hands so that it bores a hole into the flat strip of wood. This makes fine wood dust which catches fire, sending its spark among the dry leaves. By blowing upon the tiny light the bushman soon has a fine fire which he feeds with more leaves.

The Malay sailors follow much the same plan as the bushman. They use a piece of split bamboo, making a notch across its hollow side. Sawing into this notch slowly, then rapidly with a sharp-edged piece of bamboo, wood dust is soon made. This catches fire and falls upon the dry leaves which the sailor has placed to catch the sparks. In the forests of South America the natives often strike two stones together until the little spark flies out. Instead of using dry leaves to receive this tiny bit of fire they build little heaps of fluffy bird feathers.

"Striking a light" is a term which has come to us from our ancestors. They struck two flint stones together until the spark flew into a tinder box of charred threads of linen. This tiny light was blown into a flame. Then a match tipped with brimstone or sulphur was lighted from the little fire so that the candles or stove fires might be lighted. These tinder boxes and the brimstone matches were always kept where they were easy to get.

WHAT ROBIN TOLD.

How do the robins build their nests?
Robin Redbreast told me.
First a wisp of amber hay
In a pretty round they lay,
Then some shreds of downy floss,
Feathers, too, and bits of moss,
Woven with a sweet, sweet song,
This way, that way, and across;
That's what Robin told me.

Where do the Robins hide their nests?
Robin Redbreast told me.
Up among the leaves so deep,
Where the sunbeams rarely creep;
Long before the winds are cold,
Long before the leaves are gold,
Bright-eyed stars will peep, and see Baby robins, one, two, three;
That's what Robin told me.

TREE IN THIMBLE.

Little oak trees, 1½ inches in height,
Are grown by Chinese gardeners. They

RED-EYED VIREO.

This is our best known vireo, so named because of the red iris of its eye, a mark, however, which may be seen only at a short distance. This bird is a denizen of the shade trees and orchard as well as the woodlands, and from its leafy bower its song is heard almost incessantly during the summer, even at midday.

The red-eyed Vireo is a gentle, fearless, lovable little fellow. The peculiar style of his song has led to his being called the preacher bird.

Both sexes have the same plumage—the crown dull gray with black stripes on either side, and a distinct white line over the eye. The upper parts are light olive-green, the under parts pure white. They arrive in the vicinity of New York the first of May, nest as far north as Labrador, and winter in the tropics, says Albert Field Gilmore, in "Birds Through the Year."

PAPER AND ITS VARIOUS USES

LINEN is often used in making paper, but there are other things that answer the purpose. Patents have been issued in this country and Europe for the manufacture of paper from barley, oats, rice, Indian corn, peas, beans, alfalfa, pine needles, sugarcane, jute, moss, seaweed, tobacco, lichens the leaves and bark of trees, beets and potatoes. In the greater number of cases the price of manufacture is excessive when the quality of paper is considered.

The great quantity of paper made in this country is manufactured from different woods. Paper can be made from almost anything, and almost anything can be made from paper. Compressed paper is made into car wheels, cannons, rails, horseshoes, polishers for gems and asphalted tubes for gas or electric wires. In Berlin bricks are made of paper pulp and zinc sulphate. They are subjected to a great pressure and then baked in a very hot fire for 48 hours. These bricks have been used for paving streets.

Clothing, window frames, lanterns, umbrellas, handkerchiefs and artificial leather are made from paper in Japan.

In the United States and Germany are made paper barrels, vases, drinking cups and milk bottles. And straw hats can be purchased that contain not one atom of straw. An inventor has taken out a patent on a paper thread to be used in the sewing of shoes.—Exchange.

HELPING YOURSELF

GET the dictionary and look it up yourself, dear."

"But, auntie, it is so much easier to ask you."

"Of course it is, Betty, but, if I tell you today, you will have forgotten by tomorrow and will have to ask again. There is a homely old saying that fits you all too well: 'Easy come and easy go.'"

"Oh, dear! the dictionary is such a great big thing and I am never anywhere near it when I want to look up a word."

It down carefully with its definition for—one you could carry about with you? If you will look up every word you are not sure of in the big dictionary and write it down carefully with its definition for—let me see—yes, for one month, I will give you the best and prettiest pocket dictionary that I can buy at the end of that time."

"What a dear auntie you are! It's a bargain! I promise to do my part faithfully."

And so one little girl formed the habit of consulting that wonderful book, the dictionary.

The beginning of the school year is a good time to make good resolutions. Will you not try this year, little cousin, to get just as much as you can out of your lessons instead of skimming them over quickly and asking other people for help that you could give yourselves? The things that we look up ourselves and that we teach ourselves are the ones that we always remember.—Christian Intelligencer.

SENATOR A BRIGHT EXAMPLE

THE father of Elihu Root was professor of mathematics at Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., and as young Elihu was a marvel at mathematics, it was expected that he would follow in the footsteps of his father. But when the time came to make the choice of his future profession young Root chose to go to New York to study law.

"I'll give you some letters that will help you," said his father.

"Thank you, but I don't want them," said his son respectfully, but decidedly. "I'm starting out to do this myself, without any family 'pull.' And I don't care for any financial help either."

He went into the office of a well-known firm of New York lawyers and paid his way by private tutoring in mathematics. For two years he lived on 50 cents a day. But he was an acknowledged leader at the New York bar by the time he was 30.

It is said that Mr. Root gave up the practise that meant an income of at least $300,000 a year, to pilot the ship of state for a salary of $8000 a year.—Portland Express and Advertiser.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD
WESTWARD FROM BOSTON.—XXIX.

ONE who has time at his command may spend weeks and months profitably and with interest in Rome, but without further description of its sights, we pass on to Florence, which also abounds in works of art.

Florence, Italian Firenze, "la bella," retains more nearly her medieval character as a city than any other large place in Italy. Every street bears reference to some person known in the arts, in discovery, poetry or statesmanship, and the names of Fra Angelico, Giotto, Leonardo da Vinci, Michael Angelo, Raphael, Galileo, Dante Alighieri, Giovanni Boccaccio, Girolamo Savonarola, Lorenzo de Medici and Machiavelli are indissolubly connected with the proud history of this great city.

Florence is charmingly situated in the valley of the River Arno, which bisects the city. Let us proceed at once to the Duomo (Santa Maria del Fiore), begun in 1296 by the architect Arnolfo di Cambio, who was succeeded by Giotto and Andrea Pisano. The dome was planned and executed by Filippo Brunelleschi. The present facade is modern, being finished in 1887. The interior contains bronze and terra cotta work by Luca della Robbia and stained glass windows attributed to Ghiberti. In front of the cathedral is the wonderful campanile or bell tower of Giotto, in Italian-Gothic style, richly decorated with colored marbles. Ruskin has described it as the best combination of beauty and power ever produced by man.

The Piazza della Signoria was the forum of the republic and the scene of many startling events in the city's varied history. On the piazza fronts the Palazzo Vecchio, finished in 1334, the exterior unchanged as it stands today. It was the seat of the Signoria, or governing body of the republic, afterward the residence of Cosimo I., and is now the city hall.

HER ESSAY WON HER A HOME

FROM a tenement in the slums to the home of a wealthy foster mother who has come to love her as her own child, is the good fortune that has fallen on the curly head of Lillie Coulbey. Here is the story:

Twelve years ago Lillie opened her eyes to life in a squalid home on one of the poorest streets of St. Joseph, Mo. When she was 8 years old the authorities took the child from her evil surroundings and placed her in the state industrial school for girls at Chillicothe.

Last year John H. Curran, immigration commissioner, offered two prizes for the best and second best essays on "Missouri and Its Resources," to be written by school children of the state. Lillie Coulbey took the second prize and clapped her hands gleefully when it turned out to be—what do you suppose?—a fine, fat Holstein cow.

Lillie's cow gave more than creamy milk; she gave a hint—the hint that in the state industrial school at Chillicothe was a little girl worth finding out about.

Mrs. John Harding of St. Joseph was the one who took the hint. And now little orphan Lillie is going to her house

In one corner of the piazza the Loggia dei Lanzi, an open-vaulted hall of magnificent proportions, was erected in 1376. It contains a number of statues, among them Perseus with the head of Medusa in bronze, by Benvenuto Cellini, and Judith and Holofernes in bronze, by Donatello.

The Palazzo degli Uffizi contains the celebrated picture gallery the basis of which was the collections of paintings made by the Medici. It is now one of the largest and most valuable in the world, containing masterpieces of painting by Raphael, Titian, del Piombo, Perugino, Michael Angelo, Durer, Correggio, and famous sculptures.

By a long, enclosed passageway across the river, the traveler can reach the Palazzo Pitti, situated on the left bank of the Arno. This palace is the residence of the King when he visits Florence. Its left wing contains the famous picture gallery which is a continuation of the Uffizi. Here are a dozen of Raphael's most brilliant works, and Titian, Paolo Veronese, Rubens, Andrea del Sarto, Fra Bartolomeo, Tintoretto and many others are most admirably represented.

The Cathedral museum, near the cathedral, containing Luca della Robbia's and Donatello's celebrated reliefs of singing children, should not be omitted by the traveler.

The Church of Santa Croce, built by Arnolfo di Cambio in 1294, in the Gothic style, is the Pantheon of Florence. Its marble pulpit by Benedetto da Majano is much admired.

The Ponte Vecchio, the most picturesque and quaintest bridge in the world, rebuilt in 1345 on the site of an early Roman bridge, leads across the Arno. Other places of interest include the house of Dante and the beautiful parks.

WHAT BUOYS TELL

WHEN you enter any harbor in the world where the channel is marked by buoys, you will find that those on your right, as you pass in, are painted red, and those on your left black. If you should see one painted in red and black horizontal bands, the ship should run as close to it as possible, because that indicates the center of a narrow channel.

Buoys with red and black vertical stripes always mark the end of spits and the outer and inner ends of extensive reefs, where there is a channel on each side. When red and black checkers are painted on a buoy, it marks either a rock in the open sea or an obstruction in the harbor of small extent, with channel all around.

If there are two such obstructions and a channel between them, the buoy on the right of you will have red and white checkers and the one on your left will have black and white checkers.

When a wreck obstructs the channel, a green buoy will be placed on the sea-side of the wreck, with the word "wreck" plainly painted on it in white letters, provided there is a clear channel all around it; otherwise, an even number will be painted in white above the word "wreck" when the buoy is on the right side of the channel, and an odd number if the buoy is on the left.—Selected.

MONITOR BOOK OF GAMES

"CLOTHESPIN."

DIVIDE the players into two sides and arrange them in two lines facing each other. At each end of both lines place a chair. Upon the opposite chairs at one end of the line place an equal number of bundles of clothespins tied loosely together with strings. That is, tie together beforehand six or eight such bundles. Divide the bundles equally between the chairs at the end of the line; that is to say, place one half of the bundles on each of the two chairs.

Having selected an umpire to settle all disputes, at a signal from him, the players nearest the chairs pick up a bundle and pass it from the hand nearest the chair into the other hand, and then to the next player's hand, who passes it in the same way, and as quickly as possible, until it reaches the player next to the chair at the other end of the line, who then places it in the chair.

In the mean time the player nearest the chair on which the bundles lie has no sooner passed the first bundle than he takes up another, and so all the bundles are passed as rapidly as possible until they have been placed upon the chairs at the other end of the line. The side that passes its bundles first wins, the umpire deciding. Clothespins so tied are awkward to handle, and are quite likely to be dropped while passing down the line. The side whose player drops a bundle, or any of the pins out of a bundle, loses without finishing the game.

The game may be played with soft rubber balls, or with bean bags, or with a variety of articles on each side, but the articles on the two sides must be duplicates. For instance, each side may have a book, a box, a ball, a paper weight, a hat brush, an old glove stuffed with paper, or any other articles readily obtainable. The variety of form in the articles makes them harder to handle in passing down the line, and more likely to be dropped.

THE JUNIOR PHILATELIST

Bi-weekly department covering stamp-collecting interests.

EDITED BY J. RUSSELL REED,
39 Ridge Avenue, Cambridge, Mass.

THE first letter postage in this country dates back to 1639, when the General Court of Massachusetts passed an order that all letters brought and sent over the seas should be taken to the house of Richard Fairbanks, who lived in Boston. Mr. Fairbanks was therefore the first postmaster in the United States, and for this service he received one penny for each letter. In 1672 a monthly mail was established between Boston and New York and 30 years later was changed to a fortnightly one. In those days the rate of postage was according to the distance the letter had to go. The amount charged for carrying a letter 30 miles or less was 6 cents. Letters sent between 60 and 80 miles cost 8 cents and one had to pay 10 cents to have a letter carried between 60 and 100 miles. It cost 25 cents to carry a letter 450 miles.

HOW STAMPS BECAME RARE.

There are two ways in which a stamp becomes rare. First, when only a few copies of a certain stamp remain in existence, and second, through a printer's error. The fact that a printer can make a stamp rare through a mistake is somewhat curious. For an example we have the stamps issued by the United States in 1869 celebrating the centenary of the Declaration of Independence. Three of the values were printed with the centers inverted and are now worth over $500. When the Pan-American stamps were issued in 1901 some of the 1 and 2-cent values were printed with the pictures of the steamship and train upside down. A 2-cent India stamp was issued with King Edward's head inverted and they are worth many times the price of the same stamp without the error.

A remarkable idea for raising the price of stamps was used a few years ago by one of the postal attaches of the Serbian government. A large number of stamps issued in 1903 bearing the head of King Alexander were found in one of the postal department's warehouses and before they could be sold this postal clerk suggested that if half the stamps were destroyed the remainder would greatly appreciate in value. The minister acted upon this suggestion and now stamp collectors have offered $330,000 for half of what they once rated as worth $29,000.

BEFORE STAMPS WERE USED.

The editor of this department has received three letters from Margaret Potter, Wonevoo, Wis., which are of great interest because they show how the postage was paid before stamps were in use. One of the letters was written in 1838 and is folded in the shape of an envelope. In the upper righthand corner is written in ink "90," showing that the amount of postage paid was 90 cents. The other two letters are of later date, one being written in 1853 and on the envelope is stamped inside of a circle "Paid 3." The other was written in 1856 and on this is written "Paid 3."

PRECANCELS.

A precancel is a stamp already bearing a cancellation when purchased. Precancels appear in different forms, but the most common are two heavy bars extending across the face between which appear the name of the office, date, etc. These stamps are used on second-class matter, the object being to reduce the number of pieces of mail requiring post-marking after being mailed.

PRESS REVIEW.

The Philatelic West, Superior, Neb., September—The West, as it is more familiarly known, is the largest collectors' paper published, consisting of 100 pages. While a goodly portion is devoted to philately it contains departments on coins, post cards, curios, antiques and literature. This number has several good articles, among them being, "A New United States Official Stamp" and "The Cry of the Young Collector." Several illustrations are given of Kansas City, Mo., where the Southern Philatelic Association has been holding its convention this week.

Everybody's Philatelist, Astoria, Ore., August—The publisher, Dr. John Milton Holt, tells his readers that he issues this magazine purely as a recreation with the recommendation to the uninitiated to try the pastime of stamp collecting. "Philately in Seattle" is a short article telling how, in the early nineties several exchanges and clubs were started, but later on, during hard times, the clubs were disbanded and most of the collections were sold. Last year, however, a club was formed that now consists of some 25 members.

The Stamp Collector, Columbus, O.—A feature of this journal is Billkins, which is the name of a paper before published in magazine form, but which has been combined with the Collector. It is a philatelic magazine of mirth. A check list of philatelic publications is being compiled in this journal by the historian of the American Philatelic Literature Society, and will be published in book form.

The Philatelic Tribune, Norwich, N. Y.—This is a revival of the old Philatelic Tribune published by Frank J. Stanton in 1885. Although small, it contains much to hold the reader's interest.

SQUIRREL'S FOSTER MOTHER.

Eddie Smith, who lives about three miles from the village of Downing, Wis., found a gray squirrel's nest in the woods near his home in which were two baby squirrels curled up asleep. He took the little creatures home with him, thinking to keep them for pets, but was at a loss as to how to feed them. Finally he took them and placed them beside an old mother cat who had several kittens. Eddie was surprised to see that puss treated the new-comers exactly as though they were her own offspring.

Eddie had a splendid home made for his pets, to keep them out of mischief. The squirrel-house was placed among some trees on the lawn before his home. It is made of wire screen and is larger than a piano box. It has a pagoda-like appearance and is divided into compartments which have wheels, cozy nests, and are in all respects fitted up so as to make an ideal home for the furry tenants.

The squirrels are fully grown now. Puss visits them yet as frequently as possible and has never outgrown her love for them.—Mary Alden Carver, in Our Dumb Animals.

MACHINE TO WEIGH COINS.

An interesting machine has been installed in the United States mints for the automatic weighing of coins of all denominations. Last year the government coined nearly 9,000,000 pieces of gold and 36,000,000 pieces of silver. Formerly each piece was weighed by hand. Sitting at long tables, women, with a balance in front of them, counted the money. It was their duty to weigh each piece. Pieces that were too heavy were reduced with a file and those that were too light were thrown aside to be placed again in the melting pot. Gold pieces were weighed twice, once in blank and once after coining.

The new weighing machines have each 10 balances, which are set according to the required weight of the coin which is being tested. They then work automatically, each machine taking 10 coins at a time. The movement of the beams of the scale determines into which of several shuttles the weighted coin shall drop. "If it is too light the scale beam moves up and the coin is dropped into the 'lights.' If it is too heavy the coin falls into the 'heavies.' If it just balances the coin drops among those that are of the proper weight. The work, going on in this manner, is very rapid and accurate.—Exchange.

Children's Camera Contest

Award to Irma Prall, Livermore, Cal.

HERE is a little girl who is evidently a lover of dogs. She seems to have no other companions, and doubtless she finds the members of this canine trio ever ready for a playful run, as well as faithful and protecting friends. If she has a favorite, perhaps it is the one on whose head rests her hand. He has a good face and is probably much attached to his little mistress. The photo was sent by Miss Irma Prall of Livermore, Cal., who gets this week's award of one dollar.

Honorable mention—Virginia Sharpe, Chicago; Anna S. English, Wabash, Ind. In The Monitor's camera contest $1 will be paid for the best photograph received each week. The subjects may be historic places, quaint houses, parks, picturesque landscapes, marine views, river views, old bridges, school gardens, or playgrounds, or children at play. With the photograph should be sent a title and the location of the view. If a suitable description story of not over 200 words comes with the picture and is used it will be paid for. Write name and address plainly and enclose stamps if return of the picture is desired. Send to "Children's Page," The Christian Science Monitor, Falmouth and St. Paul streets, Boston, Mass.

THE FOUR RABBITS

ONE morning, very early, four rabbits with long, soft ears and bright pink eyes started off to find a home.

"We must have grass," said the first rabbit.

"We must have plenty of carrots," said the second rabbit.

"We must try and find a kind little girl," said the third rabbit.

So off hopped the four, and on down the road they went until they came to a garden gate wide open. Inside the gate there was green grass, and beyond it a patch of carrots. But there came strange sounds from the garden.

"I will dig up the flowers! I won't keep my wagon in the path! I will get my pinafore dirty if I please!"

"Ah!" said the rabbits, "this would not be a good place to live."

So the four rabbits hopped along the road until they came to a second garden gate standing open. The garden was full of fresh green leaves all ready to nibble. There were carrots, too, and young cabbage sprouts, and tufts of parsley; but, alas, "It's my cooky!" a child was saying. "I don't wish to share it with the baby! Give it to me, I say!"

"This is not the home for us," said the four rabbits as they hopped away.

Then, after a while, the four rabbits came hopping along to a third garden gate. The gate was wide open, and inside were wonderful things—clumps of clover and patches of parsnips and beds of nasturtiums and carrots and green grass.

Then there came a voice from the garden:

"Mother, dear, I've finished all my sewing, and I watered the flowers, and I picked up all my toys. Was there anything else to do?"

"This is the best garden we have found yet," said the four rabbits, hopping in through the gate. "Here we come, little girl!"

So the four rabbits with long, soft ears and light pink eyes lived with the little girl and played with her, and had all the green grass and carrots they could eat.—Carolyn S. Bailey, in the Mayflower.

DOWN INTO THE OCEAN DEPTHS

THE great bodies of water called seas and oceans hold many mysteries for us. And anything pertaining to them interests the young student of geology. The following is quoted from a work on the depth of the sea.

"The mean depth of the oceanic depression is about 14,000 feet, and the mean height of the land (according to Murry), 2522 feet. The greatest depths reached by soundings (south of the Friendly Islands) is 30,930 feet; the greatest height on the land (Mt. Everest of the Himalayas) is 29,000 feet. If the continental plateaus and the floor of the ocean were graded to common level, the ocean would still have a depth of about 10,000 feet. The mean height of Europe is 939 feet, Asia 3189 feet, Africa 2021 feet, Australia 805 feet, North America 1888 feet, South America 2078 feet. The mean depths of the main oceans are: Of the North Atlantic 15,000 feet, North Pacific 16,000 feet, South Atlantic and South Pacific and probably the Indian ocean about 13,000 feet.

"The form of the ocean's bed has been fairly accurately determined. From north to south, along the middle of the Atlantic, there is a wide zigzag ridge or plateau, conforming nearly in trend to the American coast. It lies at a depth of 6000 to 12,000 feet, while on the other side the bottom slopes away to depths mostly between 15,000 and 20,000 feet. North of the island of Porto Rico the United States coast survey steamer Blake found, in 1883, a depth of 27,360 feet. This greatest depth and large areas of deep water exist in the western part of the ocean.

"In the Pacific ocean a shallow area extends, with little interruption, from the Malay archipelago southeastward to the Isthmus of Panama, southwestward to Patagonia, and southward to the Antarctic. The deepest parts of this ocean are also in the western half. One deep area is east of Japan; another, south of the Ladrones; others, near the Friendly Islands.

"Northward in the northern hemisphere the ocean shallows rapidly. The depth in Bering strait is not over 150 feet, and between Great Britain and Iceland it does not exceed 5000 feet, and is mostly under 3000 feet.

"The ocean's bottom has no steep ridges like those of ordinary mountain scenery. But broad elevations exist in some parts, as found in the soundings of the Tuscara between the Hawaiian Islands and Japan. Besides these, there are many mountain ranges rising somewhat abruptly from the depths, having the islands of the oceans as their summits, which rival in length those of the continents.

"Along the oceanic borders the sea is often, for a long distance out, quite shallow, because the continents continue under water with a nearly level surface; then comes, usually at a depth of about 100 fathoms, or 600 feet, a rather sudden slope to the deep sea bed. This is the case off the eastern coast of the United States, east and south of New England. Off New Jersey the deep water begins along a line about 80 miles from shore; off Virginia this line is 50 to 60 miles at sea and thus it gradually approaches the coast to the southward; while to the northward it continues 80 to 100 miles off from the New England coast, and passes far outside of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland."

THE NOISY CUCKOOS.

The members of the cuckoo family are very numerous in India and are divided into two subfamilies. The first of these contains all the true cuckoos; these all have loud call notes, feed on insects, do not pair and deposit their eggs in the nests of other birds. They are almost all gray above and more or less banded below. The plumage of some is very like that of the hawk. There is a genus of small cuckoos, the males of which exhibit brilliant colors. I have met with the emerald cuckoo and the banded bay cuckoo, both very handsome birds, writes S. S. Deane in the Christian Advocate. The former has plumage of brilliant emerald green, with a rich, golden gloss, while beneath it is white, with cross bars of shining green. These I have only seen in dense forests, for they are very shy birds. The "common hawk cuckoo" is one of the best known of the family and this from his call, which is so loud and shrill that it often becomes unbearable.

In the hills an equally noisy cuckoo is "the Indian cuckoo." The hill men believe that it is only heard when the berry of the kaiphul tree (Myrica Sapida) is ripening, and its call is said to be a repetition of the words, "The kaiphul is ripe."

The Day in the Playhouse World

BOSTON THEATERS NEXT WEEK.
"The Lily," with Miss Nance O'Neil, at the Hollis, "Girls," at the Castle Square, "Annie Laurie" at the Globe, and Barney Gilmore in an Irish play at the Grand Opera House are the new attractions at the theaters next week. Other playhouses continue their current attractions.

Hollis—Miss Nance O'Neil in "The Lily."

One of the most remarkable events in Boston theatrical history was the prolonged engagement here several years ago of Miss Nance O'Neil. She was presented for a limited season at the Tremont in "Macbeth," "Magda," "Camille," "Judith of Bethulia," "Queen Elizabeth" and other modern and classic plays, and achieved such a success before crowded houses that when forced to leave because of imperative bookings she went in turn to the stages of the Hollis and the Colonial, in each case playing to full houses. Last season Miss O'Neil came under the direction of David Belasco, and was cast in a leading role in "The Lily," his adaptation of a French play by Wolf and Le Roux. Miss O'Neil poured her tragic forces into the performance of an "old maid" who rises in passionate revolt against her father when he would keep her younger sister from marrying because it would disturb his selfish plans. The young girl has her romance and is defended by her elder sister. Miss O'Neil's performance, together with that of the father by Charles Cartwright as the father, made "The Lily" a much talked of drama in New York last season. The original company comes to the Hollis Monday evening, and includes besides Miss O'Neil and Mr. Cartwright, Miss Julia Dean, Bruce McRae and Miss Antoinette Walker. The latter was long the gentle Jennie in "The Music Master."

Castle Square—"Girls."

John Craig's players at the Castle Square will have an amusing vehicle for their talents next week in Clyde Fitch's "Girls." Mr. Craig will have the part of a young man who is forced by circumstances to take refuge in the apartment occupied jointly and ingeniously by three young girls sworn to abstain from the company of young men. The intruder, of course, proves the "fate" of one of the damsels, and the others are straightway plunged into sentimental adventures, also. Miss Young will play the chief man hater, and there are a round dozen interesting characters for Messrs. Meek, Hassell, Roberts, the Messrs. Colcord and Shirley, and the others.

Globe—"Annie Laurie."

Miss Lillian Bacon will be offered as star in "Annie Laurie" at the Globe Monday evening. This romantic play was offered by a local stock company two summers ago and found much favor with its audiences. The action proceeds in a period offering opportunity for handsome costumes and elaborate scenery, and the play itself is filled with incidents of adventure and sentiment. A large number of singers are employed in one of the scenes, and the principals are talented, it is promised.

"The Chocolate Soldier" Coming.

Fresh from its success in New York, where it ran for 300 nights at the Casino, "The Chocolate Soldier" comes to the Majestic theater for a limited engagement on Oct. 17. London critics are proclaiming the opera as the most delightful since the old Savoy days of Gilbert and Sullivan. Oscar Straus' delightful music exactly fits the satirical idea that runs through George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," from which the libretto was made in Austria and brought back to English again by Stanislaus Stange. The Whitney Opera Company may well be looked upon as a grand opera organization. It carries an orchestra of 40 men under the direction of Signor A. DeNovellis, perhaps the largest that ever interpreted comic opera in this country.

Other Announcements.

Barney Gilmore, the popular Irish singing comedian, will come to the Grand Opera House Monday evening in "Kelley From the Emerald Isle," a romantic play of Erin that will give the star full play for his varied talents.

Burr McIntosh, after a pleasant experience as star in "A Gentleman From Mississippi," has returned to vaudeville and will be seen at B. F. Keith's next week in a new sketch written by himself called "Out Yonder," dealing with Arizona life. Others are Jack Wilson, extemporaneous comedian; Snowden and Benham in a musical and dancing act; Miss Irene Dillon, singer; the Pederson brothers, acrobats; the Bergere players in a sketch, and Hal Merritt.

"As You Like It" and "Macbeth," which have been added to the repertory of E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe since their last engagement here, will be seen during the engagement of the stars beginning Oct. 24 at the Shubert, according to present plans. "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Romeo and Juliet" will probably be played also. "Seven Days," a farce long popular in New York, will be presented at the Park Oct. 24 for what promises to be a long engagement.

"The Speckled Band," a Sherlock Holmes play new from the pen of Conan Doyle and adapted from the short story of the same title, will be presented for the first time in America Oct. 24 at the Boston.

William Gillette begins a limited engagement at the Hollis Oct. 31 in his revival of "Secret Service," "Clarice," "Held by the Enemy," "Too Much Johnson" and "The Private Secretary." Boston will be the first large city to see the revivals. Mr. Gillette has always found in Boston an enthusiastic patronage for his plays and acting.

Attractions That Hold Over.

Miss Gertrude Elliott on Monday evening begins the second week of her limited engagement at the Shubert in Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's play of cheerfulness, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." Miss Elliott reveals her matured talent in the spirited and amusing character of Glad.

Miss Marie Doro has two more weeks at the Park in the charming role of the millionaire's daughter who took up socialism and determined to marry only a workman. Mr. Gillette's whimsical comedy is filled with scenes of fun and sentiment of the most agreeable kind.

Herbert Corthell is keeping the audiences at the Majestic rolling with laughter over his plump humor in "The Girl and the Drummer," the pleasant musical farce that George Broadhurst made out of his farce success "What Happened to Jones." The new version is as funny as the old, the melodies are pretty and the company is lively.

"The Arcadians" continues its prosperous career at the Colonial, where it will remain for weeks to come. The idea of the play is refreshing, the music is pretty and the company is exceptional including as it does Miss Julia Sanderson as the heroine, Alan Mudge as the tenor hero, Percival Knight as a lean jockey who is very funny, Frank Moulton, Miss Connie Ediss, Miss Ethel Cadman and Miss Mary Mackid.

"The Fortune Hunter," for once in rural comedies, presents a number of country characters without the extreme exaggeration that has too often been thought necessary to make this kind of a play funny. The stage pictures are veracious, too, in the remarkable transformation of the broken down drug store into a sparkling soda place by the young city man, who, discouraged in the city, finds success and happiness in the country.

The Southwick Recitals.

Classic and modern comedies will compose the program of interpretative recitals in this year's Southwick course to be given in Chickering hall on Friday evenings, beginning Oct. 14, at 8 o'clock. For 11 years Henry Lawrence Southwick has conducted these courses in the drama, a record of continuous activity that has in no way been approached in Boston in this line. Tickets may be had at Chickering hall box office.

The program: Oct. 14, "Twelfth Night," Shakespeare, Henry Lawrence Southwick; Oct. 21, "The Prince Chap," Peple, Mrs. Elvie Burnett Willard; Oct. 28, "What Every Woman Knows," Mrs. Katherine Oliver McCoy; Nov. 4, "The Merchant of Venice," Shakespeare, Mrs. Jessie Eldridge Southwick; Nov. 11, "David Copperfield," Dickens, Walter Bradley Tripp; Nov. 18, "Much Ado About Nothing," Shakespeare, Mrs. Maud Gatchell Hicks.

The Need of a Melodrama Theater.

Melodrama is now homeless in Boston, as it is in New York and other cities. A New York reviewer recently pointed out the fact that perfectly good melodramas were languishing for want of patronage in New York because they were being presented in theaters which the melodrama public is not in the habit of attending.

Recently there were seen in Boston

MISS MARY MACKID.

Not a little of delight afforded audiences of "The Arcadians" at the Colonial is due to the talent and charming personality of Miss Mary Mackid, who plays Chrysea, one of the two maidens of truth loving Arcady who carry the message of the simple life to London. Miss Mackid is not long experienced on the stage, but had good training in singing and acting before her professional appearance. Her song, "I Like London," is one of the prettiest bits in "The Arcadians." Here, as all through the play, Miss Mackid is the shy yet playful and happy girl called for by the character.

Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird."

After the first few performances of Maeterlinck's symbolic fairy play about children, for adults, "The Blue Bird," all the rough edges of the first night were smoothed away, and the production developed a worth and beauty that represents the poet's imagining perhaps as well as they can be materialized on the stage.

The scenery is such an important factor that even an actorless "Blue Bird" would well repay the spectator. From the moment Tyltyl and Mytyl, the woodcutter's children, set out on Christmas eve to hunt for the blue bird that stands for happiness, until they return to their humble abode, the scenes are most poetic and imaginatively lovely. Even before they leave their cottage the wonders begin, for as they start toward the window, the walls become shimmering opal, the hours come laughing out of the clock, the dishes in the cupboard turn to gold and even the respectable kitchen utensils behave in a most unusual way.

Once under the starlit sky the children see before them a snow-clad valley, with tree tops sparkling with glittering hoarfrost till it seems almost like the fairy landscape of the frost-painted window pane. As they look at the trees a strange light glows through the pine tops—a light which appears to come from a far-away palace they can hardly see. In the twinkling of an eye, a magic staircase advances to meet their feet, and up this they climb to the palace of the Fairy Berylune.

The palace seems entirely built of filmy giant soap bubbles. Hither and thither they float in the curious greenish light which streams from the palace. The fairy instructs the children to go first to the Land of Memory, where they are told they will find their grandparents—long considered dead by a prosaic and unknown world. Feeling half awake and half asleep, the little folks pass through a strange, shadowy forest. Mists envelop the way and the mist maidens, who probably spin these mists, dance ethereally among the huge trees.

The children proceed to the Palace of Night, a great hall of black basalt with stars shining without, and Madam Night discloses a wondrous magic garden. It is bathed in moonbeams and, lo! darting from tree to tree flit thousands upon thousands of blue birds! But the real blue bird is not among them, for these songsters only feed on moonbeams.

Next the little folk go to Land of the Past. Suddenly the clock strikes 12 and upspring hundreds and thousands of the most beautiful flowers. They seem to spring from everywhere—from the mounds, the stones, the urns and from the trees—until the whole place is transformed into a lovely garden. Wide-eyed the children cling to each other. "Where are the dead?" asks the girl. "There are no dead!" exclaims the boy. But they have not found the blue bird.

The end of the journey is now near. As they near their cottage the children are so tired after their travels that they hurry to bed and in the morning sunshine, when their parents come to arouse them, it is most difficult for the children themselves to make them believe that they have really been away for a year and a day upon a wondrous journey. But, most remarkable of all, there, in the old cage on the wall hangs Tyltyl's bird, just as he was before, but the children now for the first time notice his color is quite blue. So that they have traveled a far and extraordinary journey only to find what was at home all the time!

Walter P. Eaton writes: "Bread comes out of the pan, the Cat and the Dog assume almost human form and feature; Sugar comes from the bin, Milk smashes her jug and emerges, Water slinks from the pump and Fire dances from the chimney. They are all to go in search with the children commanded by the beautiful spirit of Light (which, of course, is the symbol of wisdom, quite as Matthew Arnold might have decreed, though he would surely have assigned a more important role to Sugar!)."

"Fire and Water are perpetually fighting Bread—he of the huge stomach, a comic fellow—agrees with everybody; the Dog and the Cat are at perpetual odds. But only the Dog and Light are true to the children. The Cat, sleek, oily, a Uriaish Heep, is the arch villain. The Dog, faithful, brave, is the hero. M. Maeterlinck always loved dogs. But some of us love cats.

The performance now goes smoothly, and though few of the regular company were concerned the acting not infrequently had much merit. Especially was this true of the sleek, plotting Cat of Cecil Yapp, Jacob Wendell's Dog, too, was delightfully faithful and his plaintive barking at the door after the children had once more entered their house was a bit of grotesque pathos which Mr. Barrie might have conceived and which Mr. Wendell beautifully executed. It was good, too, to welcome Miss Eleanor Moratti back to the New York Stage as the Queen of Night.

The children are prettily and simply played by Miss Gladys Hulet as Tyltyl and Miss Irene Brown as Mytyl. Robert Homans makes an unctuous figure of Bread, Pedro de Corboda darts effectively about as Fire, and Miss Margaret Wycherly makes a gracious figure of Light.

NEWMAN TRAVEL TALKS.

The Newman travel talks are about to begin at Tremont Temple. This year Mr. Newman has a new story of the Austrian Tyrol, beginning with a visit to the Passion Play at Oberammergau. ## MAIL DELIVERY TO WEST INDIES MAY BE DELAYED

LONDON—The question of the future of the West Indian mail service is one of considerable importance both to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and to the West Indies. According to the present arrangements the mails are carried by the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, who are paid on a poundage basis. The company declares, however, that owing to their calling at Barbados and Trinidad to leave mails for the West Indies, except Jamaica, which has a separate service, they are losing money. Six months notice has therefore been given to the government to terminate the contract. After the end of November, when the contract will have terminated, the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company propose to run their vessels direct to Central America, which can be done on a paying basis, and the government have accordingly been informed that all they will be able to do is to call at the Danish island of St. Thomas. From St. Thomas the mails will be despatched to the West Indies by colonial steamers. The delay, in consequence of this, will be very considerable as regards the delivery of letters to Barbados, Trinidad, the lesser West Indian islands and also British Guiana.

At a meeting of the West Indies committee held recently and attended by representatives from each of the West Indian colonies, the opinion generally expressed was that the proposed suspension of the direct mail service at the present moment would be highly prejudicial to the islands, which were now regaining their prosperity. It was ultimately decided to appeal to the secretary for the colonies, in the hope that he will see his own way to open negotiations for the extension of the mail contract.

LONDON PUNCH HAS MUCH FUN WITH CELEBRATED "FORM IV"

LONDON—Complaints are being made on all sides by landed proprietors as to the difficulty they find in answering the large number of questions contained in what is now known as the celebrated "form iv," and Punch, always ready to improve the shining hour, offers to assist owners of land who may be confused by the returns demanded by the commissioner of inland revenue. As to the question of land, Punch says:

"By ignorant persons it is thought to be solid earth. For the purposes of the duties on land values—see instruction 199 (viii.), (x) (y) (z), 27, 385, paragraph 95 (k) (XXXVI.)—it also appears to include buildings which are not structures and structures which are not buildings, likewise caravans, tents, aeroplanes, trees, shrubs, weeds, cows, pigs, poultry, rats, mice, snails, slugs, birds and butterflies thereon, and all minerals, brickbats, potatoes, broken bottles, flint implements, chalybeate springs, treasure trove and earthworms on, in or under the surface. For further particulars of the component parts of 'land' see instruction 73, 948 B. Part 369, sections 51, air; 62, fire, and 53, water."

This is by no means all that Punch has to say on the subject, but he winds up by giving a selection of test questions to be answered by those who have sufficiently mastered Mr. Lloyd-George's scheme. The questions include the following:

What is the full site value of the Bank of England, if divested of the Bank of England, together with all growing timber, fruit trees, fruit bushes and other things growing thereon?

What would be the full site value of the present garden of the bank, if occupied by (a) an orange tree, (b) a vineyard, (c) a golf links, (d) two shrubs and six blades of grass, (e) an American skyscraper, and (f) nothing?

What was the full site value in the time of (a) the late Queen Anne, (b) Boadicea, (c) Noah? For definition of "land" entirely covered by water, see Sea (C) (c).

TEXAS COAL SUPPLY

31,000,000,000 TONS,
BY LATEST FIGURES

AUSTIN, Tex.—William B. Phillips, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology, has issued a report in which he says that since 1884 the production of coal and lignite in Texas has been 8,199,584 tons. The separation of these two items was begun in 1895.

Since that time the production of coal has been 10,767,886 tons, valued at $22-506,544, or an average of about $2.10 a ton at the mines. In this same period the production of lignite has been 5,488-218 tons, valued at $4,767,830, or an average of 82.8c per ton at the mines. During these 15 years the production of coal has increased so that for each ton mined in 1895 there were 3.17 tons mined in 1909.
In the year 1895 the average value of the coal mined was $2.22 and in 1909
$2.37.

The production of lignite increased much more rapidly than that of coal. For each ton of lignite mined in 1895 there were mined 5.75 tons in 1909, the value, per ton, for the respective years, being 80c and 82.8c.

The latest estimates of the original supply of bituminous coal in Texas—those of M. R. Campbell of the United States geological survey—show that there are 8,000,000,000 tons and of lignite 23,000,000,000 tons, or a total fuel supply of 31,000,000,000 tons.

The workable coal area may be taken as 8200 square miles, with an additional area of 5300 square miles that may contain workable seams.

SEEKS FORESTER JOB.

PORTLAND, Ore.—L. W. Wheeler, a senior of the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, Ore., applied recently sistant forester under the ordinance recently introduced in council to provide for the planting and care of eucalyptus trees on public lands in the northern part of the city.

about to inaugurate an aeroplane postal service on the island.

What Other Editors Are Saying

THE selected editorial comments today deal with the dethronement of King Manuel of Portugal, and the establishment of a Republican form of government in that country:

NEW YORK TRIBUNE—There need be no uncertainty as to the causes of the revolution. For years the kingdom was misgoverned and plundered by political rings, the grimly misnamed Regenera-dores and Progressistas maintaining a compact at Lisbon whereby they alternated in office under the "rotativismo" system, and pursued a consistent policy of doing as little for the good of the country and of stealing as much public money and running the nation as deeply into debt as it was possible for ingenious and pertinacious human rascality to do.

NEW YORK TIMES—No one can deny that the effort to maintain a constitutional monarchy in Portugal has been a sad failure, but it seems to have failed precisely because of the lack of conditions necessary to an orderly and efficient republic.

NEW YORK POST—It is the international aspects of the overturn which will give most concern to European diplomacy. The English alliance with Portugal will seem much less valuable if a republic is set up, while the effect in Spain will be watched for, both in and out of the peninsula, with serious apprehensions.

NEW YORK POST—A general uprising by a nation weary and sick of mis-government by the politicians that control it might be something to be wished for in Portugal, and in Spain as well.
There has been no indication in late years in either country that there are men who could lead such a movement, and still less that the people would follow them if the leaders were found.
Whatever the outcome, the example of Brazil is a guarantee that the Portuguese race is capable of self-government.

NEW YORK PRESS—A revolution in Portugal, with the establishment of a republic if the uprising succeeds in abolishing as well as bombarding monarchy, may mean little good to a people who are poor, degenerate and spiritless.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) UNION—The establishment of a republic in Portugal may succeed or not, according to the treatment the new government receives from the other European powers. The Republican leaders lately in London sought to convince the British government that the fall of the Portuguese monarchy would not menace the relations between the two countries. As things are, the British government can apparently do nothing but accept an accomplished fact. Portugal is a republic and long may the republic endure.

BUFFALO COMMERCIAL—The long threatened revolution in Portugal has culminated in overt acts that will probably mark the end of the monarchy in that country. The army and navy are so largely inoculated with Republican sentiments that a successful resistance to the uprising against the dynasty seems hopeless.

NEW YORK WORLD—The aspiration for freedom has a wonderful vivifying effect. The Portuguese may soon show themselves worthy of their strong ancestors, who furnished great poets, explorers and administrators and left their traces over half the world.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD—If the expulsion of Franco and the assassination of Carlos were inspired by the disposessed grafters it might be plausibly urged that the same influences were behind the present revolt. Young King Manuel tried to rule as a constitutional sovereign, and this prevented, of course, the making of any concessions to the leeches dispossessed by Franco.

WASHINGTON STAR—Whether the new regime, assuming the fall of the King and his succession by a popular administration, will establish itself without warfare and reaction is for the future to determine. The largest factor

Educating the Public in Art

Promise of more universal interest found in summer exhibition.

ART INSTITUTE, CHICAGO.
Showing the new architectural terrace surrounding the building.

Promise for the development of a more universal interest in art, is found in the fact that summer exhibitions, often extending through the early autumn, are becoming general features of the various public art institutions throughout America. These exhibitions are made possible through the liberality of collectors of fine paintings, who loan the same during the period of absence from home, when touring in foreign lands and delighting in new scenes.

In the public gallery these works are enjoyed by thousands; by those who have neither money nor leisure for European trips. Art lovers are keenly alive to the opportunity afforded and avail themselves of every chance to flock to the galleries, enjoying the works of art in a spirit akin to joint ownership, designating, each season, the same particular painting as "my favorite." For no matter if the identical paintings appear season after season, they still retain a charm of fascination for the true lover of meritorious works, while those less familiar with that which constitutes a good painting, find themselves gradually acquiring a well-balanced composition, and harmonious coloring, without realizing they are actually being educated to distinguish between that which is crude and inartistic, and that which is masterful and altogether worthy of consideration.

These particular loan exhibitions also offer great variety of subject and aid in familiarizing one with the works of groups of artists, whose paintings have been well selected, and many of which bear the distinguishing feature of meritorious award. Again, the "modern" neighbors with the "old" master, and seldom, be it regarded, to the disadvantage of the former. The extreme impressionist is seen in company with his more sane brother of the brush and what is so very helpful, one not necessarily an educated critic is enabled to compare and to form opinions and to grasp the fundamentals of truth in each method of execution, whether it be in landscape or in portraiture. This knowledge comes particularly to one who views the same works of art time and again.

It is the custom for collectors in England to open their private galleries for the enjoyment of others, during prolonged absence from either town or country residence. A written permit to visit the same is easily obtained by any one —regardless of station in life—possessing the proper credentials of respectability and of sincerity in the quest.

The writer of this article recalls the privilege accorded to visit just such a notable collection. It was in one of the "lordly homes" of England.

With the necessary permit, a party of 10, all friends, ascended the broad terrace, gay with bloom and, rich with foliage, leading to the steps, over which, for many generations, had passed the scions of this ancient manor. At the entrance, barred by massive doors of weather-beaten oak, and studded with wrought iron bolts and bars, the whole indicative of the arts-craftsman's skill of long ago, a courtly footman, in immaculate livery, and with be-powdered hair, took umbrellas and wraps in a quiet, unostentatious fashion. Then by a wave of the hand, he motioned the visitors, each in turn, to a carved chair, rich in antiquated association, where, kneeling in the glory of plush knee breeches and silk stockings, a second attendant deftly drew over individual walking boots a neat shoe, fashioned from the braided seldage of gray cloth, a drawing string being provided as a necessity toward comfortable adjustment to size.

Then ascending a broad stairway, the same dignified attendant who had received the visitors at the door escorted them through a dimly lighted corridor, on the walls of which were seen masterful delineations of portraiture, representative of ancestral fame. Over slippery floors, reflecting, mirror-like, every ray of color sifting through quaintly mullioned windows, they still followed their taciturn guide. Drawing aside a heavy portiere of choicest tapestry, he ushered the party into a spacious room, or gallery, hung with an array of paintings, yet not giving the impression of over-crowding. The ceiling was of a rich, dark wood, wondrously carved, and, through some subtly arranged portion of its architecture, a soft light spilled its diffusive influence on individual paintings.

Chairs of antiquated design and of such rare workmanship as to reflect the same skill that had wrought the marvelous ceiling, afforded opportunity for restful diversion. The floor was of such gloss that one needed not to lift the list-en-swatched feet, but simply to glide over its exquisitely polished surface with ease, if not always with grace. Yet the beauty of the paintings over-shadowed the attractiveness of this most perfect setting.

Exquisite achievements of the painter's art are now finding their way to American homes, and it seems as if the loaning of these collections occasionally to the public art institutions might be almost classified as a patriotic duty.
Or the same impulse might prompt an arrangement to have them viewed, privately, by serious and ambitious students of art. American artists are sorely in need of just such philanthropic consideration. All of them, in fact, the majority, cannot, for many reasons, take a trip abroad, or sojourn in European art centers for the purposes of study, but the most intelligent may be matterially helped and benefited, as well as mentally buoyed, by opportunity to study the works of artists of foreign lands, as well as those of their own country, when seen together in the manner outlined.

The general public manifests its appreciation of the loan exhibitions by its eagerness to reach the galleries on free days, cheerfully foregoing other inducement to entertainment for the purpose of viewing the loan collection, arguing that "it is not always to be seen there." Those, and they are legion, visiting the galleries in this spirit derive the greatest benefit. No one, after having haunted the galleries of such an institution as the Art Institute of Chicago, for example, season after season, for the express purpose of studying the people, either in their fully appreciative or more indifferent mood, can doubt the far-reaching influence of these special exhibitions. Shoulder to shoulder they stand, the well-dressed, and the clean and neat enough but shabby genteel; and elbowing for a coign of vantage before some peculiarly attractive work may be seen the fairly well to do, the indigent,

"Saved 20 Times Its Cost."

 "I am writing this," says E. C. Parmelee, Highlands, N. J., "by the light of one of your Angle Lamps. In fact, I would not think of using any other light. They are THE lamps. Everyone who has seen mine is impressed with them. Why, I have saved at least 20 times their cost in oil, burners, chimneys and 'cuss words.'"
The Angle Lamp is not an improvement on the old-style lamp, but an entirely new principle of oil lighting which has made common kerosene (or coal oil) the most satisfactory of all lighting methods. Safer and more reliable than gasoline or acetylene, yet as convenient to operate as gas or electricity.

THE ANGLE LAMP
Is lighted and extinguished like gas.
May be turned high or low without $83,000. The assessors value the land at $56,400.

A sale involving valuable property in the Back Bay, Roxbury and Dorchester has just been closed. Charles H. Scheffren, the well-known real estate operator, Old South building, is the purchaser of several parcels. One is the Hotel Templeton, 68 and 70 St. Germain streets junction of Dalton street, having a total rating of $31,000, of which $10,500 is on the 3000 square feet of land. There is a large five-story brick structure containing stores and apartments. The title was given by Matthew H. Cushing.

Mr. Scheffren has secured in Roxbury from Mr. Cushing a block of four three-story brick apartment houses numbered 114 to 122 Mt. Pleasant avenue, near Forest street. They occupy 7021 square feet of land, the latter rated at $5000, with a total assessment of $31,200.

The Dorchester transfer to Mr. Scheffren from Mr. Cushing is known as Roslin Hall. It is a large frame structure, with stores on the ground floor and halls above. The location is at 710 to 728 Washington street. There is 11,260 square feet of land taxed for $5600. The total assessment is $25,600.

BEAUTIFUL PINEHURST SOLD.

Fisher Ames, Esq., has purchased this charming estate in Bedford near the center of town, but retired from the public road, approached for nearly a third of a mile by magnificent macadamized way. Upon the estate of some 40 acres or more are many rare ornamental trees and shrubs and a lily pond.

The buildings, which include a delightful country house, coachman's lodge, stable and garage, occupy one of the highest points of land on the estate and are almost completely obscured by the artistic arrangement of the trees.

The grantors, James R. Poor, et al., who have their town house in Brookline, have used Pinehurst as their summer home.

Winchester Sales.

James Johnston has sold the plaster house recently completed on Cabot street to W. R. Moorhouse of Medford. This is the first house erected on the land owned and developed by John L. Ayer. Plans are under way for the immediate construction of two more houses on this property, and every indication points to a rapid growth in this most desirable section.

The Margaret H. Hale estate has sold

NEWS OF THE REALTY MARKET

BUILT BY A. DUDLEY DOWD FOR A. J. McDONALD.

Large block of balcony apartments practically completed at 34 to 50 Garrison road, Brookline, at a cost of nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

The brand new apartments on Garrison road, Brookline, shown in the accompanying illustration, contain many novel features which have apparently taken with persons seeking homes, because practically all of the apartments were rented, and in some cases occupied, before completion. A few very desirable suites remain, however.

All the conveniences usually found in the most modern private dwellings, are also contained in these. The front balcony, leading out of a spacious living room, 20 feet long, finished with high dado walls and beamed ceilings, gives the flat-dweller a chance to get out of doors if desired.

These apartments are three stories high and all of different exterior design, presenting a most interesting architectural effect. Each suite has 10 windows opening on the street, and as the houses are 45 feet wide, and only 50 feet deep, with servant's room ell, all rooms are spacious and well lighted.

A decidedly new feature is the provision for sanitary requirements—a private tiled bath for each chamber and one for the servant, or three bathrooms to each suite. The housekeeper's requirement for closet room is amply provided for in 10 closets for each tenant. There are built in sideboards and linen shelves, butler's pantry sinks, porcelain-lined refrigerators, two open fireplaces and all provisions for the comfort of tenants that the best modern dwellings contain.

The corner buildings, 34 Garrison road and 236 Rawson road, are arranged in small three and four room suites with kitchenettes, and contain all modern appliances provided in the larger suites.

The local real estate market is by no means depressed, but according to some of the leading brokers there is no real activity. This statement should be taken as one governing the situation as a whole and not special districts, for, in the suburbs, for instance, there is constantly a good deal going on in the realty line, in vacant land, building and transfers of estates. "The North, South and West Ends are dull, but in the business section of the city proper, the Back Bay and some parts of Beacon Hill property is moving fairly well," said a member of one of the leading brokerage firms when asked about the market. The uncertainty of the political situation and many unsettled questions in regard to various subways and other transit improvements are other reasons given as tending to keep the real estate market dull.

"I do not believe in concentrating subways in one spot, such as at Park street," said one broker, "thus making land on a few thoroughfares nearly worth perhaps $200 per square foot and only a few dollars in another part of the city. Rather would I like to see much land worth say $50 per square foot than such a disparity on account of the locating of transit facilities in one spot."

A great deal of the most valuable property in Boston is owned by trustees; a half dozen of these men control many millions of dollars' worth in various parts of the city. It is a noticeable fact that in Boston perhaps more than in any other city in the country this accounts for the lack of rapid strides and progress made along building lines by such cities as New York, for instance. Fewer large and up-to-date mercantile structures are put up on the many valuable sites throughout the city now occupied by buildings 50 or more years old because the trustees who control them are unwilling to sell. The owners, for whom the trustees act are content to realize a net income of say 3 per cent as long as their principal remains perfectly secure, as it does. In talking over this situation with a leading real estate investor he said that a certain group of trustees could do more for Boston if they should get together and either sell some of their property to new owners, who would improve it, or improve it themselves than perhaps hundreds of men who are now working for the progress of the city in various ways.

Mentioning a certain large area on Washington street in the very center of business he remarked that there was a particularly fine location for a modern skyscraper, but that the trustees of the property were willing to let it remain with the same old buildings on it that were put up a varying number of years ago, all of which are kept in good repair, but at their best look far behind present times. "The owners of these estates," said he, "come to their trustees year after year before starting to Europe and ask just what their income is from their property and when they ascertain the amount are content to draw a certain sum per month, and if the whole amounts to only a few per cent they are satisfied with the assurance that the principal is absolutely secure."

"Now in New York if an individual or trustee owns a piece of highly valuable property and is offered a price for it that shows a fair profit or other inducements for selling he lets it go and the general result is improvement on a large scale. The seller generally buys more property farther uptown and waits for values to rise there and again sells and so on, the result being the New York of today. This would be the case in Boston also if a like policy were in vogue."

The estate at 34 West Cedar street, Beacon Hill, has been sold by Mary L. Hale et al. to Elizabeth H. Jackson, wife of Charles Jackson. The property comprises a 3½-story brick dwelling assessed at $5000 and 1425 square feet of land assessed at $4600, making a total valuation of $9,600. Codman & Street, Easton building, were the brokers in the transaction.

The building known as Westland Chambers, 50 to 52 Westland avenue, near Hemenway street, Back Bay, has been conveyed to Matthew H. Cushing. The grantors are Lena Levine et al., and the title comes through Edward W. Foster. The large five-story brick and stone structure contains several suites with modern improvements, has a large frontage on the avenue and occupies 8283 square feet of land. The total assessment is $89,800, of which $24,800 is on the lot.

A block of brick houses with stores on the lower floor, numbered 78 to 90 Cambridge street, corner of, and 2 and 4 Hancock street, West End, has just been sold to Alden E. Viles et al., by Catherine E. Richardson. There are four buildings, 4½ stories high, occupying 5000 square feet of land, all rated at

Why not build a cozy modern house on that vacant land, and instead of a bill of expense you can have an income of 20% on your investment, 5% of the cost of building? I will make plans to your order and finish your building ready to occupy, taking entire charge of all building operations, and save you all annoyance and trouble of building. # Stocks Ease Off at Close After Quiet Session

STOCK TRADING LACKS FEATURE AND VERY QUIET

Traders Perplexed in Endeavor to Ascertain Which Side of the Market Holds Money-Making Advantage.

BOSTON IS STEADY

Traders never were more perplexed in their attempt to analyze the situation marketwise than they are today. Those who are content to buy one day and sell the next on a profit of a point or so were much at loss this morning as to which side of the market to operate on for a turn. Consequently business was very dull. The early part of the half day session in New York saw a sagging market. The opening was about at the same level as last night's closing and then prices began to soften.

As a rule traders preferred to await developments to making any extended commitments on either side. Fluctuations were small and trading was confined to a small number of stocks. The Boston market likewise was quiet, but prices were steady. Both markets lacked special feature of any kind.

Later the New York market began to improve. The perpendicular rise in Sears-Roebuck, following a sharp advance in Chicago, attracted some attention. It opened up 11 points at 169 and advanced another point. The strength in this security was accompanied by a report that a 20 per cent stock dividend is to be declared. United Railways Investment Company preferred was in demand. It opened up 1 1/2 at 58 1/2 and sold up to 60. National Railways of Mexico, both first and second preferred made moderate gains. Mackay companies opened up 1/2 at 94 1/2 and improved to 96. Steel, Reading, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper and other issues showed fractional gains. American Beet Sugar rose from 38 1/2 to 39 3/4. Stocks eased off at the close.

Granby on the local exchange opened unchanged at 27 and rose 2 point before the close of the market. Centennial opened up 1/2 at 21, reacted to 20 and immediately recovered. North Butte opened up 1/2 at 30 3/4 and advanced well above 31. Lake Copper at 36 1/2 was up 1/2 at the opening. It sagged off 1/4 and then recovered. American Telephone and Telegraph opened up 1/2 at 137 1/2 and lost a small fraction. Massachusetts Mining was rather heavily traded in. It opened at 9 1/4 and improved fractionally.

LONDON—Business on the stock exchange was quiet today, but the good tone was maintained. Domestic securities were steady and there was a rally in Portuguese bonds on more reassuring news from Lisbon.

In the American department prices advanced early but reacted later. There was some realizing in Canadian Pacific. Little change was noted in mining shares. A more confident feeling was shown in the rubber share group, these issues receiving support. De Beers ended at a net loss of 3-16 at 16 15-16. Continental courses were quiet.

AMERICAN ZINC ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company for the year ended June 30, 1910, compares with previous year as follows:

	1910.	1909.
Net earnings	$359,323	$300,378
Admin. and gen. exp.	59,000	58,583
Interest	61,000	57,331
Total deductions	$120,430	$115,914
Net profit	$238,893	$244,464
For bettermen	238,893	244,464
For spl. res. fd. for fut.	—	—
Dividends	25,000	102,016
Divs. and bds. unwt.	110,000	—
Total	$123,893	$244,464
Balance	103,885	—

President H. S. Kimball says to stockholders: No additions have been made to property accounts during the year; all additions and betterments having been charged off out of the special reserve fund created for that purpose.

A sum of $25,000 has been added to the special reserve fund to be used for further additions and betterments upon your properties.

The additions to the mines in Missouri consists of the purchase of 16 2-3 acres of land adjoining the Davey properties, installation of a 3000-foot per minute air compressor, increase of power plant, completion of the equipment of Veger mill upon the December tract, further development of the December tract and other development.

The additions and betterments at the smelters, consist principally of new gas lands and leases acquired, development of gas lands and construction of pipe lines.

UNION SWITCH STOCK INCREASE

PITTSBURGH—The Union Switch & Signal Company has called a special meeting of the shareholders for Dec. 14 to vote on a proposition to increase the capital stock of the company $2,500,000 to $5,000,000, all the new stock to be common.

From this new issue will come the long expected "million cutting" which has made the Union Switch & Signal very strong for some time. If the proposed increase in stock is approved, a stock dividend of 60 per cent will be declared, which will be distributed pro rata to both common and preferred stockholders. Of the remaining 40 per cent of the new stock the directors will issue sufficient to increase the working capital and meet the demand of the company from time to time. The proposed capital increase will be the first made by the company since its organization.

The present capital stock is divided into $500,000 preferred and $2,000,000 common, on both of which regular dividends of 12 per cent per annum are paid. It is stated that the proposed stock dividend is based on the actual gain in business of the company and has been more than earned.

WHEAT SUPPLIES AND REQUIREMENT

NEW YORK—It now looks as if as much as 680,000,000 bushels of wheat from surplus countries might this year be available to importing countries; derived as follows: Russia, 200,000,000; Roumania, Bulgaria and Serbia, 120,000,000; United States (wheat and flour), 120,000,000; Canada, 60,000,000; Argentina and Uruguay, 60,000,000; Australia, 60,000,000; India, 40,000,000; all others 20,000,000.

Beerbohm's estimate of needs of importing countries is 576,000,000 bu. That would leave 104,000,000 bushels to be drawn upon, in case a larger importing need should develop at correspondingly better price. The difference is rather of the nature of a second line of reserve; that is, the quantity would be available if prices assumed a sufficiently attractive level.

WHITE - PALMER FLEET IS SOLD

The J. S. Winslow Company of Portland, coastwise shippers, has bought the 12 vessels composing the White-Palmer fleet of Boston commonly known as the Palmer fleet.

Value of the vessels is estimated at $100,000, a price which would make the deal total nearly $250,000.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT MECHANICS FAIR

Pupils from Greater Boston schools come singly, in groups, and under direction of teachers.

SECTION OF THE COSTLY ART EXHIBIT.

Collection of paintings, sculptures and other objects on display at the exposition are said to have a value of $1,000,000.

SCHOOL children from all parts of Boston and Greater Boston held full sway at the Mechanics exposition today. They were there singly and in groups under the direction of teachers.

When the doors opened the first thing today there were crowds of them on hand eager to observe and learn all about the wonderful exhibits. Questions innumerable concerning the reasons for this and why that machine does such a thing kept the booth attendants busy and illustrated the educational value of the exposition.

The free motion pictures and phonograph concerts and music by the United States Marine band and the Edna Frances Simmons' women's orchestra invariably attracts the attention and applause of the boys and girls.

Throng of visitors to the fair are always to be found in the halls to the left of the balcony in the main hall, where there is a loan exhibit of paintings, sculptures and other art objects, said to be valued at $1,000,000. Three canvases by James Rogers Rich attract special attention because of their beauty and great size. One, a view of the Taj Mahal, at Agra, India, was awarded a silver medal at a 1901 exhibition.

It shows a scene of tropical beauty, with a vista of an Indian temple at the end of a picturesque canal, with luxuriant gardens on either side. "The Old Apple Tree" and "The Reapers" are other canvases by Mr. Rich.

Jean Paul Selinger shows a new picture, the principle feature of which is the simple figure of a pretty blue-eyed Dutch girl. Around her shoulders and over her head are lace kerchiefs and lying open before her on the table is an ancient book. A row of hyacinths blooms beneath a window of formal stained glass. Miss Emily Selinger shows several flower studies.

NEW INSTRUMENT AIDS ASTRONOMERS IN MAKING PLATES

(Special to The Monitor.)

CAIRO—The intricate laws of the moon's movements have interested astronomers in all ages. The ancients, Ptolemy, Hipparchus, and others, when we consider that they were ignorant of the laws of gravitation, made remarkably successful attempts at a solution, but Newton's discovery first provided the possibility of a complete analysis. Ever since his day the moon has been zealously observed with the best available instruments in order that fact and theory may be compared. The comparison has, on the whole, been instructive.

The recently established observatory at Helwan, Egypt, has sought to enlist the services of photography, an art which has already proved its value in other branches of astronomy.

For the negatives to be of use they must show images not only of the moon, but also of well known stars, for then it becomes possible to work out the exact position of the former, just as a ship at sea can fix her position by sighting well known lights or landmarks. But the difficulty is that an exposure sufficiently long to register star images would be an excessive over-exposure for the moon. This difficulty has been overcome by an instrument known as the double-image coelostat, consisting essentially of two mirrors fixed at an angle. When a camera is pointed toward this mirror-system, suitably adjusted, it receives an image of the moon off one face of the mirror, while the other face supplies star images from quite a different part of the sky where the moonlight is faint. Separate exposures are made, a short one for the moon and a longer one for the stars, and the negative develops up as a moon surrounded by stars, and is ready for measurement.

of a goose hanging against a panel. Close examination is necessary to make sure that it is not a real goose. Morris Burke Parkinson shows several of his paintings and W. B. Closson's study of Colonel Roosevelt is on an easel in a favorable spot.

Paintings by Darius Cobb are shown in an exhibit that has historical interest in connection with the growth of the artistic talent of the Cobb brothers. Sculptures by Cyrus Cobb are shown.

Heroic sculptures by Theodore Ruggles Kitson show scenes of war, and at the opposite end of the scale are miniature carvings of John Wilson. Hugh Cairns shows his noted figure of the poet Burns, and C. Lachaise has several groups.

Society night, on Tuesday, will be marked by special musical features. After 5 p. m. the admission will be 50 cents.

School Courses for the Boy or Girl Who Works

How the Continuation School Idea Is Opening New Opportunities Through the Cooperation of Business Men, Who Benefit as Well as Assist.

Continuation schools are beginning to loom large on the educational horizon in America. Yet the idea that lies behind them appears to be little understood by the public at large. Many fathers and mothers who have "kept up" sufficiently to know the term, know only that the idea it stands for was imported from Germany. Continuation schools have been in operation in that country for some time and knowledge has been spread here by members of school committees and other educators who had inspected the German schools and brought back their educational gleanings.

Yet the continuation school is only the outgrowth of public demand for a more practical education. It has been argued that at whatever age a child leaves school his education has not been such as to prepare him for business, and that thereupon the wise thing for him to do if he wishes to get ahead in the world is to leave school early and work up. The question has another phase to it, also, that where circumstances oblige the child early to enter the ranks of wage earners with little education to begin with there is extra obstruction to any high achievement.

The Boston school committee had had the subject under careful advisement for over a year when early last spring it decided to put its ideas to a practical test. It was recognized that the most satisfactory results could be attained only through the cooperation of business houses, and this was accordingly sought and secured. An organization of shoe and leather men went so far as to send out a circular letter requesting the members of the association to do all possible to further the movement.

It was planned that there should be advanced courses in the shoe and leather and dry goods businesses, these being two important industries in the state of Massachusetts, to be open to young men and women of 18 years or more, already employed, and therefore having some practical experience. Instruction was to be given largely by members of firms engaged in such businesses and experts in their employ, thus emphasizing the practical side of education. The business houses further consented to send their employees to the school during business hours without decrease of pay.

In addition to the advanced course, provision was made for the boys and girls between 14 and 18 who had been obliged to leave school and go to work. This was called a preparatory course. It covered elementary subjects pertaining to store salesmanship.

The school opened early in April with full classes, 40 in each. So successful did the work prove merchants are not only requesting but demanding that the school be continued and the work enlarged. Accordingly, this year there will be two complete terms or courses in the shoe and leather industry and dry goods, each having two classes a week of two hours each for 15 weeks. These will be 10 preparatory salesmanship courses divided into elementary and advanced classes. Other subjects are in preparation and will be put into operation as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

The course in dry goods includes the study of fibers; cotton and cotton goods; wool, worsteds and woolsens; silk and silk fabrics; linen and linen fabrics; recognition and comparison of mixed fabrics; simple tests for determining quality; coloring materials and color preservation; shrinking; mercerization; non-inflammable fabrics; care of stock; commercial arithmetic; commercial geography; commercial correspondence; salesmanship; efficiency training.

Included in the study of shoe and leather are the production and distribution of leather; tanning processes; leather manufacture; recognition of kinds, grades and comparative values of leathers; manufacture and classification of shoes; commercial arithmetic; commercial geography; commercial correspondence; salesmanship; efficiency training.

English—Spelling, commercial correspondence, business on paper, accuracy and completeness of statement, brevity, facility in oral expression, good books. Arithmetic—Store problems, accurate calculations, sales slip practice. Geography—Practical talks on the sources of merchandise and its distribution, raw materials, textiles. Penmanship—Business writing. Color and design—Color recognition, color, harmony, rhythmic design, color effects. Hygiene—Cleanliness, thought, food, exercises, rest.

Mill streets, near the athletic grounds, just off Commonwealth avenue, is to be developed by Edward T. Harrington Company. The land will be sold upon popular terms at popular prices.

SALES BY P. F. LELAND.

P. F. Leland has sold for Mrs. E. J. Hayes her country estate in Brimfield to James A. Roston. There are about 40 acres of land, with modern up to date buildings and water power facilities.

Mrs. Mary L. Ellis has transferred through the office of Mr. Leland her estate on Washington street, Holliston, to James W. Harnden, who has already taken possession. There is a 10-room house, large stable and about 16 acres of land.

S. H. DeJeser has taken title from F. Jenkinson to his farm on Oak street, Mansfield. The purchaser buys for subdivision. P. F. Leland was the broker in this sale also.

MALDEN FACTORY LEASED.

Agreements have been signed leasing the large brick manufacturing building at Oak Grove station, Malden, for the owner, George E. Adams of Boston, to the Lowry Manufacturing Company, now located at Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

This concern will fit up the premises and operate the plant for the manufacture of carpets and rugs from domestic rushes. The transaction was made through the office of the Factory Exchange.

WOMEN ENTERING REALTY FIELD.

That there is a good field in the real estate brokerage business for women is being proved in Boston by the taking up of this business by women who have formerly been proprietors of lodging houses.

There are numerous women brokers scattered throughout the city who are carrying on a successful business. They do not all go into the business on an extensive scale, but still their dealings in lodging houses and suburban property net them a comfortable income.

A LIQUOR DEALER TO OCCUPY PULPIT

A talk on the saloon by one identified with the saloon interests and delivered in a church is a novelty which East Boston people may witness Sunday.

George B. Hugo, president of the Massachusetts Employers Association, author of a book on socialism and a lecturer on Shawmut avenue, will speak at the Maverick Congregational church, East Boston, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock on "The Saloon from a Liquor Dealer's Point of View." At the conclusion of his talk Mr. Hugo will answer questions from the audience.

The Sunday meetings at the Maverick church are devoted to popular educational subjects. Alexander Irvine will begin a series of meetings on Oct. 16.

THE HOME FORUM

On the Dark Continent

SUCH an article as one by Herbert Ward, the sculptor, in Scribner's magazine is a little earmark of these days. He writes with sympathy and liking of the savage races of central Africa, so recently the dark continent, unvisited by the white man. While Mr. Ward's description of these people and his sculptures are sufficiently repellent in many points, the thing one remarks is the endeavor of the white man to understand these children of the sunless African forests, his readiness to acknowledge every human trait in them and to explain their savagery and ignorance as largely the effect of their isolation and the hardships of their experience. Time was when no white man undertook to understand the savage, and when no possible bond of brotherhood with these undeveloped tribesmen would be admitted. Mr. Ward has discovered that actually the African savage rarely does the things which he feels to be wrong to do, and he has great hopes of what the influence of the white civilization may in time work for these unfortunates.

Perhaps, however, the greatest encouragement one finds in reading such a sketch as this is another token that the savagery in the civilized races is slowly being reduced.

Quite Logical

A man rented a small house which the landlord had refused to repair. One day the owner came to see him.

"Jones," he said, "I shall have to raise your rent."

"What for?" asked Jones, anxiously.

"Have taxes gone up?"

"No," the landlord answered, "but I see you've painted the house and put in a new range and bathtub. That, of course, makes it worth more rent."—Philadelphia Record.

There is a beautiful and an ugly way in which to say almost everything, and happiness depends upon which way we take. Not only in words, but in all the little, common courtesies and duties of life, think of the beautiful way of doing each.—D. L. Porter.

QUEENS HOUSE, CHELSEA

QUEENS HOUSE (No. 16 Cheyne walk) is a beautiful old red brick dwelling whose face is thickly veiled in Virginia creeper which hangs like a curtain down each side of the entrance porch, to the serious inconvenience of the casual female visitor in the usual matinee hat. The house is said to have been built by Sir Christopher Wren for Catherine of Braganza, whose initials can be seen in the wrought iron gateway, but it is chiefly famous as the home for many years of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, poet, painter, sculptor and founder of the pre-Raphaelite brotherhood, which brought such a change over the spirit of English art. At first Rossetti shared the house with his brother William, Algernon Swinburne and George Meredith, but this syndicate soon broke up and Dante Rossetti was left in possession. During his tenancy Queens house was frequented by many interesting people in the world of art, for he had a large circle of friends, and he loved to gather them around him. He made great use of these friends and introduced them freely into his drawings. Howell represented militant virtue triumphant as exemplified in St. George; William Morris was the strong wicked man. In the "Parable of the Vineyard" Morris and Swinburne are seen among the bad husbandmen, while Burne-Jones with his gentle, refined face is always on the side of the angels.

Rossetti had an extraordinary passion for collecting. He crammed his house with books, pictures, china, and every sort of ancient musical instrument, of which he knew nothing and cared less, and he turned his back garden into a miniature zoo, full of queer, outlandish creatures which it would be incorrect to describe as pets. A raccoon lived in a large packing-case surmounted by a heavy slab of Sicilian marble, in spite of which precaution he was always escaping. On one occasion he was lost for several days, when a letter from a lady a few doors off, with a bill for eggs, explained that the coon had been regularly visiting her henroost via the chimney! He was recaptured with some difficulty, and secured more carefully than ever; but the proud spirit of a raccoon brooks no restraint. Next time, after a long absence, he was found in the drawer of a massive wardrobe, quietly browsing on one of his master's manuscript poems. He had been reposing there by day, and prowling about after food by night, which fact is probably the origin of the oft-heard tale of how the house was haunted by mysterious noises and faint footsteps.

GEORGE ELIOT'S HOUSE.

Among other curiosities Rossetti kept a couple of quarrelsome kangaroos, and a pair of armadillos which he allowed the run of the garden under the erroneous impression that they were harmless; there was also a peacock and a fallow deer which used to follow it up and down the garden, stamping on its tail until all the feathers came out.

Mr. Dunn gives an amusing account of Rossetti's bedroom, when he first made his acquaintance in 1863. "Thick curtains, heavy with crevel work in seventeenth century designs of fruit and flowers (which he had bought out of an old furnishing shop somewhere in the slums of Lambeth) hung closely drawn round an antiquated four-post bedstead. . . . The deeply recessed windows . . . were shrouded with curtains of heavy and sumptuously patterned Genoese velvet. On this fine summer day light was almost excluded from the room. . . . Even the little avenue of lime-trees outside the windows helped to reduce the light and threw a sickly green over everything in the apartment." The shelves were loaded with curiosities enough to fill a museum; a few depressing pictures hung on the walls, and the only modern thing to be seen anywhere was a Bryant & May's match box. Poor Rossetti, no wonder he could not sleep!

A few steps farther on, at No. 4 Cheyne walk, lived Daniel Maclise, the great English historical painter. He was followed by George Eliot who came in 1880 with her husband, Mr. Cross; but as the famous authoress only lived there for three weeks, she cannot be said to have left any distinct impression on her surroundings.

Bible References in Poetry

A SPECIAL study of the Bible references in Tennyson has been made by Dr. Van Dyke, who finds over 500 of them. A similar study of Browning by Mrs. Machem shows that his writings are crowded with scriptural quotations, allusion and imagery. In the "Ring and the Book," his longest poem, there are more than 500 Bible references. His great "Saul" is, of course, wholly biblical. Dr. Van Dyke says that these references are found in all sorts of books, for example there are 63 in a book of descriptive sketches of Italy, 12 in a book on wild animals, 18 in a novel by Thomas Hardy. Bishop Wentworth's book on Shakespeare's knowledge and use of the Bible is vastly interesting. It is clear that Shakespeare knew the Bible well and felt, says Dr. Van Dyke, the dramatic value of allusions and illustrations which were sure to be instantly understood by the plain people. Antonio in the "Merchant of Venice" says, "The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose," referring to the Gospel account of the temptation of Jesus, where appears the verse from the Psalms about the angels having charge.

Alfalfa in Maine

Within the past few years several enterprising Maine farmers have begun the raising of alfalfa, the remarkable forage crop which is so extensively and profitably cultivated in the West. Careful study and experience have convinced the Maine department of agriculture that the conditions of Maine soil and climate are wholly favorable to this variety of grass, which will produce four or five tons to the acre, every ton equal in feeding value to the best grain. In several parts of Maine there are now broad fields of alfalfa, and the farmers who have made the experiment are much pleased with their success. One seeding is said to be good for about 15 years, and then when plowed the soil is rich in nitrogen for the benefit of succeeding crops.—Exchange.

Men live best on moderate means. Nature has dispensed to all men wherewithal to be happy if mankind did but understand how to use her gifts.—Claudian.

The Water Supply of London

THE chairman of London's metropolitan water board, E. B. Barnard, read a paper of considerable interest recently on the "Water Supply of the Metropolis." The population which was supplied with water by the water board was almost equal to that of the kingdoms of Norway and Sweden, and about the same as the Dominion of Canada, 2,000,000 more than Australia and New Zealand combined and 1,000,000 larger than the whole population of Scotland and Wales. The average daily supply was over 225,500,000 gallons a day. If a tank were built the size of Trafalgar square, that is, covering 2½ acres, and the height of the Nelson column, London would empty such a tank twice in 24 hours, the average supply per head per day being 32 gallons. The water mains alone would reach from Liverpool to New York and back again, so that it would take the Mauretania 10 days to travel along the whole length.

The Useful Bean

Although Boston is the most famous baked-bean-eating center of the country, yet it would appear that even farther west the usefulness of this vegetable is well known. A writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer tells of a woman who, one very cold day, went into a Euclid avenue grocery store and priced the different sizes of pots of baked beans—the kind that the grocery keeps put up hot and ready to serve.

"I guess the small size will do," she said, hesitating.

"How many do you desire to serve?" inquired the clerk, ready to advise.

"Oh, I'm not buying them to serve," the customer replied. "Of course I shall use them, but I'm getting them to keep my hands warm on the car. I came away from home without either muff or mittens."

Attractions of a Quiet Suburban Home

A description of a quiet suburban home given in Suburban Life has this passage: Left to himself, Vincent began to drink in the domestic surroundings thirstily, as one who, having abandoned for a time the club for what he considered the simple, free, and unconventional life of the old farm-house, and found neither homelike, suddenly finds himself submerged in the very essence of what he had come to believe a story-book delusion. Something that had crept into his makeup in the days when his grandmother had let him sit by an equally white kitchen table, while she cut out cookies and gave him peppermints and pennies from within the case of just such another clock, rushed back and almost choked him. Could there be such a quiet house in the wholly public age of wireless, telephone and motor car, with the trolley-bell sounds occasionally, as the car sped down the slope of Oakland avenue?

There were nosegays in two ginger-jars upon the dresser, and nasturtiums in a bowl upon the dining table in the room beyond. Dishes and tins were bright, without thumb-spot or blemish of the usual hired help. As he paced to and fro, and unthinkingly strode into the wide dividing hallway, another vista showed the open piano littered with music, a bit of sewing cast upon a chair, and surrounding shelves of friendly well-used books.

THE FIRST BEATITUDE

THE Sermon on the Mount is full of admonition and even rebuke of wrong doing, but its very first word is blessing. In the first sentence, also, Jesus gives the key to his mission, which was not to gain an earthly kingdom for himself or for the Jews but to open the door to the kingdom of heaven.

The first beatitude is moreover so worded that it has a promise for every sufferer on earth. To the word translated "poor" Young gives the primary meaning "trampling." It may, then, mean the poor and downtrodden of men who are here bidden to place their hope in a better than worldly glory; it may mean those shaken with fear or disease, who are to know that peace and relief are theirs under God's government; it may mean those who stand in doubt and trembling before their own ideal of divine perfection, knowing their own human inability ever to satisfy that ideal.

While even the most literal sense of the first statement of the Master in this splendid summary of Christian rule and practice is a deliberate reversal of what worldly thinking holds true, yet if we hold that Jesus meant that the poor are blessed because they are poor we make him contradict himself when he promises all earthly good to those who should give up all to follow him. He nowhere indicates that physical discomfort is good. Indeed, he promises that God will feed those who trust Him as He feeds the birds, and that He will clothe them, like the lilies, with a greater glory than Solomon's. In the literal sense here the Master seems rather to be telling those who think of themselves as suffering physical lack that they are nevertheless blessed in Spirit. From the point of view of spiritual truth they are blessed because from that standpoint there is nothing seen but God's abundance, and every child of His already has all that God has, being made in His likeness. This kingdom of heaven, this right of dominion over the works of God's hands, is the true heritage of His every child. Therefore, when humanity sees itself suffering lack it has only to understand this truth to be free from the galling bonds of poverty.

But to understand the truth is not that superficial acceptance of these things which has sometimes been called faith. It is rather a reasonable service, that is, an earnest study of the Science of Mind which alone can prove to men their God-given dominion. To tell a poor man that he really is rich, since the kingdom of heaven is his, is cold comfort, as James reminds us. The great thing is to show him how he may practically avail himself here and now of the inheritance that is already his. This is what Jesus proceeds to do in the Sermon on the Mount. It is as if he begins by telling the people exactly what the facts are about themselves as he sees them from his spiritual standpoint. He gives them the absolute truth. He says that they are blessed and have all good and joy and comfort even while they think of themselves as poor and mourning and afflicted, or as too weak and meek and peaceful to fight for the dominion which mortal man seems to have wrested from nature and from his fellow man by violence. And then Jesus goes on to show where the real battle for dominion must be—within, through spiritual conquest over sin and disbelief and estrangement from God.

The more spiritual meaning of this saying about the poor in Spirit often comes to the rescue of those who realize their own present distance from those heights of vision from which Jesus spoke

Why Not You?

If I were a voice, a persuasive voice,
That could travel the wide world through,
I would fly on the beams of the morning light,
And speak to men with a gentle might,
And tell them to be true.
I would fly, I would fly over land and sea,
Wherever a human heart might be,
Telling a tale or singing a song,
In praise of the right, in blame of the wrong.

If I were a voice, a consoling voice,
I'd fly on the wings of the air;
The homes of sorrow and guilt I'd seek,
And calm and truthful words I'd speak,
To save them from despair.
I would fly, I would fly o'er the crowded town,
And fly like a happy sunlight down,
Into the hearts of suffering men,
And teach them to look up again.
If I were a voice, an immortal voice,
I would fly the earth around;
And wherever man unto error bowed I'd publish in tones both long and loud,
The truth's most joyful sound.
I would fly, I would fly on the wings of day,
Proclaiming peace on my world-wide way,
Bidding the saddened ones rejoice.
If I were a voice, an immortal voice, in the Sermon on the Mount. Such people see themselves as "poor in Spirit," that is without any gifts of spiritual insight or consciousness. They struggle with the deep sayings of the Bible and find them little more than words. They read that Jesus says they are blessed, yet they do not realize this blessedness. They perhaps do not even hunger and thirst for righteousness, but are merely blindly groping for some comfort and rest which eludes their grasp on earth, which no material possession or success has given. Christian Science is named so because it has come to point just such groping ones the way to the Master's rule. It gives them a simple, practical rule of thought and act which shall gradually clear away these clouds of mental darkness and reveal the ever-present light in which Jesus lived.

No one need despair now over what Mrs. Eddy calls "slight spiritual prospects" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 130). No matter how wicked or materialistic or hard of heart he may see himself to be, any one may at any moment, as Science and Health says again, "change" his "course and do right" (p. 253). Patient effort and exact obedience yielded to the study and practice of Christian Science as set forth in Mrs. Eddy's explanations of the Bible teaching enable any man to be born again, as Jesus commanded. Any man may begin just where he is, and his progress will be rapid in proportion as he recognizes his own need of cleansing.

And here is perhaps the deep secret of the blessedness Jesus affirmed for the "poor in Spirit." Those mortals who know and admit their own poverty of thought, their one need of spiritual riches, are those who, most humble before God, can receive most of Him. The self-righteous are long in reaching the kingdom of heaven. The rich and the poor alike need deeply to discern that there is none good, or true or worthy but God. All our righteousness is as filthy rags, compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us in reflecting the perfections of God's government or kingdom.

Best Motorman Was a College Graduate

A gentleman called upon the president of a street railway and said: "I've come in here and bothered you for the sake of settling a matter of opinion."

"Well, what is it?" asked the other.

"It's about education. I said to Thompson lately that any man who has been through a good college ought to be able to make a place for himself in the world. He said that you have a college graduate on this road who has never risen above the position of motorman, and probably won't. I said I didn't believe it; that I'd eat my hat if such a thing could actually happen."

The railroad president smiled genially. "I hope you've got a good edible hat," he remarked.

DURING the past season the state forestry department of Massachusetts has planted about 1,000,000 trees, mainly white pine and Norway spruce, upon 1000 acres of waste land located in a dozen different towns. The land has been bought by the state, and the owners have the privilege of buying it back at any time within 10 years upon payment of what the state has spent upon it. After 10 years the land is to become the absolute property of the commonwealth. This is the second year of this policy, and Massachusetts now owns 2000 acres of tree plantations. There is so much waste land available at a nominal price, and such ultimate good seems assured from this reforestation policy, that the work is likely to be carried on at a greater rate than 1000 acres each year. Much of the land is decided to the state without charge by the owners, who plan to take it back at the end of 10 years by paying for what the state has done.—Youths Companion.

Uncle Sam's Turn

Of all the home cartoons about "the colonel" as the press is rapidly learning to call him, there has been nothing more amusing than this one in Punch. Mr. Roosevelt stands on an overturned tub—possibly reminiscent of Othogenes' search—and is pounding with his emphatic fist on his open palm held in the face of a nonplussed Uncle Sam. The latter with his white beaver tipping off his head and both arms stretched out helplessly against a high board fence which forbids escape, shows all the consternation of a schoolboy. In the background Europa is leaning in over the fence in a nonchalant attitude and remarking pleasantly to Uncle Sam, "Your turn now; I've had mine."

The Business Situation

Much progress has been made recently in the readjustment of our commercial and industrial affairs to meet the new requirements of the times. Of chief importance are the lower prices for our cereal products. Corn is now selling at the lowest point that it has been in several years and forecasts the record-breaking crop that will be harvested. Wheat is lower, also, but the decline is not so marked. Other products such as copper, raw wool, steel billets, pig iron, rubber, crude oil and sugar have reacted considerably, and the lower basis of prices is certain to invite large undertakings in the near future. The decline was urgent because of the extremely high prices many of our commodities had been commanding, thus acting as a check upon enterprise. The lower prices are certain to result eventually in a material reduction in the cost of living. Man's proneness to seek some one to blame for the disturbed and unsettled business conditions has led many to indulge in hostile criticism of the government on account of the investigations that have been instituted with regard to the corporations and the new regulations and legislation for which the administration is responsible. Some important decisions affecting two or three of the largest corporations of the country will soon be handed down by the United States supreme court. One or two more cases of considerable magnitude which deal with the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law are yet to be tried. The question whether the result of these suits be favorable or unfavorable to the corporations affected should not serve either to distress or to harass business. Corporations whose affairs have been honestly administered have no need to fear scrutiny nor even a readjustment of their manner of doing business. With the stamp of the government's approval these same institutions will invite more confidence of the public than they ever before enjoyed, and their securities will be more urgently sought after as a consequence. The distrust now entertained by many with regard to corporations will largely have vanished when the latter are under more direct government control.

Much irregularity still prevails in many lines of industry, but the trend is still upward in most cases. A falling off in new orders for finished steel products is reported, but a change for the better is expected at any time. Gross earnings of the railways continue to show a good advance over last year, and, while net gains are not so great, there still has been an improvement in the aggregate. Railway officials entertain a more hopeful feeling as to what decisions may be reached by the interstate commerce commission with respect to the demands for increased freight rates.

Pending the outcome in these various matters it should not be wondered that business has been "marking time" for some months past. That a sounder and safer foundation is being laid for the future structure there can be no doubt. Politics is being gradually divorced from commercial life, and it is reasonable to hope that it will not be long before industrial activity will be stable in the face of politics and every other influence of that character.

WE SHALL probably hear with regard to the beginnings of constitutional government in China practically all of the criticisms that were passed upon the beginnings of constitutional government in Russia. From the point of view of the western European and the American, the steps thus far taken toward parliamentary freedom in Russia have been short and crude, but they have been steps nevertheless, and the remark that the Duma is a poor excuse for a popular national assembly carries with it the admission that the point of obtaining in Russia a national assembly of some kind has, at least, been attained. The Duma may not be compared with any modern, representative assembly of citizens delegated by the people to frame a country's laws, but the fact holds good that the Duma has existence, that it has a foothold, and that not only the popular but the official mind of Russia is being adjusted to it and to the idea for which it stands.

This is equally true of China. A year ago in that great country they inaugurated provincial assemblies as a concession to the popular demand for parliamentary government. One day this week they opened the imperial Senate, practically one house of a proposed Parliament. A lower house is on the program for 1915. It can escape neither comment nor ridicule that at the opening of the imperial Senate representatives of the press were excluded, and that, to all intents and purposes, the body is simply a council composed of persons known to be in agreement with the imperial government. However, this is a very small matter compared with the tremendous fact that in giving such a body official sanction the Chinese government has given recognition to the parliamentary system.

As in Russia so in China, the beginnings of representative government are at length a fact. What matters it that they are small and crude beginnings? The Magna Charta, the battle of Lexington, the storming of the Bastille, were all small and crude beginnings, but they have grown to great and well-rounded proportions. What is of more consequence, they are still growing.

The Idea and the Novel

W. J. LOCKE, the English novelist, now visiting the United States, has given an interviewer a simple recipe for the making of a work of fiction. First of all, he says substantially, it is necessary that the person who engages in the task shall begin with an idea. Around this everything else revolves, out of this everything else grows. The idea, we are led to infer, usually comprehends the hero or the heroine and the plot. What may, for convenience, be called the trimmings, come in later and can be put on at the rate of 300 words an hour. If the hero or the heroine is started nicely upon his or her way, the trimmings, we take it, may be put on more rapidly.

Indeed, with our boasted advancement in mechanical devices, it ought to be possible, once the idea is captured, to put on the trimmings much faster than in the days when everything had to be done by handwork. It is difficult to restrain a sigh when one hears, for instance, of Honore de Balzac working for three days and three nights without tasting food, of Charles Dickens locking himself up for days and nights at a time in his Swiss chalet, of Sir Walter Scott turning out copy like a printing press week in and week out—simply supplying trimmings which in these days could be gotten out by a secretary from shorthand notes on a typewriter in a fraction of the time.

Of course, it is, and it always will be, a question whether the handwork of the old school novelist was not, on the whole, better than the machine work of today. It is difficult to conceive of the detailed care taken by some of the novelists of the Victorian era until one examines specimen sheets of their manuscript. Hugo, Dickens, Thackeray, Collins, Reade, Eliot—all of the bright galaxy that shed luster upon the literature of the last century—were inspired as much by a genius for hard work as by a genius for invention. They were not content with loose methods. They left nothing to the stenographer and, obviously, less to the typewriter. Only finished workmanship gave them satisfaction.

Mr. Locke's own productions rather contradict than confirm the impression that might be gained from the interview referred to. True, he starts out with an idea. Some modern novelists do not take the trouble to wait for one. But Mr. Locke does more than this. He garbs the idea artistically before he commits it to the public. And therein he furnishes a good example for the would-be novelists. For the novel with an idea clumsily handled is scarcely preferable to the novel that has no idea at all.

THE whole nation will await with absorbing interest the deliberations of the supreme court when it convenes Monday. Commercial and industrial events may move quickly when certain decisions are handed down by the highest court in the land.

THE tentative candidates of the Democratic party in Massachusetts for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor may have to allow the permanent use of their names, since the plums are no longer attractive.

Who has not realized the folly of magnifying to undue importance some trivial matter? No one; for a man's sense of proportion constantly gives queer turns to events that, in the clear light of consistency, present meanings essentially different. The calmness, deliberate analysis of causes and effects, and judicial capacity that unfolds definite, irrefutable conclusions, present no harsh contrasts of thought, word or action. Intensity of feeling, unguarded by the modifying influence of reason, warps viewpoints, draws wrong ideas and paints intolerable colors over individual, family and social harmony. Not one alone, but many, feel compelled to bow obsequiously before the disturbing forcefulness of an excitement that has no legitimate excuse for recognition.

With what sagacity spoke the stoic Epictetus, counseling moderation in all things! No better rule for human conduct ever was devised. Its application to every form of activity, physical or mental, is perfectly apparent. Conformity to so available a doctrine would destroy, by elimination, the turbulence that is due to ignorance and makes for nothing but disquiet. Moderation is too powerful for excitement to withstand, and breathes into things a pleasant spirit that reveals itself to the delicately attuned intellect. Peace, always hovering near moderation, assists nobly in completing the latter's benevolent work.

Man, the superior of all other creatures of the earth, never should allow an unwise propensity to assume the control to which it has no claim; to usurp, by negation, the place accorded by right to real attributes. Excitement dwarfs the understanding and imposes a check on mental progress. As an inspiration to anger, the foe of all mankind, it knows no equal. No special aptitude is required to conceive of the undesirability of this antipode of what tends to make life like a smoothly flowing stream. Even a child can perceive, by comparison, how good is the calmness that elevates the thought, projects intelligence through the clouds of misunderstanding, and exercises an uplifting and enlightening influence on all with whom its possessor comes in contact.

WOULD New Yorkers enjoy traveling under the Hudson through lighted tubes as well as crossing the river on artistic bridges where daylight and pleasant views were available?

Important Work for the Supreme Court

WHEN the United States supreme court sits next Monday two vacancies will still exist in the body. It is understood that these will not be filled until the assembling of Congress in short session. For this reason it is quite likely that the Standard Oil, the tobacco trust and the corporation tax cases, regarded by the business interests of the country as among the most important ever brought to a hearing in the tribunal, will not be called up for reargument until after the December holidays.

Thus far there is no intimation as to whom the two appointees shall be, but since no doubt exists as to the disposition and determination of President Taft to contribute his share toward the maintenance of the highest traditions of the court, it is taken for granted that the new members will be jurists in whom the conservative opinion of the country may place all confidence.

To look for radical decisions in any of these cases would be to admit that the supreme court has in these recent times permitted itself to depart from its long-established custom of confining itself to the constitutional aspect of the questions that come before it for adjustment and settlement. Political parties triumph and are defeated, politicians rise and fall, administrations come and go, but the supreme court and the organic law which it was created to interpret continue from generation to generation, are not dependent on or influenced by the popular whims or popular mistakes of today, and need not have a care as to what may be thought of them in the present since they have only to be right to command justification in the future.

The Use of Moderation

IF GENERAL WOOD's proposition for compulsory military training for boys in the schools will aid the boys and facilitate national defense it is worth considering. While the disposition of nations is to rely on a show of armed force to guarantee them against molestation, the problem is to secure this military efficiency for the least possible outlay, without too great sacrifice of time from productive industry, and without subversion of civil ideals. If the main reliance for defense can be placed in a body of men who can acquire proficiency in arms without losing touch with home influences and without instituting a distinct caste the national welfare will be advanced, while one of the objections to military preparation will be answered.

If the rudiments of this efficiency can be acquired during the school years the method may serve a manifold purpose. Those are the play years, likewise the disciplinary years. Obedience, self-restraint, precision and power of concerted action, which military training inculcates, are admirable qualities of citizenship, even though the citizens may never be called to display them in active service. No time is more propitious for inculcating these lessons than the impressionable school years. Organized outdoor play, which encourages life in the open, activity, orderliness, democracy, respect for authority and for personal rights and other manly traits, now receives much attention. It is doubtful if these virtues can be inculcated more successfully than they can by military organization, or if any other than the military system can be made to develop a greater variety of talent.

Although it may not be as well recognized as it should be, certain very high ideals of personal character are part of the military tradition, and constitute part of the heritage of the young soldier when receiving his instruction in arms. One, the necessity of the absolute reliability of one's spoken or written word; and another, respect for the rights of personal property, the young recruit is taught are simply inviolable. Besides this, there is the wholesome influence that hearty and comradely associations give. All this would lead logically to prolonging school associations in the national guard. The promising cadet generally makes a good soldier. His officers take an interest in him, and try to help him in civil life. He makes a wide acquaintance that brings benefits. By minimizing the need for a large standing army this system might justify the proposal of General Wood to pay the national guardsman from 5 to 25 per cent of what the regular soldier receives.

Militarism could hardly be pleaded as an objection to such training of the youth by means of the trappings and methods of war. For "militarism" is "the giving of undue prominence to military training and to military glory; the maintenance of government by military force." It is believed that General Wood's idea is, not to give undue prominence to military training, but to apportion it uniformly among all the people, rather than to create a military class. Teaching the people the use of arms would seem to be a bulwark of democracy rather than of autocracy.

Men who have been under discipline work together more understandingly and efficiently, they comprehend and execute instructions more promptly. An honorable discharge with "character excellent, service honest and faithful" is a priceless governmental certificate of worth and a safeguard to employers, while the dexterity and resourcefulness that go with it are assets to the country's industries. The citizen soldier, like the Argentine reservist, whose acquaintance General Wood made this summer, leaves the colors with better appreciation of his country's responsibilities, profounder respect for its institutions and increased loyalty; in a word, a better citizen.

IF DR. COOK, the Lloyds and Professor Parker all failed to reach the summit of Mt. McKinley, an airship might ignore the difficulties they faced, in case the trip is really worth while.

The Assumed Franking Privilege

ADVICES from Washington state that the campaign committees of the Republican and the Democratic parties are sending out broadcast under the frank of certain representatives and senators a quantity of speeches made principally at the last session of Congress. This literature, mailed at the expense of the United States government, is intended to influence voters along certain lines favorable to either party whose welfare furnishes the excuse for disseminating the papers. If estimates are right fully 10,000,000 copies of sapient addresses already have helped to increase the work of postoffice employees and arouse the tender sensibilities of the overburdened rural free delivery carriers. But, cheerful to relate, the worst is over. Henceforth, no doubt, only a few hundreds of thousands or a million or two of speeches will be enough to inform unenlightened voters about the important issues.

In all due kindness the question again arises why so liberal an interpretation of the franking privilege is permitted. There is no sufficient excuse for such latitude, apparently, unless precedent performs that duty. It is a matter of common knowledge that the vast amount of franked mail sent out by members of Congress in the past was looked upon as contributing to postal deficits. In 1873 the franking privilege, originally granted to soldiers in 1776, was abolished because of its excessive use by members of Congress, but it was restored five years later; and in 1891 an act was passed allowing members and members-elect of Congress to mail free, under their frank, letters to any government officer, when addressed officially. Since then lawmakers gradually have assumed more latitude.

One may discover food for thought in the statement, frequently heard, that many of these documents, paid for usually by the government, never should have been printed at all, owing to their lack of intrinsic worth. On the other hand every congressman naturally wishes to please his constituents and seizes opportunities to do so. Not one in ten members of Congress stops to think that by mailing papers or documents for partisan or personal reasons he exercises what is not a public privilege. The average citizen pays the expense of franked matter.

Unquestionably, some limit will have to be imposed on the privilege eventually if Congress is allowed to increase numerically, or certain members fail to see wherein they exceed their rights. Meanwhile economy, consistency and all other considerations demand that honest discrimination shall be exercised in franking matter, until the rights of the people and the lawmakers shall balance.
